Theremin, Leon (real name Termen; Gallicized as Theremin, and pronounced tair-mén), Russian inventor of the space-controlled electronic instrument that bears his name; b. St. Petersburg, Aug. 15, 1896. He studied physics and astronomy at the Univ. there; also cello and theory. He continued his studies in physics at the Leningrad Physico-Technical Institute, where in 1919 he became director of the Laboratory of Electrical Oscillators. In 1920 he constructed the first electronic musical instrument, giving many demonstrations during the next 4 years in Russia. In 1927 he demonstrated his new instruments in Germany, France, and the U. S., where on Feb. 28, 1928, he obtained a patent for the 'Thereminovox.' On April 29, 1930, at Carnegie Hall, he presented a concert with an ensemble of 10 of his instruments, also introducing a space-controlled synthesis of color and music. On April 1, 1932, in the same hall, he introduced the first electrical symph. orch., conducted by A. Stoessel, including Theremin fingerboard and keyboard instruments. He also invented the Rhythmicon, for playing different rhythms simultaneously or separately (introduced by Henry Cowell); and an automatic musical instrument for playing directly from specially written musical scores (constructed for Percy Grainger). Until 1938 Theremin was director of his own research laboratory in N. Y.; then returned to Russia.

Thibaut, Jacques, celebrated French violinist; b. Bordeaux, Sept. 27, 1880; d. in an airplane crash near Mt. Cimet in the French Alps, Sept. 1, 1953, en route to French Indo-China. He was taught by his father, and then entered the class of Martin Marsick at the Paris Cons., winning 1st prize in 1896. Obligated to earn his living, he played the violin at the Café Rouge, where he was heard by the conductor Colonne, who offered him a position in his orch.; in 1898 he made his début as soloist (with Colonne), with such success that he was engaged for 54 concerts in Paris in the same season. Subsequently he appeared in all the musical centers of Europe, and from 1903 visited America numerous times. With his 2 brothers, a pianist and a cellist, he formed a trio, which had some success; but this was discontinued when he joined Alfred Cortot and Pablo Casals in a famous trio. His playing was notable for its warmth of expressive tone and fine dynamics; his interpretations of Beethoven ranked very high, but he was particularly authoritative in French music. — Cf. J.-P. Dorian, ed., Un Violon parle; souvenirs de Jacques Thibaut (Paris, 1947).

Thibaut, Geneviève (Comtesse de Cham-bure), French musicologist; b. Neuilly-sur-Seine, May 20, 1902. She studied at the Sorbonne, Paris, under André Pirro; then became engaged in business, but continued her great interest in musical research; assembled a fine private library, containing rare editions and MSS of the Renaissance, which she opened to research scholars; also made a collection of old instruments; initiated the Société de Musique d'Autrefois, for the purpose of presenting concerts of old music performed on old instruments; also sponsored publication of old music; from 1955, lecturer at the Sorbonne. Her own contributions to musicology (usually in collaboration with other scholars) include: Poètes et musiciens du XV<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1924; with E. Droz); Trois chansonniers français du XV<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1927; with A. Pirro, E. Droz, and Y. Rokseth); Bibliographie des poésies de P. de Ronsard mises en musique au XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1941; with L. Perceau); Bibliographie des éditions d'Adrien Le Roy et Robert Ballard (Paris, 1955; with F. Lesure); also wrote articles for European and American musical periodicals.

Thibaut IV, King of Navarre and Count of Champagne, one of the most notable of the trouvères; b. Troyes, 1201; d. Pamplona, July 8, 1253. 63 of his songs were publ. by Bishop La Ravallière in 1742 as Poésies du Roi de Navarre; the transcription of the melodies is very faulty. In Pierre Aubry's ed. of the Chansonnier de l'Arsenal (Paris, 1909) there are 59 melodies by Thibaut transcribed in modern notation; see also the examples in J. Beck's transcription of the Chansonnier Cangé ('Les Chansonniers des Troubadours et des Trouvères'), 4 vols. (Philadelphia, 1927-38), and

A. Schering, Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (1931), p. 7. —Cf. P. Aubry, Trouvères and Troubadours (English transl., N. Y., 1914, p. 122).

Thibaut (tê-boh'), Anton Friedrich Justus, b. Hameln, Jan. 4, 1774; d. Heidelberg, March 28, 1840. He studied law, and from 1806 was prof. of jurisprudence in Heidelberg, also director of a singing club there; wrote Über Reinheit der Tonkunst 1825; often republ.; new ed., with biography of Thibaut by R. Heuler, 1907; in English as On Purity in Musical Art, 1877). His valuable music library (catalogue publ. in 1842) was acquired by the Hofbibliothek in Munich. —Cf. E. Baumstark, A. F. J. Thibaut (Leipzig, 1841).

Thiel, Carl, German editor and pedagogue; b. Klein-Ols, Silesia, July 9, 1862; d. Bad Wildungen, July 23, 1939. Pupil of the Königlich Institut für Kirchenmusik and of Bargiel's master class at the Akademie der Künste. On a government stipend he traveled in Italy; won the Mendelssohn prize in 1894, and became organist at the Sebastiankirche in Berlin; later teacher at the Institut für Kirchenmusik, of which he was director from 1922-27 (in 1924 it became the Akademie für Kirchen- und Schulmusik). In 1930 he became director of the Kirchenmusikschule in Regensburg. He ed. old a cappella music; composed Masses, motets, cantatas. —Cf. C. A. Preising, Carl Thiel (Regensburg, 1951).

Thiele (tê'-le), (Johann Friedrich) Louis, German organist; b. Quedlinburg, Nov. 18, 1816; d. Berlin, Sept. 17, 1848. He studied with A. W. Bach at the Royal Institute for Church Music at Berlin; from 1839 was organist of the Parochialkirche. He published concert pieces, variations, preludes, etc., for organ.

Thieme (tê'-me), or Thiémé, Friedrich, German music pedagogue; date of birth not known; d. Bonn, June, 1802. He taught at Paris (1780-92); then at Bonn. He publ. Éléments de musique pratique (2nd ed., Paris, 1783); a method, Principes abrégés de musique for beginners on the violin; also for piano; Nouvelle théorie sur les différents mouvements des airs . . . avec le projet d'un nouveau chronomètre (1801); and several books of violin duos.

Thienen, Marcel van, French composer; b. Paris, Oct. 3, 1922. He studied at the Paris Cons., graduating as a violinist in 1941. In his compositions, he is influenced by Erik Satie. Among his works are an operafarce, Le Ferroviaire (1951); Brasserie for orch. (1947); Petite Suite digestive for orch. (1951); piano pieces; songs.

Thierfelder (têr'-fêl-der), Albert (Wilhelm), German composer and writer on music; b. Mülhausen, Thuringia, April 30, 1846; d. Rostock, Jan. 6, 1924. He studied at Leipzig Univ. 1865-69, and at the same time with Hauptmann, Richter, and Paul. 1870-87, singing teacher and cantor at Brandenburg; from 1887, music director and prof. at Rostock Univ., succeeding Kretschmar; received title of 'Professor' in 1898.—He publ. 'Altgriechische Musik: Sammlung von Gesängen aus dem klassischen Alterthume vom 5. bis 1. Jahrhundert vor Christus nach den überlieferten Melodien mit griechischem und deutschem Texte nebst einleitenden Vorbemerkungen herausgegeben und für den Konzertvortrag eingerichtet' (3 vols.; Leipzig, 1899, 1900, 1919), being a collection of the remains of ancient Greek music; also System der altgriechischen Instrumentalnotenschrift (1897).

Thiman, Eric Harding, English music educator, organist, and composer; b. Ashford, Kent, Sept. 12, 1900. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music; was prof. there from 1930 (having obtained the degree of Doctor of Music in 1927). —Publications: A Guide to Elementary Harmony (London, 1941); Practical Free Counterpoint (London, 1947); Musical Form for Examination Students (1951); wrote a number of organ and choral works and some light orch. music (Dance for a Children's Party; Stirling Castle March, etc.).

Thimus (tê'-mus), Albert, Freiherr von, German writer on music; b. Aachen, May 21, 1806; d. Cologne, Nov. 6, 1878. He publ. Die harmonikale Symbolik des Altertums (2 vols., 1868-76). As an introduction to this work, R. Hasenclever wrote Die Grundzüge der esoterischen Harmonik des Altertums (1870). —Cf. R. Haase, Der Aachener Albert von Thimus, in C. M. Brand, ed., Beiträge zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Aachen (Cologne, 1954).

Thiriet (tê-ryä'), Maurice, French composer; b. Meulan, May 2, 1906. He studied with Charles Koechlin and Roland-Manuel; was engaged in radio work in Paris; also worked in the music division of a cinema company. —Works: Le Bourgeois de Falaise, opéra-bouffe (Paris, June 21, 1937); La véridique histoire du docteur, opéra-bouffe (1937); La Nuit vénitienne, ballet (Paris Opéra, March 17, 1939); Œdipe-Roi, incidental music to Jean Cocteau's drama (1942); La Précaution inutile, ballet on themes by Rossini (1946); L'Œuf à la coque, ballet (1949); Le Livre pour Jean, symph. suite (Paris, Dec. 20, 1931); Rapsodie sur des thèmes incas, for orch. (Lyons, Jan. 20, 1936); Afriques, for orch. (1949); Le Serment de l'athlète, for chorus and orch. (1948); Saint-Pierre et le jongleur, for chorus and orch. (1950); Blues de l'horloge, for violin and piano; songs; piano pieces. — Cf. Jean Solar, Maurice Thiriet (Paris, 1958).

Thoinan (twäh-nähn'), Ernest, French writer on music (pen-name of Antoine-Ernest Roquet); b. Nantes, Jan. 23, 1827; d. Paris, May 26, 1894. A businessman in Paris, and a thoughtful student of music. He collected a fine music library. — Publ. La Musique à Paris en 1862 (1863); L'Opéra Les Troyens au Père Lachaise (1863; a satire); Les Origines de la chapelle-musique des souverains de France (1864); Les Origines de l'opéra français (1886; with Ch. Nuitter); Déploration de Guillaume Créatin sur le trépas de Jean Ockeghem (1864); Maugars, célèbre joueur de viole (1865); Antoine de Cousu et les singulières destinées de son livre rarissime 'La Musique universelle' (1866); Curiosités musicales et autres trouvées dans les œuvres de Michel Coysard (1866); Un Bisaïeul de Molière; recherches sur les Mazuel, musiciens des XVI<sup>e</sup> et XVII<sup>e</sup> siècles (1878); Louis Constantin, roi des violons (1878); Notes bibliographiques sur la guerre musicale des Gluckistes et Piccinistes (1878); Les Hotteterre et les Chédeville (1894); also an annotated ed. of the Entretien des Musiciens [1643] by Annibal Gantez (1878).

Thomas (toh-müh'), Ambroise, French composer; b. Metz, Aug. 5, 1811; d. Paris, Feb. 12, 1896. He entered the Paris Cons. in 1828; his teachers there were Zimmerman and Kalkbrenner (piano) and Lesueur (composition); in 1829 he won the 1st prize for piano playing, in 1830 for harmony, and in 1832 the Grand Prix de Rome with the dramatic cantata Hermann et Ketty. After 3 years in Italy, and a visit to Vienna in 1836, he returned to Paris, and applied himself with great energy to the composition of operas. In 1851 he was elected to the Académie. In 1871, he became director of the Paris Cons., as successor to Auber (disregarding the brief incumbency of Salvador Daniel, adherent of the Paris Commune, who was killed in battle on May 23, 1871). As composer of melodious operas in the French style, he was second only to Gounod; his masterpiece was Mignon, based on Goethe's Wilhelm Meister (Opéra-Comique, Nov. 17, 1866); this opera became a mainstay of the repertory all over the world; it had nearly 2,000 performances in less than 100 years at the Opéra-Comique alone. Scarcely less successful was his Shakespearean opera Hamlet, produced shortly after Mignon (Paris Opéra, March 9, 1868). The complete list of his operas (all produced in Paris) includes: La double Echelle (Aug. 23, 1837); Le Perruquier de la régence (March 30, 1838); Le Panier fleuri (May 6, 1839); Carlina (Feb. 24, 1840); Le Comte de Carmagnola (April 19, 1841); Le Guerillero (June 22, 1842); Angélique et Médor (May 10, 1843); Mina, ou le Ménage à trois (Oct. 10, 1843); Le Caid (Jan. 3, 1849); Le Songe d'une nuit d'été (April 20, 1850); Raymond, ou Le Secret de la reine (June 5, 1851); La Tonelli (March 30, 1853); La Cour de Célimène (April 11, 1855); Psyché (Jan. 26, 1857); Le Carnaval de Venise (Dec. 9, 1857); Le Roman d'Elvire (Feb. 4, 1860); Mignon (Nov. 17, 1866); Hamlet (March 9, 1868); Gille et Gillotin (April 22, 1874); Françoise de Rimini (April 14, 1882). He contributed an act to a ballet, La Gipsy (Opéra, Jan. 28, 1839), and wrote the ballets Betty (Opéra, July 10, 1846) and La Tempête (Opéra, June 26, 1889); a Messe solennelle (1857) and other sacred works; some chamber music; songs. — Cf. A. Hervey, Masters of French Music (London, 1894); J. Simon, Ambroise Thomas, in the 'Revue de Paris' (March-April, 1896); H. Delaborde, Notice sur la vie et les œuvres d'Ambroise Thomas (Paris, 1896); C. Bellaigue, Études musicales et nouvelles silhouettes des musiciens (Paris, 1898; in English, 1899); E. Destranges, Ambroise Thomas, in the 'Revue Musicale de Lyon' (1911, p. 97); H. de Curzon, Ambroise Thomas (Paris, 1921).

Thomas Aquinas (Saint), b. Roccasecca, near Aquino, Italy, 1227; d. Fossa Nuova, near Terracina, March 7, 1274. This famed theologian and scholastic philosopher entered the Dominican order in 1245. In 1263 Pope Urban IV commissioned him to compose a communion service, which contains the memorable numbers Lauda Sion (Corpus Christi sequence) and Pange lingua, Sacra sollemnis, Verbum supernum, and Adoro te (hymns). An extended chapter on music is contained in his Summa Theologica (II, quaestio XLI, art. 2). See D. Thomas Aqu-natis de arte musica nunc primum ex codice bibl. univ. Ticinensis ed. illustr. Sac. Guarinus Amelli (1880). — Cf. G. Amelli, S. Tommaso e la musica (1876); C. F. Bellet, St. Th. d' Aquin (Paris, 1902); J. L. Callahan, A Theory of Esthetics According to the Principles of St. Th. Aquinas (dissertation, Catholic Univ., Washington, D. C., 1927).

Thomas, Arthur Goring, English composer; b. Ratton Park, Sussex, Nov. 20, 1850; d. London, March 20, 1892. He was a pupil of Émile Durand in Paris (1874-77), and of Arthur Sullivan and Ebenezer Prout at the Royal Academy of Music in London; later studied orchestration in Berlin with Max Bruch. He was mainly interested in creating English operas in the best German tradition; his operas were performed in England and Germany, and he had many important supporters for his art in England, but his music totally lacked vitality, and became of only antiquarian interest after his death. In the last year of his life he suffered from a mental illness. — Operas: The Light of the Harem (partial performance, London, Nov. 7, 1879); Esmeralda (London, March 26, 1883; also in German, produced in Berlin, Hamburg, and Cologne); Nadeshda (London, April 16, 1885); The Golden Web (posthumous; Liverpool, Feb. 15, 1893); he further wrote a choral ode, The Sun Worshipers (Norwich Festival, 1881); the cantata The Swan and the Skylark (posthumous; Birmingham Festival, 1894; orchestrated by C. V. Stanford); a vocal scene, Hero and Leander (1880); Out of the Deep, anthem for soprano solo, chorus, and orch. (1878); some chamber music; songs.

Thomas (toh'-mahs), Christian Gottfried, German composer and writer on music; b. Wehrsdorf, near Bautzen, Feb. 2, 1748; d. Leipzig, Sept. 12, 1806. He published Praktische Beiträge zur Geschichte der Musik . . . (1778; chiefly for the music trade); Unparteiische Kritik der vorzüglichsten seit 3 Jahren in Leipzig aufgeführten . . . Kirchenmusiken, Concerte und Opern (1798, 1799); and 'Musikalische kritische Zeitschrift' (1805; 2 vols.). His compositions include a Gloria for 3 choirs, with instruments; a cantata; quartets.

Thomas (toh'-mähs), Eugen, conductor; b. Surabaya, Java, Jan. 30, 1863; d. Schloss Orth, near Gmunden, Aug., 1922. In 1878 he went to Delft, Holland, where he studied engineering, and at the same time music; 1882-84, conductor of the orchestral society

'Euterpe'; 1884-85, conductor of 'St. Cäcilie' (choral and orchestral society) in Semarang, Java; from 1885-87 he completed his music studies at the Vienna Cons.; 1887, theater-conductor in Pilsen; 1888, Kapellmeister of the German opera, Groningen; settled in Vienna in 1889 as pianist and composer; from 1905 director of the choral classes at the Cons.; founder (1902) and conductor of the 'Wiener a cappella Chor.' — Wrote Die Instrumentation der 'Meistersinger' von R. Wagner (2 vols., 1899; 2nd ed., 1907); and the Wiener Chorschule (1907).

Thomas (toh'-mahs), Gustav Adolf, German organist and composer; b. Reichenau, near Zittau, Oct. 13, 1842; d. St. Petersburg, May 27, 1870. He studied at the Leipzig Cons.; was organist at the Reformed Church in Leipzig; then succeeded H. Stiehl as organist at St. Peter's in St. Petersburg. He wrote excellent works for organ: Konzert-Fantasie; Sechs Trios über bekannte Choralmelodien; Fuga eroica; études; piano pieces; ed. Bach's Kunst der Fuge and Handel's organ concertos.

Thomas, John, celebrated Welsh harpist; b. Bridgend, Glamorganshire, March 1, 1826; d. London, March 19, 1913. He also used the name Aptommas (or Apthomas; i.e. son of Thomas) and Pencerdd Gwalia (Chief of Minstrels, bardic name bestowed on him at the Aberdare Eisteddfod in 1861). He entered the Royal Academy at 14; studied harp with Chatterton, and upon the latter's death in 1872, succeeded him as Harpist to the Queen. He gave in London a series of annual concerts of Welsh music; the first took place at St. James's Hall, July 4, 1862, with a chorus of 400, and 20 harps. He was also a leader of the Eisteddfod festivals. He wrote 2 harp concertos; the dramatic cantata Llewelyn (1863) and The Bride of Neath Valley, a Welsh scene (1866); publ. a collection of Welsh melodies (1862) and a History of the Harp (London, 1859); made transcriptions for harp of many classical pieces. His brother, Thomas Thomas (1829-1913), also a harpist, went to America in 1895, eventually settling in Ottawa.

Thomas, John Charles, American baritone; b. Meyersdale, Pa., Sept. 6, 1891. He studied at the Peabody Cons. in Baltimore; from 1913 sang in musical comedy in N. Y.; then entered the concert field, in which he achieved outstanding success. He also sang in opera; was a member of the Théâtre de La Monnaie in Brussels (1925-28); later at Covent Garden, London (début as Valentin in Faust). In 1930 he appeared with the Chicago Opera Co.; on Feb. 2, 1934, he sang the role of the elder Germont in La Traviata, at his first appearance with the Metropolitan Opera; he continued to be on its roster until 1943; then settled in California.

Thomas, John Rogers, baritone and composer of songs; b. Newport, Wales, March 26, 1829; d. New York, April 5, 1896. He was a lawyer's clerk in London; came to America in 1849, and acquired considerable success as an oratorio singer. A number of his songs enjoyed tremendous popularity in their day (The Mother's Prayer, The Cottage by the Sea, Beautiful Isle of the Sea, Must we then meet as strangers, etc.). He publ. an operetta, Diamond Cut Diamond; a children's cantata, The Picnic; and much sacred music.

Thomas, Kurt, German composer and organist; b. Tönning, Schleswig-Holstein, May 25, 1904. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with R. Teichmüller (piano), M. Ludwig (theory), H. Grabner (composition), and Karl Straube (organ). From 1925 to 1934 he taught theory at the Leipzig Cons.; from 1934 to 1939 was prof. at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik; from 1939 to 1945 was at Frankfurt; in 1947 was appointed prof. at the music academy in Detmold, where he remained until 1955. In 1956 he became cantor of the Thomaskirche in Leipzig. Among his works are a Mass (1924); Psalm 137 (1925); Goethe Cantata (1928); cantata Jerusalem, du hochgebaute Stadt (1929); Christmas Oratorio (1931); Resurrection Oratorio (1934); numerous choruses a cappella (sacred and secular); piano concerto (1937); 2 violin sonatas (1925, 1933); cello sonata (1927); 3 suites for school orch. Publ. Lehrbuch der Chorleitung (5th ed., Leipzig, 1948).

Thomas, Theodore, renowned conductor; b. Esens, East Friesland, Germany, Oct. 11, 1835; d. Chicago, Jan. 4, 1905. Taught by his father, a violinist, he played in public at 6. In 1845 the family went to New York, where Thomas soon began to play for dances, weddings, and in theaters, helping to support the family; in 1851 he made a concert tour as soloist, and in 1853 he joined Jullien's orch. on the latter's visit to N. Y., later touring the country with Jenny Lind, Grisi, Sontag, Mario, etc. He became a member of the N. Y. Philh. Society in 1854. In 1855 began the Mason and Thomas chamber-music soirées (cf. William Mason).

Up to 1861 he played in various opera-orchestras, sometimes conducting. In 1862 he organized an orch. for 'Symphony Soirées' at Irving Hall, New York, which were continued until 1878 (after 1872 in Steinway Hall); in 1866 he started summer concerts in Terrace Garden, removing in 1868 to Central Park Garden. The influence of these enterprises on musical culture in New York was enormous; Thomas' programs attained European celebrity. The first concert tour with the orch. was made in 1869, with 54 players, and for nine consecutive years he made annual tours of the East and Middle West. In 1873 he established the famous Cincinnati Biennial Festival, which he conducted till his death. He also founded the Cincinnati College of Music, of which he was president and director from 1878-80, having given up his own orch. in New York and the conductorship of the N. Y. Philh. Society (1877-78) to accept this post. After his resignation he returned to New York, where he immediately reorganized his own orch. and was re-elected conductor of the Philh. Society and the Brooklyn Philh. Orch. (having been conductor of the latter in 1862-63, 1866-68, and 1873-78). Besides conducting these orchestral bodies, he was at different times director of several choruses; from 1885-87 he was conductor and artistic director of the American Opera Co. In 1891 he settled permanently in Chicago as conductor of the Chicago Symph. Orch. In recognition of Thomas' distinguished services a permanent home, Orchestra Hall, was built by popular subscription, and formally opened in Dec., 1904, with a series of festival concerts, which were the last directed by him; a cold contracted during a rehearsal developed into pneumonia, which after a few days resulted fatally. After his death the name of the orch. was changed to 'Theodore Thomas Orch.'; in 1913 the original title was officially resumed. —The influence of Thomas upon the musical development of the U. S. has been strong and lasting. A severe, almost autocratic drillmaster, his splendid musicianship and lofty idealism invariably commanded the respect and good will of those under his direction. As an arranger of homogeneous, artistic programs he has never been excelled. The list of novelties produced by him is enormous; an indefatigable apostle of Wagner, Liszt, and Brahms, he also played for the first time in America many of the larger works of Tchaikovsky, Dvořák, Rubinstein, Bruckner, Goldmark, Saint-Saëns, Cowen, Stanford, Raff, etc.; he introduced Richard Strauss to America (Symph. in F minor, Dec. 13, 1884) before that composer had become known even in his own country. — Cf. T. T. A Musical Autobiography, ed. by G. P. Upton (2 vols.; Chicago, 1905); R. F. Thomas (his wife), Memoirs of T. T. (N. Y., 1911); C. E. Russell, The American Orchestra and T. T. (N. Y., 1927); Talks About Beethoven's Symphonies, by T. T. and F. A. Stock (N. Y., 1930); E. T. Rice, T. and Central Park Garden, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1940); A. Loft, Richard Wagner, T. T., and the American Centennial, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1951). See also P. A. Otis, The Chicago Symphony Orchestra (Chicago, 1925).

Thomas (Thomas-San Galli), Wolfgang Alexander, German writer on music; b. Badenweiler, Sept. 18, 1874; d. Baden-Baden, June 14, 1918. Studied philosophy, history, and law in Freiburg, Bonn, Munich, and Marburg (Dr. jur., 1898); 1899-1908, viola player of the 'Süddeutsches Streich-Quartett' in Freiburg; 1908-11, ed. of the 'Rheinische Musik- und Theaterzeitung' in Cologne; then in Berlin as writer. In 1898 he married the pianist Helene San Galli. — Works: Sein oder Nichtsein? Aphorismen über Ethisches und Ästhetisches (1905); Joh. Brahms. Eine musikpsychologische Studie (1905); Musik und Kultur (1908); Musikalische Essays (1908); Die 'unsterbliche Geliebte' Beethovens, Amalie Sebald (1909; attempt to prove that the famous letter was addressed to Amalie Sebald); Beethoven und die unsterbliche Geliebte. Amalie Sebald, Goethe, Therese Brunschwic, und Anderes (1910); Mozart-Schatzkästlein (1911); Joh. Brahms (1912; biography); L. van Beethoven (1913; biography). Edited Beethovens Briefe (1910; selection with commentary) and Beethovens Briefe an geliebte Frauen (1913).

Thomé (toh-mä'), Francis (baptismal names Joseph-François-Luc), French composer; b. Port Louis, Island of Mauritius, Oct. 18, 1850; d. Paris, Nov. 16, 1909. He went to Paris as a youth, and studied at the Cons. with Marmontel (piano) and Duprato (theory). He became a successful teacher; wrote the operas, Le Caprice de la Reine (Cannes, 1892) and Le Château de Königsberg (Paris, 1896); the ballets, Djemmah (1886), La Folie parisienne (1900), etc.; the religious mystery play L'Enfant Jésus (1891); 2 symphonic odes, Hymne à la nuit and Vénus et Adonis; etc. But he is remembered chiefly for his piano pieces, of which Simple aveu and Les Lutins became very popular.

Thompson, John Sylvanus, American pianist and teacher; b. Williamstown, Pa., March 8, 1889. He was educated at the Leefson-Hille Cons., Philadelphia, and the Univ. of Pennsylvania. He traveled through the U. S. as a concert pianist; also appeared in London and Berlin. In 1917 he settled in Kansas City. He publ. much teaching material, including the very successful Modern Course for Piano (Something New Every Lesson) (Cincinnati, 1936; 6 vols.); The Adult Preparatory Piano Book (Cincinnati, 1943); Melody All the Way (Cincinnati, 1949-51; 7 vols.; last 2 vols. are subtitled Supplementary Piano Course).

Thompson, John Winter, American organist and composer; b. Leland, Mich., Dec. 21, 1867; d. St. Charles, Ill., March 8, 1951. After graduating from Oberlin Cons. (1890) he went to Germany, where he studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Schreck. Returning to the U. S., he became teacher of organ at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill. He publ. organ works, motets, and anthems; also A Course in Harmony (Boston, 1923).

Thompson, Oscar, American music critic and editor; b. Crawfordsville, Ind., Oct. 10, 1887; d. New York, July 3, 1945. He was educated at the Univ. of Washington, Seattle; studied music with G. Campanari and others; took up journalism and in 1919 joined the staff of 'Musical America,' later becoming associate ed., and finally editor (1936-43). He was music critic for the N. Y. 'Evening Post' (1928-34); from 1937 to his death was music critic for the N. Y. 'Sun' (succeeding W. J. Henderson). In 1928 he established the first class in music criticism in the U. S., at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia; also gave courses at the N. Y. College of Music. In 1939 he brought out 'The International Cyclopaedia of Music and Musicians' in one vol. of more than 2,000 pages, with feature articles by eminent authorities. After Thompson's death, N. Slonimsky took charge of the 'Cyclopedia' as editor (from 4th ed., 1946, on). Thompson publ. the following books: Practical Musical Criticism (1934); How to Understand Music (1935); Tabulated Biographical History of Music (1936); The American Singer (1937); Debussy, Man and Artist (1937); ed. Plots of the Operas (1940) and Great Modern Composers (1941), both vols. being extracts from the 'Cyclopedia.'

Thompson, Randall, eminent American composer; b. New York, April 21, 1899. He was educated at Harvard Univ. (B. A., 1920; M. A., 1922); his teachers there were Walter Spalding, E. B. Hill, and A. T. Davison; he also studied with Ernest Bloch. From 1922 to 1925 he held a fellowship at the American Academy in Rome; won a Guggenheim Fellowship twice (1929, 1930). From 1927 to 1929, and again in 1936-37, he was assistant prof. of music at Wellesley College; from 1937 to 1939, prof. of music at the Univ. of California, Berkeley; from 1939 to 1941, he was director of the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia; then was head of the music division of the School of Fine Arts of the Univ. of Virginia (1941-46); and prof. of music at Princeton Univ. (1946-48). In 1948 he was appointed to the faculty of Harvard Univ. He excels in vocal composition; his Alleluia for chorus a cappella and The Testament of Freedom, to words by Thomas Jefferson, scored for men's voices with piano or orch., have attained exceptional success; of his works for orch., the most popular is the 2nd symph. In another genre are the humorous choral pieces Americana, to texts culled from the American press, and originally publ. in the 'American Mercury.'—Compositions: opera Solomon and Bulkis (radio performance, N. Y., March 29, 1942; 1st stage production, Cambridge, Mass., April 14, 1942); incidental music to The Grand Street Follies (N. Y., June 25, 1926); incidental music to The Straw Hat (N. Y., Oct. 14, 1926); for orch.: Pierrot and Gothurnus (Rome, May 17, 1923, composer conducting), The Piper at the Gates of Dawn, symph. prelude (Rome, May 27, 1924, composer conducting), symph. No. 1 (Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 20, 1930), symph. No. 2 (Rochester, March 24, 1932), symph. No. 3 (N. Y., May 15, 1949), A Trip to Nahant, fantasy for orch. (Philadelphia, March 18, 1955), Jazz Poem, for piano and orch. (Rochester, Nov. 27, 1928, composer at the piano); for chorus: 5 Odes of Horace (1924), Pueri Hebraeorum, for women's voices a cappella (1928), Rosemary, for women's voices a cappella (1929), Americana, for chorus and piano or orch. (1932), The Peaceable Kingdom, for chorus a cappella (1936), Tarantella, for men's voices and piano (1937), The Lark in the Morn., for chorus a cappella (1938), Alleluia, for chorus a cappella (1940), The Testament of Freedom, for men's voices and piano or orch. (Univ. of Virginia, April 13, 1943; numerous subsequent performances by major choral organizations and orchestras); The Wind in the Willows, for string quartet (1924); suite for oboe, clarinet, and viola (1940); string quartet (1941); piano pieces; several song cycles. Publ. the book,

College Music (N. Y., 1935). —Cf. Quincy Porter, Randall Thompson, in 'Modern Music' (vol. 19; 1942); Elliot Forbes, The Music of Randall Thompson, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1949).

Thomson (töhn-söhn'), César, eminent Belgian violinist; b. Liège, March 17, 1857; d. Lugano, Aug. 21, 1931. He entered the Liège Cons. at the age of 7, winning the Gold Medal at 11; he subsequently studied with Vieuxtemps, Léonard, Wieniawski, and Massart. For several years he was household musician to a wealthy Russian patron of arts, Baron Paul von Derwies, at Lugano; in 1879 he became concertmaster of Bilse's orch. in Berlin; in 1882 he became prof. of violin at the Liège Cons.; he left Liège for Brussels in 1898, when he succeeded Ysaÿe as prof. of violin at the Brussels Cons.; there he founded a celebrated string quartet (with Lamoureux, Vanhout, and Jacobs). In 1914 he settled in Paris as prof. at the Cons. In 1924 he visited America; taught at the Cons. of Ithaca, N. Y., and at the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y., returning to Europe in 1927. He was a famous violin teacher, emphasizing the perfection of technical and expressive performance, rather than bravura. He made arrangements for the violin of various works by early Italian composers.

Thomson, George, Scottish collector of folksongs; b. Limekilns, Dunfermline, March 4, 1757; d. Leith, Feb. 18, 1851. For 50 years (1780-1830) he was secretary to the Board of Trustees for the Encouragement of Arts and Manufactures in Scotland. An ardent collector of Scotch, Welsh, and Irish melodies, he issued a series of vols. containing authentic melodies, with piano accompaniments and instrumental arrangements by the most celebrated musicians of his time, including Beethoven, Haydn, Pleyel, and Koželuh. Each song had, in accordance with his plan, a prelude, coda, and ad libitum parts throughout (for violin, or flute, or cello). The collections are: A Select Collection of Original Scottish Airs . . . (London, 6 vols.; vol. I, 1793; vol. II, 1798; vol. III, 1799; vol. IV, 1802; vol. V, 1818-26; vol. VI, 1841); Collection of the Songs of R. Burns, Sir W. Scott, etc. (London, 1822; 6 vols.); Select Collection of Original Welsh Airs . . . (London, 1809; 3 vols.); Select Collection of Original Irish Airs (London, 1814-16; 2 vols.); 20 Scottish Melodies (Edinburgh, 1839). —Cf. J. C. Hadden, George Thomson, the Friend of Burns, His Life and Correspondence (London, 1898; contains full and interesting details, notably Beethoven's letters); R. Aldrich, Beethoven and George Thomson, in 'Music & Letters' (April, 1927); Karl Geiringer, Haydn and the Folksong of the British Isles, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1949); C. B. Oldman, Beethoven's Variations on National Themes, in 'Music Review' (Feb., 1951).

Thomson, John, Scotch composer and writer on music; b. Sprouston, Roxburgh, Oct. 28, 1805; d. Edinburgh, May 6, 1841. He studied in Leipzig with Schnyder von Wartensee, and became an intimate of Mendelssohn, Schumann, and Moscheles. In 1839 he was appointed the first Reid prof. of music at Edinburgh Univ. At the 3rd concert given by the 'Edinburgh Professional Society' (Feb., 1837), an analytical program was issued by Thomson, then conductor; this is the first recorded instance of the use of such programs. He composed 2 operas, Hermann, or The Broken Spear (London, Oct. 27, 1834) and The Shadow on the Wall (London, April 20, 1835); also wrote incidental music to Walter Scott's The House of Aspen (Edinburgh, Dec. 19, 1829).

Thomson, Virgil, American composer and writer on music; b. Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 25, 1896. He graduated from Harvard Univ. in 1922; studied piano with H. Gebhard and organ with W. Goodrich in Boston; composition with Rosario Scalero in N. Y. and with Nadia Boulanger in Paris. He was organist at King's Chapel in Boston (1922-1923); in 1925 he went to Paris for a prolonged stay; there he established friendly contacts with composers of the avant-garde, as well as with modern painters and writers; his association with Gertrude Stein was particularly significant in the development of his esthetics. In the formulation of his musical ideas, he was much influenced by the example of Erik Satie, adopting an eclectic style, which he brought to a fine point; under the characteristic Parisian persiflage, there is a serious intent and considerable achievement. His most famous work is the opera Four Saints in Three Acts, to a text by Gertrude Stein, in which the deliberate confusion wrought by the author of the play (there are actually 4 acts and more than a dozen saints, some of them in duplicate) and the composer's almost solemn, hymn-like treatment, create a hilarious modern operabuffa. It was first produced at Hartford, Conn., on Feb. 8, 1934, under the auspices of the 'Society of Friends and Enemies of Modern Music' of which Thomson was director (1934-37); many performances followed in the U. S., and also in Europe. Another curiosity among his compositions is a series of musical portraits, scored for various instrumental ensembles, purporting to paint in tones actual people, famous and obscure. In 1940 Thomson was appointed music critic of the N. Y. 'Herald Tribune'; resigned in 1954 to devote himself to composition and conducting. Besides Four Saints in Three Acts, he wrote another opera, to words by Gertrude Stein, The Mother of Us All, on the life of the American suffragist Susan B. Anthony (N. Y., May 7, 1947); a ballet, Filling Station (Hartford, Conn., Jan. 6, 1938); for orch.: Symph. on a Hymn Tune (1928; N. Y., Feb. 22, 1945, composer conducting); symph. No. 2 (Seattle, Nov. 17, 1941); The Seine at Night (Kansas City, Feb. 24, 1948); Wheatfield at Noon (Louisville, Dec. 7, 1948); cello concerto (Philadelphia, March 24, 1950); 5 Songs for voice and orch., after William Blake (Louisville, Feb. 6, 1952); Sea Piece with Birds (Dallas, Dec. 10, 1952); also grouped with The Seine at Night and Wheatfield at Noon as Three Pictures for Orchestra; concerto for flute, strings, and percussion (Venice, Sept. 18, 1954); A Solemn Music, for band (1949); chamber music: Sonata da chiesa for 5 instruments (1926); 5 Portraits, for 4 clarinets (1929); violin sonata (1930); 4 Portraits, for violin and piano (1931; also for orch.); string quartet No. 1 (1931); string quartet No. 2 (1932); also 4 piano sonatas; 2 sets of études for piano; organ pieces; sacred choral works; Hymns from the Old South, for mixed chorus a cappella; songs to French and English texts. Film music: The Plough that Broke the Plains (1936; also an orch. suite from it); Louisiana Story (1948; 2 orch. suites, including Acadian Songs and Dances). He publ. several collections of articles: The State of Music (1939); The Musical Scene (1945); The Art of Judging Music (1948); Music, Right and Left (1951). —Cf. S. L. M. Barlow, Virgil Thomson, in 'Modern Music' (vol. 18; 1941); Aaron Copland; Our New Music (N. Y., 1941; pp. 187-201); Peggy Glanville-Hicks, Virgil Thomson, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1949).

Thooft (töht), Willem Frans, Dutch composer; b. Amsterdam, July 10, 1829; d. Rotterdam, Aug. 27, 1900. He studied with A. Dupont in Brussels and with Hauptmann at the Leipzig Cons.; then went to Rotterdam, where he organized the German Opera. —Works: an opera, Aleida von

Holland (Rotterdam, 1866); Gevonden, for baritone solo, male chorus, and orch.; 3 symphonies (including one with chorus, surnamed Kaiser Karl V); In Leid und Freud, fantasy for orch.; Die Jungfrau von Orleans, overture; psalms; piano pieces; songs.

Thorborg, Kerstin, Swedish contralto; b. Venjan, May 19, 1896. She studied at the Stockholm Opera School; was engaged as a regular member of the Stockholm Opera (1925-30); then sang in Berlin and Vienna. On Dec. 21, 1936, she made her American début as Fricka at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y.; Klytemnestra in Elektra was especially admired; remained with the Metropolitan Opera until 1950; gave concerts throughout the U. S. and Canada; then returned to Sweden and became a voice teacher in Stockholm.

Thorn, Edgar. Pseudonym (in early works) of Edward MacDowell.

Thorne, Edward Henry, English organist and composer; b. Cranbourne, Dorset, May 9, 1834; d. London, Dec. 26, 1916. He was a chorister at St. George's Chapel; served as church organist in London and vicinity from 1853 on; gave organ and piano recitals in London and elsewhere; was especially noted for his Bach programs. He was made Mus. Doc. by the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1913. He wrote a number of sacred choral works; an overture, Peperil of the Peak (after Walter Scott); 2 piano trios; violin sonatas; cello sonatas; publ. 7 books of organ pieces.

Thouret (too-rä'), Georg, German writer on music; b. Berlin, Aug. 25, 1855; d. there, Jan. 17, 1924. He studied philology and history in Tübingen, Berlin, and Leipzig. The discovery of forgotten military music in the castles of Berlin, Charlottenburg, and Potsdam led him to make a special study of the subject; for the Vienna Exposition (1892) he arranged an exhibition of German military music; publ. the collections 'Altpreuussische Militärmärsche' and 'Musik am preussischen Hofe.' - Writings: Führer durch die Fachausstellung der deutschen Militärmusik (1892; official catalogue of the Vienna Exposition); Katalog der Musiksammlung auf der königlichen Hausbibliothek im Schlosse zu Berlin (1895); Friedrich der Grosse als Musikfreund und Musiker (1898).

Thrane (trä'h-ně), Waldemar, Norwegian composer; b. Christiania, Oct. 8, 1790; d. there, Dec. 30, 1828. He studied violin with K. Schall in Copenhagen; then went to Paris, where he was a pupil of Baillot (violin), Reicha and Habeneck (composition). Returning to Christiania, he conducted theater music; and also directed a music school. He is historically important as the composer of the 1st Norwegian opera, Fjeldeventyret (A Mountain Adventure); the score was publ. in 1824; the first concert performance took place in Christiania in 1827; the first stage production was given posthumously (Christiania, April 9, 1850). - Cf. J. G. Conradi, Musikkens Udvikling i Norge (Christiania, 1878).

Thuille (tüël), Ludwig (Wilhelm Andreas Maria), composer and pedagogue; b. Bozen, Tyrol, Nov. 30, 1861; d. Munich, Feb. 5, 1907. He studied with J. Pembaur at Innsbruck (piano and theory); then went to Munich, where he was a pupil of Karl Bärmann (piano) and Rheinberger (composition) at the Music School there; in 1883 he became prof. there. Encouraged by Alexander Ritter (q.v.), he began to compose music in the grand Wagnerian manner; wrote 3 operas, chamber music, song cycles, and choral works. But he made his mark chiefly as a fine pedagogue; with Rudolf Louis he publ. the well-known manual, Harmonielehre (1907; abridged ed. as Grundriss der Harmonielehre, 1908; new revised ed., by Courvoisier and others, 1933). - Works: operas: Theuerdank (Munich, March 12, 1897), Iobetanz (Karlsruhe, Feb. 6, 1898), Gugeline (Bremen, March 4, 1901); Romantische Ouvertüre (introduction to the opera Theuerdank); a symph. (1886); sextet for piano and wind instruments; piano quintet; cello sonata. - Cf. F. Munter, Ludwig Thuille (Munich, 1923); E. Istel, Ludwig Thuille, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1932).

Thuren, Hjalmar Lauritz, Danish musical folklorist; b. Copenhagen, Sept. 10, 1873; d. there, Jan. 13, 1912. From 1899 to 1907 he taught at the Fredericksberg Folk-School and was secretary of the Danish Folklore Society. He made valuable studies of folk music in Denmark, in the Faroe Islands, and among the Eskimos. - Writings: Dans og Kvadagtning paa Færøerne (1901), Folkesangen paa Færøerne (1908); Tanz und Tanzgesang im nordischen Mittelalter ('Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft,' 1908); The Eskimo Music (with W. Thalbitzer; Copenhagen, 1911; in French as La Musique chez les Eskimos, 'Publications de la revue S. I. M.', 1912); Melodies From East Greenland (1914); etc.

Thürlings (tūr'-lings), Adolf, German writer on music; b. Kaldenkirchen, July 1, 1844; d. Bern, Feb. 15, 1915. He took the Dr. phil. degree in Munich with the dissertation Die beiden Tongeschlechter und die neuere musikalische Theorie (Berlin, 1877); publ. Die schweizerischen Tonmeister im Zeitalter der Reformation (1903); valuable essays in various journals; also ed. works by Senfl in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' III, 2, and a selection of 5-part motets by Palestrina.

Thurner (toor'-ner), Friedrich Eugen, oboe virtuoso; b. Montbéliard, France, Dec. 9, 1785; d. Amsterdam, March 21, 1827. He publ. 3 symphonies, an overture, 4 oboe concertos, 4 quartets for oboe and strings, rondos and divertissements for oboe with string quartet, trio for oboe with 2 horns, duos for oboe and piano, piano music, etc.

Thursby, Emma, American soprano; b. Brooklyn, Feb. 21, 1845; d. New York, July 4, 1931. She studied with Achille Errani in N. Y.; in 1873 went to Italy, where she studied with Lamperti and San Giovanni in Milan. Upon her return to America in 1875, she was engaged by the bandleader Gilmore for his summer concerts, and toured the country with him; subsequently appeared in the European music centers; in 1903 she sang in China and Japan; then returned to the U. S., living in retirement in N. Y. —Cf. R. McC. Gipson, The Life of Emma Thursby, 1845-1931 (N. Y., 1940).

Tibaldi Chiesa, Maria, Italian writer on music; b. Milan, April 28, 1896. She studied at the Univ. of Rome; wrote opera librettos, and publ. books of verse. Her musical publications include: Schubert (1932; 2nd ed., 1936); Ernest Bloch (1933); Mussorgsky (1935); Vita romantica di Liszt (1937); Cimarosa e il suo tempo (1939); Paganini (3rd ed., 1944); Ciaikovsky (1943).

Tibbett, Lawrence, American baritone; b. Bakersfield, Calif., Nov. 16, 1896. His real name was Tibbet, but it was accidentally misspelled when he appeared in opera, and the final extra letter was retained. His early ambition was to be an actor, and he made a few appearances in various plays in Los Angeles as a young man. He took vocal lessons with Basil Ruysdael in Los Angeles, sang in light operas; then went to N. Y., where his teacher was Frank La Forge. He made his operatic début in N. Y. with the Metropolitan Opera on Nov. 24, 1923, in a minor role; then sang Valentin in Faust (Nov. 30, 1923); achieved a striking success as Ford in the revival of Verdi's Falstaff (Jan. 2, 1925); from then on he became one of the most successful singers at the Metropolitan Opera, where he remained until 1950; also won wide popularity in recitals and on the radio; appeared in films.

Tiby, Ottavio, Italian musicologist; b. Palermo, May 19, 1891. He studied at the Cons. of Palermo, graduating in composition in 1921; later studied in Rome. Returning to Palermo, he held a government position; devoted himself to collecting Sicilian songs; is also an authority on Byzantine music. —Publications: Acustica musicale e organologia degli strumenti musicali (Palermo, 1933); La Musica bizantina: teoria e storia (Florence, 1938); La Musica in Grecia e a Roma (Florence, 1942); La Famiglia Scarlatti, in the 'Journal of Renaissance and Baroque Music' (1947); The Polyphonic School in Sicily of the 16th-17th Century, in 'Musica Disciplina' (1951); edited Antichi musicisti italiani (1934).

Tichatschek (ti'-häh-chëhk), Joseph Aloys, Bohemian tenor; b. Ober-Weckelsdorf, July 11, 1807; d. Dresden, Jan. 18, 1886. He was the son of a poor weaver; in 1827 went to Vienna as a medical student, but then joined the chorus at the Kärnthnerthor Theater, and had vocal instruction from Ciccimara; was soon engaged at Graz for 2 years; then sang in Vienna. His career received a new impetus after his highly successful appearance at the Dresden Opera (Aug. 11, 1837); he remained there for 33 years, retiring in 1870. He created the roles of Rienzi (Oct. 20, 1842) and Tannhäuser (Oct. 19, 1845) in Wagner's operas. Wagner mentions him often and with great praise in his autobiography.

Tieffenbrucker. See Duiffopruggar.

Tiehse (tē'-zen), Otto, German composer; b. Danzig, Oct. 13, 1817; d. Berlin, May 15, 1849. He studied at the Royal Academy in Berlin, where he settled as a teacher. —Works: the comic opera Annette (Berlin, 1847); Christmas Cantata; Kyrie and Gloria a 6; songs of high merit.

Tiersch, Otto, German music theorist; b. Kalbsrieth, Sept. 1, 1838; d. Berlin, Nov. 1, 1892. He studied with J. G. Töpfer at Weimar and with Bellermand at Berlin; taught singing at the Stern Cons. in Berlin. As a theorist he was a disciple of Hauptmann. — Publications: System und Methode der Harmonielehre (1868); Elementarbuch der musikalischen Harmonie- und Modulationslehre (1874); Kurze praktische Generalbass-, Harmonie- und Modulationslehre (1876); Kurzes praktisches Lehrbuch für Contrapunkt und Nachahmung (1879); Kurzes praktisches Lehrbuch für Klaviersatz und Accompaniment (1881); Notensibel (1882); Die Unzulänglichkeit des heutigen Musikstudiums an Conservatorien, etc. (1883); Allgemeine Musiklehre (1885; with Erk); Rhythmik, Dynamik und Phrasierungslehre der homophonischen Musik (1886); articles on harmony, etc., in Mendel's 'Konversationslexikon.'

Tiersot (tyär-soh'), (Jean-Baptiste-Élisée-) Julien, French musicologist; b. Bourg-en-Bresse, July 5, 1857; d. Paris, Aug. 10, 1936. He was a pupil of Savard, Massenet, and César Franck at the Paris Cons.; in 1883 was appointed assistant librarian at the Cons., and in 1910, chief librarian, retiring in 1920. He dedicated himself to musical ethnography, and contributed greatly to the documentation on French folk music. He was prof. at the École des Hautes Études Sociales and president of the Société Française de Musicologie. His compositions include a Mass on the centenary of the death of Roland de Lassus (1894); Danses populaires françaises for orch. (1900); Hellas (after Shelley) for chorus and orch.; etc. — Writings: Histoire de la chanson populaire en France (1889); Musiques pittoresques (1889); Rouget de Lisle, son œuvre, sa vie (1892); Les Types mélodiques dans la chanson populaire française (1894); Étude sur les Maîtres-Chanteurs . . . de Richard Wagner (1899); Ronsard et la musique de son temps (1903); Index musical pour le Romancero populaire de la France par G. Doncieux (1904); Hector Berlioz et la société de son temps (1904); Notes d'ethnographie musicale (Part I, 1905; Part II is La Musique chez les peuples indigènes de l'Amérique du Nord, 1910); Les Fêtes et les chants de la Révolution française (1908); Gluck (1910); Beethoven, musicien de la Révolution (1910); J.-J. Rousseau (1912); Histoire de la Marseillaise (1915); Un Demi-siècle de musique française . . . 1870-1917 (1918; 2nd ed., 1924); La Musique dans la comédie de Molière (1921); La Damnation de Faust de Berlioz (1924); Lettres de musiciens écrites en français du XV<sup>e</sup> au XX<sup>e</sup> siècle (2 vols.; 1924, 1936); Smetana (1926); Les Couperin (1926); La Musique aux temps romantiques (1930); La Chanson populaire et les écrivains romantiques (1931); Don Juan de Mozart (1933); Lettres françaises de Richard Wagner (1933); J.-S. Bach (1934); also the correspondence of Berlioz, in 3 vols.: I, Les Années romantiques (1904); II, Le Musicien errant (1919); III, Au milieu du chemin (1930). — Collections of music; Chansons populaires recueillies dans les Alpes françaises (1903); Noëls français (1901); Chants populaires, pour les écoles (3 vols., 1907-29); 44 French Folksongs and Variants from Canada, Normandy, and Brittany (N. Y., 1910); 60 Folksongs of France (Boston, 1915); Chansons de Ronsard (1924); Chansons populaires françaises (1921); Mémoires populaires des provinces de France (1928); Chansons nègres (1933). — Cf. D. C. Parker, The Work of J. Tiersot, in the 'Mus. Standard' (1920); L. de La Laurencie, Un Musicien bressan: J. Tiersot (Bourg, 1932).

Tiessen (tēs'-sehn), Heinz, German composer and conductor; b. Königsberg, April 10, 1887. He studied music with Rüfer and Klatte in Berlin; was music critic of the 'Allgemeine Musikzeitung' (1912-17); then conducted at various Berlin theaters; led 'Der junge Chor' for children of workers (1924-32). In 1925 he was appointed to the faculty of the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; from 1946 to 1949 was director of the Municipal Cons. of Berlin, returning in 1949 to the Hochschule. His style of composition is influenced by Richard Strauss, with whom he was friendly; he publ. a guide to Strauss' Josephslegende (1914); Zur Geschichte der jüngsten Musik, 1913-28 (Mainz, 1928); and Musik der Natur, a study of bird songs (1953). His compositions include 2 symphonies; a piano concerto; a Naturtrilogie for piano solo; a septet for flute, clarinet, horn, and string quartet; a string quintet; about 60 songs; incidental music to plays. — Cf. his autobiography, Selbstzeugnis des Künstlers, in 'Musica' (Kassel, April, 1948).

Tietjens (têt'-yëns), Therese Johanne Alexandra, famous soprano; b. Hamburg, July 17, 1831; d. London, Oct. 3, 1877. She was trained in Hamburg and made a successful début there in 1849; sang at Frankfurt, and was engaged for the Vienna Court Opera in 1856; but went to London in 1858, and remained there until her death, for long years the reigning favorite, singing at Her Majesty's Theatre, Drury Lane, Covent Garden, and the Haymarket. She visited Paris in 1863, and America in 1874 and 1876, appearing at the Academy of Music in N. Y. under Strakosch's management.

Tigranian, Armen, Armenian composer; b. Alexandropol, Dec. 26, 1879; d. Tiflis, Feb. 10, 1950. He studied flute and theory in Tiflis; returned to Alexandropol in 1902 and organized a choral society, specializing in Armenian music; arranged Armenian folk-songs; in 1913 settled in Tiflis, where he became an esteemed music pedagogue; received the order of Lenin in 1939. —Works: the operas Anush (1908-12; Alexandropol, Aug. 17, 1912) and David-bek (Erivan, Dec. 3, 1950); Dance Suite for orch. (1946); cantata, The Bloody Night (1936); Suite of Armenian Dances for piano; numerous other piano pieces; songs; theater music.

Tigranian, Vartan, Armenian composer; son of Armen Tigranian; b. Alexandropol, Dec. 20, 1906. He studied at the Leningrad Cons. with Shostakovich and others, graduating in 1941. His works include an operetta, The Big Wedding (1945); a cantata, October (1945); choruses and solo songs; preludes and other pieces for piano.

Tijardović (tē-yahr'-dōh-vich), Ivo, Croatian composer; b. Split, Sept. 18, 1895. He studied in Zagreb; began his professional career by conducting theater orchestras; wrote operettas of the Viennese type; of these, Little Floramy (1924) became successful in Yugoslavia. His opera Dimniji Uz Jadran (The Chimneys of the Adriatic Coast), produced in Zagreb on Jan. 20, 1951, depicts the patriotic uprising of Yugoslav partisans during World War II. —Cf. I. B. Plamenac, Ivo Tijardović (Split, 1954).

Tikotsky, Evgeny Karlovitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, Dec. 25, 1893; studied composition with Deshevov; began to compose in 1924; in 1944 became musical director of the Philharmonic Concerts in Minsk. —Works: the operas Mihai Podhorny (Minsk, March 10, 1939) and Alesya (Minsk, Dec. 24, 1944); 4 symphonies (1927, 1940, 1949, 1955); Stormy Petrel, after Maxim Gorky, for bass, chorus, and orch. (1944); trombone concerto (1944); theater music.

Till, Johann Christian, 'Moravian' teacher, organist, and composer; b. Gnadenenthal, near Nazareth, Pa., May 18, 1762; d. Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 19, 1844. From 1793 till 1808 he was teacher and organist at Hope, N. J.; from 1813 to 1844 was organist of the Bethlehem congregation. In his later years he also made pianos. His compositions are listed in A. G. Rau and H. T. David, A Catalogue of Music by American Moravians (Bethlehem, 1938).

Tillyard, Henry Julius Wetenhall, English musicologist; b. Cambridge, Nov. 18, 1881. He studied at the Univ. there (1900-04) and at the English schools in Rome and Athens (1904-07), specializing in ancient and medieval music; studied Greek church music with J. T. Sakellarides in Athens. Until 1918 he was lecturer at the Univ. of Edinburgh; in 1919 he became prof. at the Univ. of Johannesburg (South Africa); in 1922 at Birmingham Univ.; and in 1926 at the Univ. of Cardiff. He publ. Byzantine Music and Hymnology (London, 1923); Handbook of the Middle Byzantine Musical Notation (Copenhagen, 1935; vol. 1 of 'Monumenta musicae byzantinae. Subsidia'); ed. the following vols. in the 'Transcripta' of the 'Monumenta musicae byzantinae': vol. 1, Sticherarium (with Höög and Wellesz; Copenhagen, 1935); vol. 2, The Hymns of the Sticherarium for November (Copenhagen, 1938); vols. 3 and 5, The Hymns of the Octoechus (Copenhagen, 1940; 1949); vol. 4, Twenty Canons from the Trinity Hirmologium (Boston, 1952).

Tilman (til-mahn'), Alfred, Belgian composer; b. Brussels, Feb. 3, 1848; d. Schaerbeek, near Brussels, Feb. 20, 1895. He studied at the Brussels Cons. (1866-71); wrote the cantata La Sirène; 24 vocal fugues for 2 and 3 voices.

Tilmant (til-mahn'), Théophile, French conductor; b. Valenciennes, July 8, 1799; d. Asnières, May 7, 1878. From 1838 to 1849 he served as 2nd maître de chapelle at the Théâtre Italien; then 1st maître de chapelle at the Opéra-Comique until his retirement in 1868; was also conductor of the Cons. Concerts from 1860 to 1863.

Timanova, Vera Victorovna, Russian pianist; b. Ufa, Feb. 18, 1855; d. Leningrad, 1942. She was a pupil of Anton Rubinstein, Tausig, and Liszt; appeared as a child prodigy in Russia and Germany from the age of 9; became a prominent teacher in Leningrad, remaining there until her death.

Timm, Henry Christian, pianist, organist, and composer; b. Hamburg, July 11, 1811; d. New York, Sept. 4, 1892. After study in Germany, he settled in the U. S. in 1835; was employed as church organist in N. Y.,

Boston, etc. He was president of the N. Y. Philharmonic from 1847 to 1863. He wrote choral works, organ pieces, and some piano music; made numerous transcriptions for 2 pianos of various classical works.

Timmermans, Ferdinand, Dutch organist and carillonneur; b. Rotterdam, Sept. 7, 1891. He studied organ with J. H. Besselaar and H. de Vries. In 1924 he became the municipal carillonneur at Rotterdam and in 1926 at Schiedam. He subsequently gave exhibitions in Belgium, France, and England; soon he won the reputation of being one of the world's greatest carillonneurs. On May 5, 1954 he gave a concert in Washington playing on the 50-bell carillon presented to the U. S. by the people of Holland. He publ. Luidklokken en beiaarden in Nederland (Amsterdam, 1944).

Tinayre, Yves (Jean), French singer and music scholar; b. Paris, April 25, 1891. He studied voice in London and Milan; gave recitals in France, England, Austria, etc., specializing in old songs, which he edited for this purpose; also revived some medieval French, German, and Italian sacred songs. He is president of the society Les Musiciens de la Vieille France.

Tinctoris, Johannes (called John Tinctor), Belgian writer and composer; b. probably Nivelles, 1436; d. there, before Oct. 12, 1511. About 1475, maestro to Ferdinand of Aragon at Naples, who dispatched him in quest of singers for his chapel to France, etc., in 1487; but Tinctoris never went back, and became a canon at Nivelles. He was one of the most eminent theorists of his time, and the author of the earliest dictionary of musical terms, Terminorum musicae diffinitorium (Naples, 1473; reprint in Coussemaker's 'Scriptores,' IV, and, with a German transl. by H. Bellermann, in Chrysander's 'Jahrbuch,' 1863; in English, London, 1849; with a French transl., Paris, 1951). The only other work known to have been printed during his life is De inventione et usu musicae (after 1487); a number of treatises preserved in MS were publ. for the first time in Coussemaker's ed. of the complete works of Tinctoris (1875) and reprinted in vol. IV of the 'Scriptores.' Extant compositions are a Missa l'homme armé (ed. by L. Feininger in 'Monumenta polyphoniae liturgicae Sanctae Ecclesiae romanae' Series I, 1-9) and some chansons in MS; other chansons and a Lamentation in Petrucci's 'Odhecaton' and collection of 1506. —Cf. G. Pannain, La Teoria musicale di G.

Tinctoris (Naples, 1913); K. Weinmann, Johannes Tinctoris und sein unbekannter Traktat 'De inventione et usu musicae' (Regensburg, 1917); Ch. Van den Borren, J. Tinctoris (Brussels, 1931); Lucie Balmer, Tonsystem und Kirchentöne bei J. Tinctoris (dissertation, Bern, 1935); G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 137-50). See also René Vannes, ed., Dictionnaire des Musiciens (Brussels, 1947; pp. 390-92).

Tinel (tê-nehl'), Edgar, Belgian composer; b. Sinay, March 27, 1854; d. Brussels, Oct. 28, 1912. He was taught at first by his father, a schoolmaster and organist; entered the Brussels Cons. in 1863 as a pupil of Brassin, Dupont, Gevaert, Kufferath, and Mailly; in 1873 took 1st prize for piano playing; won the Belgian Prix de Rome in 1877 with the cantata De Klokke Roeland. In 1882 he became director of the Institute for Sacred Music at Mechlin; was appointed to the staff of the Brussels Cons. in 1896, and in 1909 (after Gevaert's death) became the director. —Works: Franciscus, oratorio (Mechlin, 1888; N. Y., 1893); Godoleva, music drama (Brussels, July 22, 1897); Katharina, sacred opera (Brussels, Feb. 27, 1909); many German and Flemish songs; Te Deum for mixed chorus and organ; Missa in honorem beatae Mariae Virginis de Lourdes for 5-part chorus a cappella; psalms; motets; sacred songs. He publ. Le Chant grégorien, théorie sommaire de son exécution (1890). —Cf. A. van der Elst, Edgar Tinel (Ghent, 1901); Paul Tinel (his son), Edgar Tinel: le récit de sa vie et l'exégèse de son œuvre de 1854 à 1886 (Brussels, 1922); Paul Tinel, Edgar Tinel (Brussels, 1946).

Tippett, Michael, English composer; b. London, Jan. 2, 1905. He studied composition at the Royal College of Music with R. O. Morris, conducting with Sir Adrian Boult and Sir Malcolm Sargent. His early works were imitative of Sibelius, but he rapidly developed an individual style, essentially Romantic, but with a solid background of polyphony in an emphatically Classical manner; he often employs dance forms in his instrumental music. —Works: opera, The Midsummer Marriage (libretto by the composer; 1952; London, Jan. 27, 1955); oratorio, A Child of Our Time (London, March 19, 1944); concerto for double string orch. (1939); Fantasia, for piano and orch., on a theme by Handel (London, March 7, 1942); symph. No. 1 (1945); symph. No. 2 (London, Feb. 5, 1958); suite in D for orch. (1948); Little Music, for string orch. (1952); Variations on a Theme by Corelli, for string orch. (1953); piano concerto (1955); 3 string quartets (1935; 1942; 1946); sonata for 4 horns (1955); Fantasy Sonata for piano (1938); piano sonata (1942); several choral works; organ pieces; songs. —Cf. C. Mason, Michael Tippett, in the 'Mus. Times' (May, 1946).

Tirabassi, Antonio, musicologist; b. Amalfi, Italy, July 10, 1882; d. Brussels, Feb. 5, 1947. He began his career as a church organist; in 1910 went to Belgium, where he founded the Institut Belge de Musicologie (1920); brought out editions of works by Monteverdi, Corelli, and other composers. —Publ. École flamande (1450 à 1600). La mesure dans la notation proportionnelle et sa transcription moderne (Brussels, 1927); Grammaire de la notation proportionnelle et sa transcription moderne (Brussels, 1930).

Tirindelli, Pier Adolfo, Italian violinist and composer; b. Conegliano, May 5, 1858; d. Rome, Feb. 6, 1937. He was a pupil at the Milan Cons. (1870-76); conducted the band at Gorizia for 3 years, then studied in Vienna under Grün, and under Massart at Paris; from 1885, prof. of violin at the Liceo Benedetto Marcello, Venice, of which he was appointed director in 1892. He made his American début with the Boston Symph. Orch. (Dec. 16, 1895); from 1896 to 1920 he taught at the Cincinnati Cons. He wrote an Italian opera, Atenaidé (Venice, Nov. 19, 1892); and a French opera, Blanc et noir, which was produced in Cincinnati (Dec. 15, 1897). Some of his songs (in Italian and French) became very popular (Mistica, Vaticinio, Je ne t'aime plus, Une Existence, etc.). —Cf. E. Montanaro, P. A. Tirindelli e la sua musica (Rome, 1933).

Tischer, Gerhard, German music publisher; b. Lübnitz, Nov. 10, 1877. He studied musicology in Berlin (1899-1902); Dr. phil. with the dissertation Die aristotelischen Musikprobleme (1903); from 1904 to 1919, lectured on music history at the Handelhochschule in Cologne, and from 1919 to 1921, at the Univ. there. From 1906 he edited the 'Rheinische Musik- und Theater-Zeitung' (after 1933 known as the 'Deutsche Musik-Zeitung'). In 1910 he founded in Cologne the music-publishing firm of 'Tischer & Jagenberg,' and in 1923 bought the 'Wunderhorn Verlag' of Munich. In 1943 the firm moved to Starnberg.

Tischhauser, Franz, Swiss composer; b. Bern, March 28, 1921. He studied at the Zürich Cons.; in 1951 joined the staff of the Zürich Radio. Among his works are the ballet Birthday of the Infanta (1941); concertino for piano and small orch. (1945); Divertimento for 2 horns and string orch. (1948); choral pieces; songs.

Tita Ruffo. See Ruffo, Tita.

Titelouze (têt-looz'), Jean, the founder of the French school of organ playing; b. St.-Omer, 1563; d. Rouen, Oct. 25, 1633. Appointed organist in 1585 at St.-Jean in Rouen; from 1588 till his death organist at the Cathedral there. His complete organ works are publ. in Guilmant's 'Archives des Maîtres de l'orgue.' —Cf. A. G. Ritter, Zur Geschichte des Orgelspiels im 14.-18. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1884); A. Pirro, J. Titelouze (Paris, 1898); E. von Werra, J. Titelouze, in 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (1910).

Titl, Anton Emil, conductor and composer; b. Pernstein, Moravia, Oct. 2, 1809; d. Vienna, Jan. 21, 1882. In 1850 he became conductor at the Burgtheater in Vienna; wrote two operas: Die Burgfrau (Brünn, 1832) and Das Wolkenkind (Vienna, March 14, 1845); a Mass for 8 voices; overtures; violin pieces. His Serenade for violin was very popular in numerous arrangements.

Titov (tē'-tōhv), Alexey Nikolayevitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, June 24, 1769; d. there, Nov. 20, 1827. He served in the cavalry, reaching the rank of major general at his retirement; was an amateur violinist, and wrote operas in the traditional Italian style; of these, the following were produced in St. Petersburg: Andromeda and Perseus (1802); The Judgment of Solomon (1803); Nurzadakh (June 7, 1807); The Wedding of Filatka (April 25, 1808); Errant Moment (July 10, 1812); Emmerich Tekkely (Dec. 13, 1812); Intrigue in the Basket (May 12, 1817); Valor of the People of Kiev, or These are the Russians (May 12, 1817); The Feast of the Mogul (Sept. 15, 1823); an opera, The Brewer, or The Hidden Ghost of Evil, was produced at Moscow in 1788; a ballet-pantomime, Le nouveau Werther, was first given in St. Petersburg, on Jan. 30, 1799. His brother Sergey Titov (b. 1770; date of death unknown) was a cellist who wrote the operas, all produced in St. Petersburg, The Forced Wedding (Sept. 4, 1789), Credulous

Folk (July 10, 1812), and Old-fashioned Christmas (Jan. 25, 1813).

Titov, Nikolay Alexeyevitch, the 'Grandfather of Russian Song,' son and pupil of Alexey Titov; b. St. Petersburg, May 10, 1800; d. there, Dec. 22, 1875. He received a military upbringing; like his father, he reached the rank of major general. He had no formal musical education; took some singing lessons, and studied a manual of thorough-bass; he was a typical dilettante, but possessed a gift of melodic invention; he knew Glinka and Dargomyzhsky, who helped him to develop his ability. He wrote about 60 songs, which were extremely popular in his time; his early song, The Pine Tree, publ. in 1820, is erroneously believed to be the first Russian art song, but as a matter of historical fact, it had precursors; other of his songs that were popular include Perfidious Friend, The Blue Scarf, and A Tree Branch. He wrote a curious Quadrille for piano 3 hands, the treble part to be played by a beginner; another interesting project was a 'musical romance in 12 waltzes' (under the general title When I Was Young), which remained incomplete. A waltz, entitled Past Happiness, the Quadrille, and 4 songs are reproduced in History of Russian Music in Examples, ed by S. Ginsburg (Moscow, 1942; vol. 2, pp. 381-93).

Tocchi, Gianluca, Italian composer; b. Perugia, Jan. 10, 1901. He studied in Rome with Respighi; his early works were written in a Romantic and Impressionist manner: a symph. poem Il Destino, after Maeterlinck; a Rapsodia romantica (1929), Tre canzoni alla maniera popolare italiana (1931); he then changed to contemporary subjects, exemplified by such works as Record (1933), Film (1936), and a concerto for jazz band.

Toch (tohh), Ernst, eminent composer; b. Vienna, Dec. 7, 1887. He was a student of medicine and philosophy, and taught himself music by studying great masterpieces; won the Mozart stipend in 1909 and the Mendelssohn stipend in 1910; also won 4 times in succession the Austrian State Prize for composition. In 1909 he went to Frankfurt, where he took piano lessons with Willy Rehberg, and in 1913 became teacher of piano in Zuschneid's Hochschule für Musik in Mannheim; Dr. phil., 1921, with the thesis Beiträge zur Stilkunde der Melodie (publ. in Berlin as Melodielehre, 1923). From 1929 to 1933 he lived in Berlin, and taught piano and composition. On the advent of the Nazi regime, he left Germany and went to Paris; in 1935 settled in the U. S.; became an American citizen, July 26, 1940. He lectured at the New School for Social Research in N. Y.; in 1937 moved to Hollywood; wrote music for the films; in 1940-41, taught composition at the Univ. of Southern California, Los Angeles. His music is Romantic in inspiration; it is profoundly emotional, and yet the stylistic cohesion and formal design are always strong; the idiom is basically tonal but there is considerable freedom in the melodic flow; the rhythmic element is particularly ingenious; the orchestration is masterly. His piano works, some of transcendent difficulty, are extremely original in facture. Toch is not averse to experimentation; his suite Gesprochene Musik for spoken voices (1930) relies exclusively on rhythmic variety and dynamic contrasts. His string quartet, op. 74 (1957), is written in 'a free 12-tone style' of composition. —Works: for the stage: Wegwende (1925), Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse (Baden-Baden, July 17, 1927), Egon und Emilie (Mannheim, 1928), Der Fächer (Königsberg, June 8, 1930); oratorio Das Wasser (Berlin, June 18, 1930). For orch.: An mein Vaterland, with soli, chorus, and organ (1915); Fantastische Nachtmusik (Mannheim, March 22, 1921); Die chinesische Flöte, for soprano and chamber orch. (Frankfurt, June 24, 1923); Tanz-Suite, for small orch. (Mannheim, Nov. 19, 1923); cello concerto (Kiel, June 17, 1925); piano concerto (Düsseldorf, Oct. 8, 1926; Gieseking soloist); Spil, for band (Donaueschingen, July 24, 1926); Komödie für Orchester (Berlin, Nov. 13, 1927); Bunte Suite (Frankfurt, Feb. 22, 1929); Kleine Theater-Suite (Berlin, Feb. 9, 1931); symph. for piano and orch. (1932; London, Aug. 20, 1934); Big Ben, variations on the Westminster chimes (Boston Symph., Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 20, 1934); Pinocchio, 'a merry overture' (Los Angeles, Dec. 10, 1936; very successful); Hyperion, dramatic prelude after Keats (Cleveland, Jan. 8, 1948); 4 symphonies: No. 1 (Vienna, Dec. 20, 1950); No. 2, dedicated to Albert Schweitzer (Vienna, Jan. 11, 1952); No. 3 (Pittsburgh, Dec. 2, 1955; won the Pulitzer Prize); No. 4 (Minneapolis, Nov. 22, 1957); Notturmo (Louisville, Jan. 2, 1954); Poems to Martha, for voice and strings (1946); Cantata of the Bitter Herbs, for soli, narrator, mixed chorus, and orch. (1941); also 9 string quartets; Serenade, for 3 violins; 2 Divertimenti (for violin and cello and for violin and viola); string trio; piano quintet; many piano works, among them 3 sonatas, Burlesken, Klein- stadtbilder; 20 concert études for beginners; incidental music for various plays; film music (1934-37); several song cycles. He publ. a theory book, The Shaping Forces in Music (N. Y., 1948). —Cf. E. Beninger, Pianistische Probleme, im Anschluss an die Klavierwerke von Ernst Toch, in 'Melos' (1928); Paul Fisk, Ernst Toch, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1938); H. Rutz, Ernst Toch, in 'Melos' (May, 1952).

Toda, Kunio, Japanese composer; b. Tokyo, Aug. 11, 1914. He studied law at Tokyo Univ. and music in Germany and in Japan with Moroi; appointed cultural attaché in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and served in Germany and Russia. Among his works are a violin concerto (1949); 3 ballets: Salome in Studio (Tokyo, Nov. 23, 1951), Cirque Rouge (Tokyo, Nov. 4, 1953), and Cave (Tokyo, Nov. 7, 1954); piano trio (1947), piano concerto (1944); also a choral work, Dona Nobis Pacem (Tokyo, May 31, 1950).

Todi, Luiza Rosa de Aguiar, Portuguese mezzo-soprano; b. Setubal, Jan. 9, 1753; d. Lisbon, Oct. 1, 1833. She appeared on the stage at 15; married the violinist Francisco Todi at 16; studied singing with David Perez. After appearances in London (1772 and 1777) she sang in Madrid (1777), Paris (1778-79 and 1781-82), and Berlin (1782). In 1783 her rivalry with Elisabeth Mara became a sensation in musical Paris, two hostile factions being formed, the Todistes and Maratistes. In 1784 she went to Russia, where she obtained considerable success at the court of Catherine the Great; in 1787 Friedrich Wilhelm II engaged her at a high salary in Berlin; in 1789 she sang again in Paris; in 1793 she returned to Portugal; during the last years of her life she was completely blind. —Cf. J. Vasconcellos, Luiza Todi (Oporto, 1873); R.-Aloys Mooser, Annales de la Musique et des Musiciens en Russie au XVIII<sup>me</sup> siècle (Geneva, 1948-51; vol. 2, pp. 509-13).

Toepfer, Johann Gottlob. See Töpfer.

Toëtschi (tö'h-ëhs'-kē), Carlo Giuseppe (Toëtsca della Castella-Monte), Italian violinist and composer; b. Padua, c. 1722; d. Munich, April 12, 1788. He was the son of Alessandro Toëtschi, a member of the Mannheim Orch.; studied with Johann Stamitz; entered the Mannheim Orch. in 1752 as violinist; in 1759 became concertmaster. He followed the court to Munich in 1778, and was appointed music director in 1780. A productive composer, he wrote at least 63 symphonies; also about 60 pieces of chamber music, including quartets, quintets, sextets, trio sonatas, violin sonatas, etc. Riemann publ. his symph. a 8 in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vol. VII, 2); in the same series are reprinted a flute quartet and a flute quintet (vol. XV) and a trio (vol. XVI, which also contains a thematic catalogue, listing 60 chamber works). A symph. in D was arranged by A. Carse, and publ. in London (1936). —Cf. R. Münster, Die Sinfonien Toëtschis (dissertation; Munich, 1956).

Toëtschi, Johann Baptist (Giovanni Battista), violinist and composer; brother of Carlo Giuseppe Toëtschi; b. Stuttgart, c. 1727; d. Munich, May 1, 1800. Like his brother, he was a violinist in the Mannheim Orch. (from 1755); followed the court to Munich in 1778, becoming music director after his brother's death (1788). He produced a ballet, Arlechin, Kaiser in China, in Mannheim (April 26, 1778) and composed 6 trio sonatas. A thematic catalogue of his works appears in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vol. XVI).

Tofft, Alfred, Danish composer; b. Copenhagen, Jan. 2, 1865; d. there, Jan. 30, 1931. Abandoning a commercial career, he studied music with J. Nebelung (organ) and G. Bohlmann (theory); was music critic for 'Berlingske Tidende' in Copenhagen, and president of the Danish Composers Society. He was a fine organist and a talented composer of songs (op. 2, Heine-Album; op. 4, Jacobsen-Album; etc.). Two operas were produced in Copenhagen: Vifandaka (Jan. 1, 1898) and Anathema (May 10, 1928).

Togni (toh'-ñē), Camillo, Italian composer; b. Gussago, Oct. 18, 1922. He studied with Casella in Rome (1939-43); then in Parma; after graduation in philosophy from the Univ. of Pavia in 1948, he devoted himself entirely to music; adopted the 12-tone method of composition. His Variations for piano and orch. were given at the Venice Festival in 1946; his Psalmus CXXVII for soli, violin, viola, and cello was presented at the Brussels Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music on June 24, 1950; his Fantasia Concertante, for flute and string orch. at the Cologne Festival of 'Musik der Zeit,' March 25, 1958.

Tokatyan, Armand, operatic tenor; b. Plovdiv, Bulgaria, Feb. 12, 1899. He was educated in Alexandria, Egypt, and studied voice with N. Cairone in Milan and A. Wolf in Vienna. Operatic début at the Teatro dal Verme, Milan, in 1921; then came to the U. S. and toured with the Scotti Opera Co. He made his début at the Metropolitan Opera House on Feb. 14, 1923, as Lucio in Vittadini's Anima Allegra, and with the exception of a few seasons spent abroad, remained a valued member of the company up to 1946. Also sang at Covent Garden, London; at the state operas of Berlin, Vienna, etc.

Tolbecque (töhl-bäk'), Auguste, French cellist; b. Paris, March 30, 1830; d. Niort, March 8, 1919. He won 1st prize for cello at the Paris Cons. in 1849; taught at the Marseilles Cons. (1865-71); later was cellist at the Paris Cons. concerts. He publ. La Gymnastique du violoncelle (op. 14; excellent exercises and mechanical studies), a Konzertstück for cello and orch., and pieces for cello and piano; produced a 1-act comic opera, Après la valse (Niort, 1894). Also wrote Souvenirs d'un musicien en province (1896), Notice historique sur les instruments à cordes et à archet (1898), and L'Art du luthier (1903).

Tolbecque, Jean-Baptiste-Joseph, Belgian violinist; b. Hainzine, April 17, 1797; d. Paris, Oct. 23, 1869. He was a pupil of Kreutzer and Reicha at the Paris Cons.; played violin at the Théâtre Italien and then became a successful conductor at court balls, for which he wrote waltzes, galops, quadrilles, and other fashionable dances which enjoyed tremendous success. In 1851 he staged his ballet, Vert-Vert (in collaboration with Dellevrez), at the Paris Opéra. His 3 brothers, Isidore-Joseph (1794-1871), Auguste-Joseph (1801-69), and Charles-Joseph (1806-35), were professional violinists and theater conductors.

Toldrá, Eduardo, Spanish conductor; b. Villanueva y Geltrú, Catalonia, April 7, 1895. He studied the violin, and was a member of a string quartet, with which he toured in Europe. In 1921 he became prof. of violin at the Barcelona Municipal School of Music; in 1943, was appointed conductor of the Municipal Orch. He publ. an album of pieces in the form of Catalan folk dances.

Tollefsen, Carl H., violinist; b. Hull, England, Aug. 15, 1882. He emigrated to America as a youth, and studied at the National Cons., N. Y. (1898-1902) and later at the Institute of Musical Art (1906-08), where his teachers were Franz Kneisel (violin), Goetschius and Rubin Goldmark (composition); was a violinist in various orchestras in N. Y. On Aug. 7, 1907 he married the pianist Augusta Schnabel (b. Boise, Idaho, Jan. 5, 1885; d. Brooklyn, April 9, 1955), and formed the Tollefsen Trio with her and with Paul Kéfer (q.v.); this trio toured the U. S. for more than 30 years (succeeding cellists were M. Penha, P. Gruppe, R. Thrane, and W. Durieux). In 1939 he founded the Brooklyn Chamber Music Society. He formed a large collection of autographs of famous musicians and MS biographies (including the biographical archives gathered by Alfred Remy, editor of the 3rd ed. of Baker's Biographical Dictionary of Musicians). In 1947 the cellist Youry Bilstein bequeathed to him a collection of old instruments.

Tomaschek (töh'-mäh-shěk), Johann Wenzel (Bohemian spelling, Jan Václav Tomášek), composer and teacher; born Skutsch, Bohemia, April 17, 1774; d. Prague, April 3, 1850. He learned the rudiments of singing and violin playing from Wolf, regens chori at Chrudim; studied as a chorister at the Minorite monastery, Iglau; took the law course at Prague Univ., 1790-93, supporting himself by giving lessons, and also studying the chief German theoretical works. Finally he applied himself wholly to music; found a patron in Count Bucquoy de Longeval; and became the most noted teacher in Prague (Dreyschock, Schulhoff, v. Bocklet, Kittl, Kuhe, Dessauer, Tedesco, Sig. Goldschmidt, Hianslick, etc., were his pupils). He was an admirable pianist and organist, and a composer of high merit, though unfortunate in being Beethoven's contemporary. Among 110 works with opus numbers are a Requiem in C minor (op. 70), a Krönungsmesse in Eb (op. 81), cantatas, hymns, Bohemian and German songs, a symphony in Eb (op. 19), a piano concerto (op. 18), a piano quartet in Eb (op. 22), a piano trio (op. 7), and several piano compositions (sonatas, op. 14, 15, 21, 48, and a fifth in B; 6 sets of Eclogues, each having 6 numbers, op. 35, 47, 51, 63, 66, 83; 2 sets of 6 Rhapsodies, op. 40, 41; 3 Diitirambi, op. 65; 6 Allegri capricciosi di bravura, op. 52 and op. 84). His opera Seraphine, oder Grossmut und Liebe (Prague, Dec. 15, 1811) was well received. —Cf. his autobiography in vol. IV of 'Libussa' (Prague, 1845); E. Hianslick, Aus meinem Leben (Berlin, 1894; vol. I, p. 25 ff.); R. v. Procházka, Arpeggien (Dresden, 1897; p. 44 ff.); W. Kahl, Aus der Frühzeit des lyrischen Klavierstücks, in 'Zeitschrift für Musik', 89, No. 8 (1922); K. Emingerova, T., in 'Národní kultura' (1924); M. Tarantova, V. J. T. (Prague, 1946); P. Nettl, Forgotten Musicians (N. Y., 1951, pp. 91-109); excerpts from his memoirs were publ. in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1946).

Tomašek (toh'-mah-shěk), Jaroslav, Czech composer; b. Koryčany, Moravia, April 10, 1896. Pupil of V. Novák; also studied musicology at the Univ. of Prague. —Works: A Tale of Christmas Eve, for voice and orch.; Dances for orch.; a string quartet; sonata for flute and piano; 2 piano sonatas; song-cycles. His wife, Jaromira Tomášková-Nováková (b. Jaroměř, May 23, 1892), is a concert soprano, from 1920 teacher of singing at the Prague Cons.

Tomasi, Henri, French composer; b. Marseilles, Aug. 17, 1901. He studied with Paul Vidal at the Paris Cons.; won the 2nd Grand Prix de Rome for his cantata Coriolan (1927); was music director on the Paris Radio and in French Indo-China (1930-35); served in the French Army (1939-40); conducted the Opera in Monte Carlo (1946-50). In 1952 he was awarded the Grand Prix de Musique Française. —Works: Operas: Don Juan de Mañara (Munich, March 29, 1956); Atlantide (Mulhouse, Feb. 26, 1954); Sampiero Corso (Bordeaux, May, 1956). Ballets: La Grisi (Paris, Oct. 7, 1935); La Rosière du village (Paris, May 26, 1936); Les Santons (Paris, Nov. 18, 1938); La Fée cambodgienne (Marseilles, Jan. 31, 1952); Les Folies mazarguaises (Marseilles, Oct. 5, 1953); Noces de cendre (Strasbourg, Jan. 19, 1954). For orch.: Chants de Cynos, symph. poem (Paris, Nov. 30, 1929); Mémoires corses (1931); Vocero, symph. poem (1933); Scènes municipales (1933); Tam-Tam, symph. poem (1933); Chants laotiens (1934); Deux danses cambodgiennes (1934); Chants des geishas (1936); Don Juan de Mañara, suite (Paris, March 20, 1937); Caravanes, or Impressions sahariennes (1938); Petite suite médiévale (1938); a symph. (Paris, May 4, 1943); Concert asiatique, for percussion (1939); flute concerto (1947); trumpet concerto (1949); viola concerto (1951); saxophone concerto (1951); horn concerto (1955). Chamber music: Concert champêtre, for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1939); string trio (1943); Divertimento Corsica, for woodwind trio (1952); wind quintet (1952); piano pieces; songs.

Tomasini, Luigi (Aloysius), Italian violinist and composer; b. Pesaro, June 22, 1741; d. Esterházy, April 25, 1808. From 1756 he was a violinist at Prince Paul Anton Esterházy's residence in Eisenstadt, and was a friend of Haydn there; in 1761 became concertmaster in Haydn's orch.; remained in the household of Prince Nicholas, successor to Paul Anton Esterházy, and was pensioned in 1790. Several of Haydn's concertos were dedicated to Tomasini, who was a composer of considerable merit himself; wrote 24 divertimentos for barytone, violin, and cello, string quartets, etc. His son, Anton Tomasini (b. Eisenstadt, 1775; d. there, June 12, 1824), was a viola player; another son, Luigi Tomasini, was an excellent violinist in Haydn's orchestra, highly commended by Haydn; he went to Vienna in 1796 and to Berlin in 1808.

Tombelle, Fernand de la. See La Tombelle.

Tomilin, Victor Konstantinovitch, Russian composer; b. Berdichev, May 15, 1908; killed in combat near Leningrad, Dec. 9, 1941. He was a pupil of Vladimir Stcherbatchev at the St. Petersburg Cons., graduating in 1932. He wrote 2 symph. suites, Episodes of Civil War (1936) and Crimean Suite (1939); a number of songs and piano pieces.

Tomkins, Thomas, English organist and composer; b. St. David's, 1572; d. Martin Hussington, near Worcester, June (buried June 9), 1656. He came from a family of musicians, of whom many members flourished in the 16th and 17th centuries. He was a pupil of William Byrd; was appointed organist of the Worcester Cathedral about 1596, holding this position for half a century, until 1646. In 1607 he received the degree of Mus. B. at Oxford, and in 1621 was appointed one of the organists of the Chapel Royal. He was one of the most inspired of the English madrigalists; his ballets, his keyboard pieces, and his sacred works are also of a high quality. His publ. works include Songs of 3, 4, 5 and 6 parts (reprinted in the 'English Madrigal School' vol. XVIII); and Musica Deo Sacra (posthumous, 1668), containing 5 services and 95 anthems (services reprinted in 'Tudor Church Music' vol. VII). Other church music is in MS. His keyboard music was publ. by Stephen D. Tuttle in 'Musica Britannica' (vol. 5); 2 pieces are in Davison and Apel, 'Historical Anthology of Music' vol. 1 (Cambridge, Mass., 1946). —Cf. S. de B. Taylor, Thomas Tomkins (London, 1933); Denis Stevens, Thomas Tomkins (London, 1957). See also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 811-13).

Tomlins, William Lawrence, music educator and choral leader; b. London, Feb. 4, 1844; d. Delafield, Wis., Sept. 26, 1930. Pupil of G. A. Macfarren and E. Silas. Settled in America, 1869; from 1875-98 conductor of the Apollo Glee Club, Chicago; having made a specialty of training children's choruses and teachers, he established in 1903 the 'National Training School for Music Teachers' in Chicago; engaged by Chicago Board of Education in 1904 to train the teachers in the public schools; went to London in 1910, but later returned to the U. S. He publ. Children's Songs, and How to Sing Them (1885).

Tommasini, Vincenzo, Italian composer; b. Rome, Sept. 17, 1878; d. there, Dec. 23, 1950. He studied violin with Pinelli; theory with Falchi at Santa Cecilia in Rome; then went to Berlin, where he took lessons with Max Bruch; after sojourns in Paris, London, and N. Y. he returned to Rome. He wrote music in the poetic tradition of Italian Romanticism; his operas, symph. works, and chamber music obtained immediate performances and favorable reception; however, his most successful piece, Le Donne di buon umore (The Good-humored Ladies), was not an original work, but a comedy-ballet written on music from sonatas by Domenico Scarlatti, arranged in a series of tableaux and brilliantly orchestrated; this was a commission for the Ballets Russes of Diaghilev, who staged it at Rome in April, 1917, and kept it in the repertory during his tours all over the world. Other works by Tommasini include the operas Medea, to the composer's own libretto (Trieste, April 8, 1906) and Uguale fortuna (Rome, 1913); for orch.: La Vita è un sogno (1901); Poema erotico (1909); Inno alla beltà (1911); Chiari di luna (Rome, 1916); Il beato regno (Rome, 1922); Paesaggi toscani (Rome, 1923); Il Carnevale di Venezia (N. Y., Oct. 10, 1929, Toscanini conducting); Nápule (Naples), a fantasy (Freiburg, Dec. 7, 1931); violin concerto (1932); Quattro pezzi (1934); Le Diable s'amuse, ballet suite on themes by Paganini (1936); concerto for string quartet and orch. (1939); La Tempesta (1941); Tiepolesco, ballet suite (1945); Duo concertante, for piano and orch. (1948); 3 string quartets; violin sonata; harp sonata; Due Macchiette for cello and piano (1940); piano pieces; publ. La Luce invisibile (1929) and Saggio di estetica sperimentale (1942). —Cf. G. Gatti, Some Italian Composers of Today: Tommasini in the 'Mus. Times' (Nov., 1921); M. Zanotti-Bianco, Vincenzo Tommasini, in the 'Chesterian' (Feb., 1923);

A. Casella, Vincenzo Tommasini, in the 'Revue Musicale' (1927); M. Rinaldi, Vincenzo Tommasini in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (Oct.-Dec., 1951).

Toni, Alceo, Italian musicologist and composer; b. Lugo, May 22, 1884. He was a pupil of L. Torchi and E. Bossi in Bologna; then lived in Milan as critic (of the 'Popolo d'Italia'), conductor, and composer. Guest-conductor in Rome, Budapest, Lisbon, Buenos Aires, etc. He ed. numerous works by Corcelli, Locatelli, Torelli, Monteverdi, Carissimi, and other old Italian composers. His compositions include a Requiem Mass, chamber music, and songs. Some of his many articles were collected in a book, Studi critici di interpretazione (Milan, 1923; new ed., 1955).

Tonning, Gerard, choral conductor and composer; b. Stavanger, Norway, May 25, 1860; d. New York, June 10, 1940. He studied in Munich with Rheinberger and others; in 1887 he emigrated to America, settling in Duluth, Minn., where he organized several choral societies; in 1905 he moved to Seattle, where he remained until 1917; then went to New York. —Works: a historical opera, to a Norwegian libretto, Leif Erikson (Seattle, Dec. 10, 1910; Brooklyn Academy of Music, Oct. 4, 1924; both performances in the Norwegian language); a 1-act romantic opera, All in a Garden Fair (Seattle, Nov. 1, 1913); a pantomime, Woman's Wiles, or Love Triumphant; a piano trio; Suite moderne for violin and piano; Rapsodie norvégienne for violin and piano; piano pieces (Norwegian Dances, 3 nocturnes, etc.); songs (Arabian Love Songs for 4 solo voices); etc. —Cf. E. E. Hipsher, American Opera and its Composers (Philadelphia, 1934, pp. 404-07).

Töpfer, Johann Gottlob, famous German organist and writer on organ building; b. Niederrossla, Dec. 4, 1791; d. Weimar, June 8, 1870. He studied with the cantor Schlömilch; then at Weimar with Destouches and A. E. Müller; also attended the Weimar Seminary, where he became teacher of music in 1817; from 1830 was town organist of Weimar. An expert on organ construction, he wrote Die Orgelbaukunst (1833); Die Scheibler'sche Stimm-Methode (1842); Die Orgel; Zweck und Beschaffenheit ihrer Theile (1843); Lehrbuch der Orgelbaukunst (a fundamental work, 1855; 4 vols.; 2nd ed. by M. Allihn, 1888; 3rd ed. by P. Smets, 1934-39); also a Theoretisch-praktische Organistenschule (1845); Allgemeines und voll- ständiges Choralbuch (a 4, with organ interludes); a cantata, Die Orgelweihe; Konzertstück for organ; sonatas, fantasias, preludes, fugues, etc., for organ; piano pieces. —Cf. A. W. Gottschalg, Johann Gottlob Töpfer (Berlin, 1870).

Toradze, David, Soviet Georgian composer; b. Tiflis, April 14, 1922; studied at the Tiflis Cons.; then at the Moscow Cons. with Glière; in 1954, became prof. at the Tiflis Cons. —Works: opera, The Call of the Mountains (Tiflis, Nov. 20, 1947); ballet, For Peace (Tiflis, June 17, 1953); a symph. (1946); chamber music; choruses; songs.

Torchi (töhr'kē), Luigi, eminent Italian musicologist; b. Mondano, near Bologna, Nov. 7, 1858; d. Bologna, Sept. 18, 1920. He studied at the Liceo Musicale of Bologna, the Naples Cons. (composition with Serrao), and the Leipzig Cons. (Jadassohn and Reinecke); from 1885-91, prof. of music history and esthetics, also librarian, at the Liceo Musicale Rossini in Pesaro; from 1895-1916, held a similar position at Bologna Cons., also teaching composition there. He was twice elected president of the Accademia Filarmonica of Bologna. From its foundation (1894) until 1904 he was ed. of the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana,' for which he wrote many valuable essays. In 1890 he publ. R. Wagner: Studio critico (1890; 2nd ed., 1913). Besides a collection of 'Eleganti canzoni ed arie italiane' of the 17th century (Milan, 1894) and 'A Collection of Pieces for the Violin Composed by Italian Masters of the 17th and 18th Centuries' (London; both with piano accompaniment by Torchi), in 1897 he began publishing an important anthology, 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia,' which reached 7 vols. as follows: vol. I, sacred and secular polyphonic compositions of the 14th, 15th, and 16th centuries; vol. II, polyphonic compositions of the 16th century; vol. III, compositions for organ and cembalo of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries; vol. IV, madrigals, stage works, etc. of the 17th century; vol. V, compositions for 1 or more voices of the 17th century; vol. VI, Peri's Euridice and Monteverdi's Combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda and Ballo delle Ingrate; vol. VII, instrumental music of the 17th century. He also compiled vols. II and III of the catalogue of the library of the Liceo Musicale of Bologna (1890-95). —Cf. F. Vatielli, Necrologia di Luigi Torchi, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1920).

Torelli (Torrelli), Gasparo, Italian composer; b. Borgo San Sepolcro, near Lucca, where he lived as music teacher. Publ. Brevi concetti d'amore (madrigals a 5; 1598); 4 books of Canzonette a 3 (1593-1608); and I fidi amanti, 'favola pastorale' (in madrigal style, 4 voices; 1600; reprinted in Torchi's 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' vol. 4).

Torelli, Giuseppe, Italian violinist and composer, probable originator of the solo concerto for violin; b. Verona, April 22, 1658; d. Bologna, Feb. 8, 1709. He studied in Bologna, where he was a member of the Accademia Filarmonica and viola player at the church of S. Petronio (1686-95). Made a concert tour in Germany in 1695, and became Kapellmeister to the Margrave of Brandenburg at Ansbach (1697-99). From 1699 he was in Vienna, where he produced an oratorio; returned to Bologna in 1701. He had generally been regarded as the originator of the 'concerto grosso' until Arnold Schering, in 1903, showed that Stradella, who died in 1682, had written such works. But Torelli's Concerti grossi, op. 8 (1709), were the first to be publ. (Corelli's op. 6 was not publ. until 1712, though composed earlier). —Publ. works: op. 1, Balletti da camera a 3 violini e basso continuo; op. 2, Concerto da camera a 2 violini e basso (1686); op. 3, Sinfonie a 2-4 stromenti (1687); op. 4, Concertino per camera a violino e violoncello; op. 5, 6 sinfonie a 3, e 6 concerti a 4 (1692); op. 6, Concerti musicali a 4 (with organ); op. 7, Capricci musicali per camera a violino e viola ovvero arciliuto; op. 8, Concerti grossi con una pastorale per il Santissimo Natale (1709), written for 2 violini concertanti, 2 violini di ripieno, viola, and continuo. The so-called 'Christmas Eve Concerto' (op. 8, No. 6) and other works from op. 8 and op. 6 have been reprinted in modern eds. —Cf. A. Schering, Geschichte des Instrumentalkonzerts (1903); F. Vatielli, Arte e vita musicale a Bologna (Bologna, 1927); R. Brenzoni, Giuseppe Torelli, musicista veronese, in 'Note d'Archivio per la storia musicale' (1936); F. Giegling, Giuseppe Torelli, Ein Beitrag zur Entwicklungsgeschichte des italienischen Konzerts (Kassel, 1949).

Torner, Eduardo Martínez, Spanish folklore specialist; b. Oviedo, April 8, 1888; d. London, Feb. 17, 1955. He was a pupil of Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum in Paris; returned to Spain in 1914 and settled in Madrid. Publ. the folksong collections Cancionero musical de la lirica popular asturiana (Madrid, 1920); 40 Canciones españolas (1924), and Cancionero musical (1928); also the essay, Temas folklóricos;

música y poesía (1935); edited and arranged for piano selected pieces from tablature books of the 16th century, and publ. them under the title Colección de vihuelistas españoles del siglo XVI (Madrid, 1923).

Torrance, Rev. George William, Irish clergyman and composer; b. Rathmines, near Dublin, 1835; d. Kilkenny, Aug. 20, 1907. Chorister at Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin; organist at St. Andrew's and St. Anne's; studied music at Leipzig, 1856; ordained as a priest, 1866; in 1869 emigrated to Melbourne, Australia, where he remained till 1897; appointed chaplain to the bishop of Ossory in 1897; in 1900 made Prebendary of Killamery, canon of St. Canice's Cathedral and librarian of St. Canice's Library, Kilkenny. Torrance's madrigal Dry be that tear won the Molyneux Prize and the medal of the Madrigal Society in 1903.

Torre Franca, Fausto, eminent Italian musicologist; b. Monteleone Calabro, Feb. 1, 1883; d. Rome, Nov. 26, 1955. Trained as an engineer, he took up music under E. Lena in Turin (harmony and counterpoint) and also studied by himself. It was through his initiative that the first chair of musicology was established in Italy; in 1913, lecturer at the Univ. of Rome; from 1914-24, prof. of music history at the Cons. di S. Pietro in Naples, and from 1915 also librarian there; from 1924 librarian of the Milan Cons. From 1907 he was ed. for several years of the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana.' In 1941 he was appointed prof. of music history at the Univ. of Florence. —Books: La Vita musicale dello spirito (Turin, 1910); L'Intuizione musicale quale sintesi a priori estetica (1911); Giacomo Puccini e l'opera internazionale (1912); Le Sinfonie dell'Imbrattacarte, G. B. Sannmartini (1915); Le Origine italiane del romanticismo musicale (1930); Il Segreto del quattrocento (1939).

Torri, Pietro, Italian composer; b. Peschiera, c. 1665; d. Munich, July 6, 1737. In 1689 he became organist at Munich; in 1696 he was conductor for the carnival season at Hanover; in 1703 he was appointed chamber music director at Munich, following the Elector to Brussels upon the latter's exile. In Brussels he produced the oratorio Les Vanités du monde (1706); from 1715 again in Munich, where he was named Kapellmeister in 1732. He was strongly influenced by A. Steffani (q.v.). He composed 26 operas, of which the following were produced by him at the Munich Court Opera: La Merope, Lucio Vero (Oct. 12, 1720), and Griselda

(Oct. 12, 1723); also some chamber duets. Selections from the operas were publ. by H. Junker in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vols. 19 and 20). —Cf. H. Junker, Zwei 'Griselda' -Opern, in the 'Sanderger-Festschrift' (1918); K. Kremer, Pietro Torri und seine Kammermusikwerke (dissertation; Munich, 1956).

Torrington, Frederick Herbert, organist and conductor; b. Dudley, Worcestershire, England, Oct. 20, 1837; d. Toronto, Canada, Nov. 19, 1917. After studying with James Fitzgerald, he became in 1853 organist and choirmaster at St. Anne's, Bewdley; from 1856-68, organist of Great St. James' Church, Montreal, Canada, giving organ recitals, also acting as solo violinist, conductor, and bandmaster; was appointed organist and music director at King's Chapel, Boston, and held the position until 1873, teaching at the New England Cons. From 1873, organist and choirmaster at the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, and conductor of the Toronto Philharmonic Society; founded the Toronto College of Music (1888). —Works: services, hymn tunes, choruses, songs, organ music, etc.

Tortelier, Paul, French cellist; b. Paris, March 21, 1914. He entered the Paris Cons., and won 1st prize for cello at the age of 16; was engaged as 1st cellist by the Boston Symph. Orch. in 1935, but went back to France in 1939; in 1955 he settled in Israel; continued to give concerts in Europe. Among his works are a cello concerto and other pieces for his instrument.

Tosar, Hector, Uruguayan composer; b. Montevideo, July 18, 1923. He studied piano and composition in his native city; traveled to Brazil in 1943 as pianist and composer. He adopted a neo-Classical idiom in his works, not neglecting the local melo-rhythms in thematic material. His works include 2 symphonies (2nd for string orch.), a concertino for piano and orch.; Danza criolla for orch.; Nocturne and Scherzo for violin, clarinet, and piano; piano pieces; songs.

Tosatti, Vieri, Italian composer; b. Rome, Nov. 2, 1920. He studied piano and composition with Pizzetti in Rome. In his compositions he exploits sensational or morbid subjects, setting them to pungent music, with a liberal application of special effects. —Works: Il Concerto della demenza, for narrator, 2 pianos, and chamber orch. (1946); music drama Dionisio (1947); 'paradoxical drama' Il Sistema della dolcezza (1949);

TOSCANINI

'boxing opera' La Partita a pugni (Fist Fight; Venice Festival of Contemporary Music, Sept. 8, 1953); also a piano concerto (1945), a quintet for clarinet, bassoon, violin, viola, and cello (1948), piano pieces, etc.

Toscanini, Arturo, one of the greatest conductors of modern times; b. Parma, Italy, March 25, 1867; d. New York, Jan. 16, 1957. He entered the Parma Cons. at the age of 9, studying the cello with Carini and composition with Dacci; graduated in 1885 as winner of the 1st prize for cello. In 1886 he was engaged as cellist for the Italian opera in Rio de Janeiro; on the 2nd night of the spring season (June 25, 1886) he was unexpectedly called upon to substitute for the regular conductor, when the latter left the podium at the end of the introduction after the public hissed him; the opera was Aida, and Toscanini led it without difficulty; he was rewarded by an ovation and was engaged to lead the rest of the season. Returning to Italy, he was engaged to conduct the opera at the Teatro Cavignani in Turin, and later conducted the Municipal Orch. there. Although still very young, he quickly established a fine reputation. For 10 seasons, between 1887 and 1898, he conducted opera and symph. orchestras in major Italian cities. On May 21, 1892 he led the world première of Pagliacci in Milan, and on Feb. 1, 1896, the première of Puccini's La Bohème in Turin. He also conducted the Italian premières of Götterdämmerung (Turin, 1895) and Siegfried (Milan, 1899). In 1898, the impresario Gatti-Casazza engaged him as chief conductor for La Scala, Milan, where he remained until 1903, and again from 1906 to 1908. In the interim, he conducted opera in Buenos Aires (1903-04 and 1906). When Gatti-Casazza became general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company (1908), he invited Toscanini as principal conductor; Toscanini's début in N. Y. was in Aida (Nov. 16, 1908). While at the Metropolitan Opera, Toscanini conducted 2 world premières, Puccini's The Girl of the Golden West (Dec. 10, 1910) and Giordano's Madame Sans-Gêne (Jan. 25, 1915); he also brought out for the first time in America Gluck's Armide (Nov. 14, 1910), Wolf-Ferrari's Le Donne curiose (Jan. 13, 1912); and Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov (March 19, 1913). On April 13, 1913 he gave his first concert in N. Y. as a symph. conductor, leading Beethoven's 9th symph. In 1915 he returned to Italy; during the season of 1920-21 he brought the Scala Orch. on a tour of the U. S. and Canada.

From 1921 to 1929 he was artistic director of La Scala; there, he conducted the posthumous première of Boito's opera Nerone, which he himself completed for performance (May 1, 1924). In 1926-27 he was guest conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic Orch., returning in the following season as associate conductor with Mengelberg. After the fusion of the N. Y. Philharmonic and the N. Y. Symph. in 1928, Toscanini was engaged as permanent conductor of the newly organized ensemble; in the spring of 1930 he took the orchestra on a tour of Europe; he resigned this position in 1936. Deeply touched by the plight of the Jews in Germany, he acceded to the request of the violinist Huberman, founder of the Palestine Symph. Orch., to conduct the inaugural concert of that orch. at Tel Aviv (Dec. 26, 1936). In the meantime he had filled summer engagements at the Salzburg Festivals (1933, 1935, 1936, 1937). Returning to the U. S., he became musical director of the NBC Symph. Orch., a radio orch. that had been organized especially for him, giving his opening concert on Dec. 25, 1937; in 1940 he took it on a tour of South America. He continued to lead the NBC Symphony until the end of his active career; he conducted his last concert from Carnegie Hall, N. Y., on April 4, 1954 (10 days after his 87th birthday), and then sent a doleful letter of resignation to the NBC, explaining the impossibility of further appearances. He died in his sleep, a few weeks before his 90th birthday. —Toscanini was a unique figure among conductors; undemonstrative in his handling of the orchestra, he possessed an amazing energy and power of command. He demanded absolute perfection, and he erupted in violence when he could not obtain from the orchestra what he wanted (a lawsuit was brought against him in Milan, when he accidentally injured the concertmaster with a broken violin bow). Despite the vituperation he at times poured on his musicians, he was affectionately known to them as 'The Maestro,' who could do no wrong. His ability to communicate his desires to singers and players was extraordinary, and even the most celebrated opera stars or instrumental soloists never dared to question his authority. Owing to extreme near-sightedness, Toscanini committed all scores to memory; his repertory embraced virtually the entire field of Classical and Romantic music; his performances of Italian operas, of Wagner's music dramas, of Beethoven's symphonies, and of modern Italian works were especially inspiring. Among the moderns, he conducted works by Richard Strauss, Debussy, Ravel, Prokofiev, Stravinsky, Samuel Barber, Roy Harris, Howard Hanson, etc. In his social philosophy, he was intransigently democratic; he refused to conduct in Germany under the Nazi regime. He militantly opposed Fascism in Italy, but he never abandoned his Italian citizenship, despite his long years of residence in America. —Bibliography: G. M. Ciampelli, Arturo Toscanini (Milan, 1923); E. Cozzani, Arturo Toscanini (Milan, 1927); T. Nicotra, Arturo Toscanini (transl. from the Italian, N. Y., 1929); D. Bonardi, Toscanini (Milan, 1929); Paul Stefan, Arturo Toscanini (Vienna, 1936; in English, N. Y., 1936); L. Gilman, Toscanini and Great Music (N. Y., 1938); S. W. Hoeller, Arturo Toscanini (pictorial biography; N. Y., 1943); A. Della Corte, Toscanini (Vicenza, 1946); G. M. Ciampelli, Toscanini (Milan, 1946); D. Nives, Arturo Toscanini (Milan, 1946); A. Segre, Toscanini: the First Forty Years, and H. Taubman, Toscanini in America, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1947); F. Sacchi, Toscanini (Milan, 1951; publ. in English under the title The Magic Baton: Toscanini's Life for Music, N. Y., 1957, with supplementary data); David Ewen, The Story of Arturo Toscanini (N. Y., 1951); H. Taubman, The Maestro: the Life of Arturo Toscanini (N. Y., 1951); S. Chotzinoff, Toscanini: An Intimate Portrait (N. Y., 1956); R. C. Marsh, Toscanini and the Art of Orchestral Performance (Philadelphia, 1956); also articles in every book on conductors publ. in the 20th century.

Toselli, Enrico, Italian pianist and composer; b. Florence, March 13, 1883; d. there, Jan. 15, 1926. He studied with Sgambati and Martucci; gave concerts in Italy as pianist, and composed a number of songs; of these, Serenata became enormously popular; also wrote the symph. poem Fuoco (after d'Annunzio) and an opera, La Principessa bizzarra (Milan, 1913). In 1907 he married the former Crown Princess Luise of Saxony, creating an international furor; wrote an account of this affair, Il mio matrimonio con Luisa di Sassonia (Milan, 1918).

Tosi, Pier Francesco, Italian contralto (castrato) and singing teacher; b. Bologna, 1647; d. Faenza, April, 1732. He studied with his father, Giuseppe Felice Tosi; sang successfully in Italy, Dresden, etc., and in 1692 settled in London, where he gave regular concerts, and was highly esteemed as a vocal teacher. He owes his fame chiefly to the work Opinioni de' cantori antichi e moderni o sieno osservazioni sopra il canto figurato (Bologna, 1723; in English [Galliard], 1742, as Observations on the Florid Song, etc.; in German [Agricola] as Anleitung zur Singkunst, 1757; in French [Lemaire] as L'Art du Chant, Opinions . . ., 1774. The Italian ed. was reprinted in 1904; the English, 1906).

Tosti, Sir Francesco Paolo, Italian singing master and vocal composer; b. Ortona, Abruzzi, April 9, 1846; d. Rome, Dec. 2, 1916. He was a pupil, from 1858, of the Collegio di S. Pietro a Majella, Naples, and was appointed sub-teacher (maestrino) by Mercadante. He visited London in 1875, had great success in concerts, and settled there as a teacher, becoming singing master to the Royal Family in 1880, and prof. of singing at the Royal Academy of Music in 1894; was knighted in 1908. In 1913 he returned to Italy, taking up his residence in Rome. Besides many original songs, both English and Italian, he published a collection of 'Canti popolari abruzzesi.' His songs were highly popular; some of the best-known are I'll never, Goodbye, Mattinata, and Vorrei morire. —Cf. E. A. Mario, Francesco Paolo Tosti (Siena, 1947).

Totenberg, Roman, violinist; b. Lodz, Poland, Jan. 1, 1913. Pupil of Michalowiec at the Chopin Music School in Warsaw, of Flesch at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin, and of Enesco in Paris; début with the Warsaw Philharmonic in 1925; won the Mendelssohn Prize in 1932. Made his American début at N. Y. in 1935; 1935-36, toured with K. Szymanowski (q.v.); 1937-38, toured the U. S. and South America. In 1947 he became head of the violin dept. of the Santa Barbara, Cal., Music Academy, but continued his career as concert violinist.

Tottmann, Albert (Karl), German violinist and writer on music; b. Zittau, July 31, 1837; d. Leipzig, Feb. 26, 1917. He studied in Dresden, and at the Leipzig Cons. (with Hauptmann); was a violinist in the Gewandhaus Orch. —Publications: Kritisches Repertorium der gesammten Violin- und Bratschen-Litteratur (1873; 3rd ed., 1900, as Führer durch die Violin-Literatur; a compendious and valuable work); Abriss der Musikgeschichte (1883); Der Schulgesang und seine Bedeutung für die Verstandes und Herzensbildung der Jugend (1887; 2nd ed., 1904); Das Büchlein von der Geige (1890; 2nd, augmented ed., 1904); Mozart's Zaubrerflöte (1908); many essays in journals, etc.; composed a melodrama, Dornröschen, for soli, chorus, and orch.; sacred and secular choruses; songs.

Toulmouche (tool-moosh'), Frédéric (Michel), French composer; b. Nantes, Aug. 3, 1850; d. Paris, Feb. 20, 1909. He studied with Victor Massé in Paris; in 1894 became director of the theater 'Menus-Plaisirs.' He composed several opéras-comiques: Le Moultier de St.-Guignolet (Brussels, 1885), La Veillée des noces (Paris, 1888; in London, 1892, as The Wedding Eve), L'Âme de la patrie (St. Brieuc, 1892), La Perle du Cantal (Paris, 1895), La St.-Valentin (Paris, 1895); about a dozen operettas and some ballets.

Tourel, Jennie, mezzo-soprano; b. Montreal, Canada, June 22, 1910, of Russian-French parentage. She was taken to Paris as a child, and studied voice there with Anna El-Tour (q.v.); her professional nom de scène, Tourel, is an anagram of her teacher's name. She made her operatic début as Carmen at the Paris Opéra-Comique in 1933; left France in June, 1940, shortly before the German occupation, and after a brief stay in Lisbon, came to the U. S.; became an American citizen in 1946; made numerous tours in the U. S. in recitals and as soloist with orchestras.

Tourjée (toor-zha'), Eben, American music educator; b. Warwick, R. I., June 1, 1834; d. Boston, April 12, 1891. While working in a cotton factory in Harrisville, R. I., he sang and played the organ in church; then studied music in Providence, becoming clerk in a music store there; then moved to Newport, R. I., as organist and teacher; in 1861, appointed music director of the East Greenwich Seminary; then visited Europe and had lessons from A. Haupt in Berlin; in 1864, established the Music Institute of Providence (developed from the music department of the E. Greenwich Seminary), which later became the Providence Cons. of Music; 1867, settled in Boston and founded there (with R. Goldbeck) the New England Cons. of Music, which he directed till his death. He assisted Patrick S. Gilmore (q.v.) in organizing the 2 great peace jubilees in Boston (1869, 1872). He was the first president of the Music Teachers National Association (1876), and dean of the College of Music of Boston Univ. He was made Mus. Doc. by Wesleyan Univ. —Cf. 'Dictionary of American Biography' (vol. XVIII).

Tournemire (toorn-mër'), Charles, French organist and composer; b. Bordeaux, Jan. 22, 1870; d. Arcachon, Nov. 3, 1939. He was a pupil of César Franck at the Paris Cons., winning the 1st prize for organ in 1891; also studied composition with d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum. In 1898 he succeeded Pierné as organist at Ste. Clotilde. His dramatic cantata, Le Sang de la sirène, won the Prize of the City of Paris (performed Nov. 17, 1904). As an organ virtuoso he toured throughout Europe. He was prof. of ensemble playing at the Paris Cons. —Other works: opera, Les Dieux sont morts (Paris Opéra, March 19, 1924); 8 symphonies (no. 5 is the 'Mountain Symph. '); Psalm 57 for mixed chorus a cappella; sextet for piano and winds; piano quartet; for organ: 51 Offices de l'année liturgique (L'Orgue mystique); 4 Pièces symphoniques; etc. Also a book, César Franck (Paris, 1931). —Cf. F. Pecters, L'Œuvre d'orgue de Charles Tournemire, in 'Musica Sacra' (Bruges, 1940).

Tours (toor), Berthold, violinist, composer, and musical editor; b. Rotterdam, Dec. 17, 1838; d. London, March 11, 1897. Pupil of his father, Barthélemy Tours (1797-1864), Verhulst, and of the Conservatories at Brussels and Leipzig; went to London in 1861 as an orch. player; in 1878 became musical adviser to Novello & Co., and editor of their publications. —Works: services, anthems, hymn tunes; piano pieces; primers on the violin and the viola.

Tours, Frank E., son of the preceding; b. London, Sept. 1, 1877. Pupil of Stanford, Parratt, and Bridge at the Royal College of Music; from 1897-1904, conductor of various light opera companies in London, then came to N. Y. as music director of Broadway productions. Later he entered the motion-picture field and was with Paramount for 6 years (3 years in London) as composer and music director. Besides several musical plays, he wrote successful songs (Mother o' Mine, Beyond the Sunset, Red Rose, In Flanders Fields, etc.).

Tourte (töört), François, b. Paris, 1747; d. there, April, 1835. This famous maker of violin bows was the creator of the modern bow, the model for all succeeding bow-makers. The shape and inward curve of the stick, the selection and preparation of the wood (Pernambuco), the length of the bow and all its modern fittings, are the product of his constructive genius.

Tovey, Sir Donald Francis, eminent English musical scholar; b. Eton, July 17, 1875; d. Edinburgh, July 10, 1940. He studied privately with Sophie Weisse (piano), Sir W. Parratt (counterpoint), James Higgs (composition) until 1894, when he won the Nettleship scholarship at Balliol College, Oxford; graduated with Classical Honors (B. A., 1898). In 1900-01 he gave a series of chamber music concerts in London, at which he performed several of his own works; in 1901-02 he gave similar concerts in Berlin and Vienna; played his piano concerto in 1903 under Henry Wood and in 1906 under Hans Richter; from 1906 to 1912 he gave in London regular series of chamber music concerts, known as 'The Chelsea Concerts.' In 1914 he succeeded Niecks (q.v.) as Reid Prof. of music at Edinburgh Univ. (see Reid, John); there he established the 'Reid Symph. Concerts,' for which he organized in 1917 the 'Reid Symph. Orch.' of 50 musicians. He made his American debut as pianist in 1925, and in 1927-28 made a tour of the U. S. He was knighted in 1935. Though highly esteemed as a composer, he was most widely known as a writer and lecturer on music, his analytical essays being models of their kind. Besides much chamber music and several piano pieces (a sonata, Balliol Dances for 4 hands, etc.), he composed an opera, The Bride of Dionysus (Edinburgh, April 25, 1932); a symph. (1913); a cello concerto (première by Pablo Casals, Tovey conducting, Edinburgh, Nov. 22, 1934); etc. He publ. a collection of 16th-century church music, Laudate Pueri (Part I of 'Northlands Singing Book'), and ed. Bach's Kunst der Fuge. He wrote most of the music articles for the 'Encyclopaedia Britannica' (from the 11th ed.). Contributed essays on Schubert (1927) and Gluck (1934) to Foss' Heritage of Music. —Books: A Companion to Bach's Art of Fugue (1931); A Companion to Beethoven's Pianoforte Sonatas (1931); Musical Form and Matter (1934); Normality and Freedom in Music (1936); Essays in Musical Analysis, 6 vols. (1935-39): I and II, orchestral works; III, concertos; IV, polyphony and illustrative music; V, vocal music; VI, supplement, index, and glossary. Posthumous publications: Walter Parratt: Master of Music (with G. Parratt; London, 1941); A Musician Talks (London, 1941); Musical Articles from the Encyclopaedia Britannica (London, 1944); Beethoven (London, 1945); Essays in Musical Analysis: Chamber Music (London, 1944); Essays and Lectures on Music (London, 1949; U. S. ed. as The Main Stream of Music). —(Cf. M. Grierson, Donald Francis Tovey (London, 1952).

Townsend, Douglas, American composer and musicologist; b. New York, Nov. 8, 1921; studied at the High School of Music and Art, N. Y., graduating in 1941; then took lessons in composition with Tibor Serly, Stefan Wolpe, Felix Greissle, and Otto Lucning; also with Aaron Copland in Tanglewood (1946) and with Louis Gruenberg in California (1948); became active in N. Y. as theater conductor, arranger, composer, and music editor; arranged for performance and publication works by Pergolesi, Süssmayr, Danzi, Tommaso Giordani, A. Scarlatti, Rosetti, etc. —Compositions: piano sonatina (1945); septet for brass (1947); Sinfonietta (1949); divertimento for string and wind instruments (1950); Fantasy for chamber orch. (1951); The Infinite, ballet (N. Y., Feb. 13, 1952); Canzona for flute, viola, and bassoon (1954); Music for Recitation, to words by Walt Whitman (1955); Lima Beans, chamber opera (N. Y., Jan. 7, 1956); Ballet Suite for 3 clarinets (1956); Adagio for Strings (1956); duo for violas (1957); chamber concerto No. 1, for violin and string quartet (1957); Tower Music for brass quintet (1957); 4 fantasies on American songs, for piano 4 hands (1957); symph. for string orch. (N. Y., Nov. 29, 1958); film music.

Toye, (John) Francis, English music critic; b. Winchester, Jan. 27, 1883. He was a pupil of S. P. Waddington and E. J. Dent; became a critic for various papers in London (from 1925 for the 'Morning Post,' and 1937-39 for the 'Daily Telegraph'); in 1923, lectured on modern music in the U. S.; 1939-46 lived in Rio de Janeiro; from 1946, in Florence. —Books: The Well-Tempered Musician (1925); Giuseppe Verdi, His Life and Works (1931); Rossini, a Study in Tragi-comedy (1934); For What We Have Received (autobiography; N. Y., 1948); Italian Opera (London, 1952); Truly Thankful? (autobiographical; London, 1957).

Toye, Geoffrey, English conductor and composer; brother of Francis Toye; b. Winchester, Feb. 17, 1889; d. London, June 11, 1942. He studied at the Royal College of Music in London; became a conductor at various theaters there; was manager of opera productions at Sadler's Wells. He wrote an opera, The Red Pen (broadcast from London, Feb. 7, 1927); a ballet; and some other works.

Trabaci (Trabacci), Giovanni Maria, Italian composer; b. Montepeloso, c. 1580; d. Naples, Dec. 31, 1647. He studied with Giovanni Macque; became organist at the Viceregal Chapel in Naples in 1601; after Macque's death (1614) he succeeded him as choir director there. During the rebellion of the Neapolitan populace against the fruit tax of 1647, Trabaci fled to the monastery of the Trinità degli Spagnuoli, where he died. The bulk of his music consists of psalms, Masses, motets, and madrigals. Two keyboard publications are extant: Ricerche, canzone francese, capricci, canti fermi, gagliarde, partite diverse, etc., Libro primo (Naples, 1603) and Il secondo libro di ricerche ed altri varii capricci (Naples, 1615). Some of his vocal works were publ. by Pannain in 'Istituzioni e monumenti dell'arte musicale italiana' (vol. 5); these include 12 motets a 5, 4 a 6, and 4 a 8; also two Masses for double chorus. Keyboard works are reprinted in L. Torchi, 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. 3), in Tagliapietra, 'Antologia di musica antica e moderna' (vol. 5), and in Davison and Apel, 'Historical Anthology of Music.' Trabaci's canzonas include examples of rhythmic variants of a single theme ('variation canzonas'), anticipating Frescobaldi in this respect. — Cf. W. Apel, Neapolitan Links between Cabezon and Frescobaldi, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1938).

Traetta (Trajetta), Filippo (Philip), Italian musician; son of Tommaso Traetta; b. Venice Jan. 8, 1777; d. Philadelphia, Jan. 9, 1854. Pupil of Fenaroli and Perillo at Venice, later of Piccinni at Naples. Becoming a soldier in the patriot ranks, he was captured and cast into prison; escaped 6 months afterward, and sailed to Boston, settling there in 1799. There he wrote his Vocal Exercises, and Washington's Dead March. Proceeding to New York, he wrote the cantatas The Christian's Joy and Prophecy; also an opera, The Venetian Maskers. Was manager of a traveling theatrical troupe, lived in Virginia for some years, and settled in Philadelphia c. 1828, founding the 'American Conservatorio' with his pupil, U. K. Hill. He produced 2 oratorios, Jerusalem in Affliction (1828) and Daughter of Zion (1829); later 2 cantatas, The Nativity and The Day of Rest; also instrumental and vocal quartets, trios, and duets; songs; etc.; and publ. Rudiments of the Art of Singing (2 vols.; 1841-43) and An Introduction to the Art and Science of Music (1829) for his Cons. (he was active as a singing-teacher until his death). — Cf. F. L. Ritter, Music in America (1883); also 'Dictionary of American Biography' XVIII (1936).

Traetta, Tommaso (Michele Francesco Saverio), Italian composer; b. Bitonto, Naples, March 30, 1727; d. Venice, April 6, 1779. He entered the Cons. di Loreto in Naples at the age of 11, and was there a pupil of Durante. His first opera, Il Farnace, was produced at the Teatro San Carlo with fine success, on Nov. 4, 1751; there followed several more operas in Naples, and later in other Italian cities: Buovo d'Antona (Venice, Dec. 27, 1758), Ippolito ed Aricia (Parma, May 9, 1759), etc. In 1758 he was appointed maestro to the Duke of Parma, and singing master to the princesses; his Armida was staged in Vienna (Jan. 3, 1761) with excellent success, and he was commissioned to write another opera for Vienna, Ifigenia in Tauride, which was produced there on Oct. 4, 1763. He settled in Venice in 1765, and was director of the Cons. dell' Ospedaleto there for 3 years. In 1768 he was engaged for the court of Catherine the Great as successor to Galuppi, and arrived in St. Petersburg in the autumn of that year. He staged several of his operas there (mostly versions of works previously performed in Italy); he also arranged music for various occasions (anniversary of the coronation of Catherine the Great, celebration of a victory over the Turkish fleet, etc.). He left Russia in 1775, and went to London, where he produced the operas Germondo, Telemacco, and I Capricci del Sesso (all in 1777) without much success; returned to Italy, and produced 3 more operas in Venice; he wrote 48 operas in all. In many respects, he was an admirable composer, possessing a sense of drama and a fine melodic gift. In musical realism, he adopted certain procedures that Gluck was to employ successfully later on; he was highly regarded by his contemporaries. Besides operas, he wrote an oratorio, Salomone (1768), a Stabat Mater, and other church music. A selection of excerpts from Traetta's operas was edited by H. Goldschmidt in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (XIV, 1 and XVII). — Cf. V. Capruzzi, Traetta e la musica (Naples, 1878); C. H. Bitter, Die Reform der Oper durch Gluck und Wagner (Brunswick, 1884); H. Kretzschmar, Geschichte der Oper (1919); A. Nuovo, Tommaso Traetta (Rome, 1922); A. Damerini, Un Precursore italiano di Gluck: Tommaso Traetta, in 'Il Pianoforte' (July, 1927) and Tommaso Traetta, in the 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale' (July, 1927); V. Raeli, Tommaso Traetta, in the 'Rivista nazionale di musica' (March, 1927); A. Bonaventura, Tommaso Traetta, in 'Pensiero musicale' (April-May, 1927); V. Raeli, The Bicentenary of Tommaso Traetta, in the 'Chesterian' (1927); A. Mooser, Annales de la musique et des musiciens en Russie au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (Geneva, 1949-51; vol. II, pp. 87-132); F. Schlitzer, ed., Tommaso Traetta, Leonardo Leo, Vin- cenzo Bellini: Notizie e documenti (Siena, 1952); E. Saracino, Tommaso Traetta (Bionto, 1954).

Tragó (trah-göh'), José, Spanish pianist and pedagogue; b. Madrid, Sept. 25, 1856; d. there, Jan. 3, 1934. He studied at the Conservatories of Madrid and Paris, winning 1st prizes for piano playing at both; début in Paris, 1880; noted as a pedagogue; was prof. at the Madrid Cons. Among his pupils were Manuel de Falla and Joaquín Turina.

Trambitsky, Victor Nikolayevitch, Russian composer; b. Brest-Litovsk, Feb. 12, 1895. He studied with Kalafati at the St. Petersburg Cons. In 1925 he moved to Sverdlovsk, as prof. at the Cons. there. —Works: operas: Gadfly (Sverdlovsk, 1929), Orlena (Sverdlovsk, 1935), Storm (Sverdlovsk, 1942); a symph. (1945); Symphonic Pictures (1955); a violin concerto (1921); arrangements of Russian folksongs.

Tranchell, Peter (Andrew), composer; b. Cuddalore, British India, July 14, 1922. He studied at Kings College, Cambridge; Mus. Bac. (1949). Most of his works are evocative of old English balladry; yet he has also experimented with modern techniques, as in his 6 piano pieces entitled Dodecafonia. His opera The Mayor of Casterbridge was produced in Cambridge, July 30, 1951. Other works include ballets; a trio for violin, horn, and piano; a triolet for flute, clarinet, and piano; songs from Chinese poets with instrumental accompaniment; etc.

Trapp, Max, German composer; b. Berlin, Nov. 1, 1887. He studied piano with Ernst von Dohnányi and composition with Paul Juon; then taught at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik and also at the Cons. of Dortmund; in 1929, became a member of the Berlin Academy of Arts, where he taught a master class in composition (1934-45); from 1951 to 1953 he was on the staff of the Municipal Cons. in Berlin; also was active as a landscape painter. His style is neo-Classical, with a strong polyphonic texture, in the tradition of Max Reger. He wrote 6 symphonies: No. 1, Sinfonia giocosa (1915), No. 2 (1918), No. 3 (1924), No. 4 (1931), No. 5 (1936), No. 6 (1946); 3 concertos for orch. (1934; 1940; 1946); violin concerto (1922); piano concerto (1930); cello concerto (1935); piano quintet (1910); 3 piano quartets; 2 string quartets; piano pieces; songs; a cantata, Vom ewigen Licht (1942). —Cf. W. Matthes, Max Trapp, in 'Zeitschrift für Musik' (Oct., 1937).

Traubel, Helen, American soprano; b. St. Louis, June 20, 1899. She made her concert début at St. Louis in 1925, and appeared for the first time during the regular Metropolitan Opera season, in N. Y., as Sieglinde on Dec. 28, 1939. She made several transcontinental tours; sang in Buenos Aires in 1943; also gave numerous concerts in Europe. She was married to Louis Carpenter in 1922; they were divorced the same year, and in 1938 she married William L. Bass. In 1953 she made appearances in N. Y. night clubs; this prompted objections of the Metropolitan Opera management, and as a result she resigned from the Metropolitan. She publ. the mystery novels The Ptomaine Canary and The Metropolitan Opera Murders.

Trautwein, Traugott, founder (1820) of the music publishing business ('Trautwein'sche Buch- und Musikalien-Handlung') at Berlin, transferred in 1840 to J. Guttentag, and by him in 1858 to Martin Bahn, under whose management it became famous for new editions of early music. After Bahn's death (May 21, 1902) the firm was consolidated with A. Heinrichshofen of Magdeburg.

Travers, John, English organist and composer; b. c. 1703; d. June, 1758. Chorister of St. George's Chapel, Windsor; pupil of M. Greene and Dr. Pepusch; from 1737 organist of the Chapel Royal. Publ. The Whole Book of Psalms for 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 voices, with a thorough bass for the harpsichord (2 vols., 1750) and 18 Canzonets for 2 and 3 voices, the words chiefly by Matthew Prior (1745); 12 voluntaries for organ or harpsichord were publ. posthumously.

Travers, Patricia, American violinist; b. Clifton, N. J., Dec. 5, 1927. She studied with Jacques Gordon, and made her first public appearance with the Detroit Symph. Orch. at the age of 9; gradually developed into a mature artist, and played with numerous orchestras in the U. S. and in Europe; also in recitals.

Trebelli, Zelia (real name, Zelia Gilbert), French mezzo-soprano; b. Paris, 1838; d. Stretat, Aug. 18, 1892. Studied 5 years with Wartel; début Madrid, 1859, as Rosina in Il Barbiere, followed by triumphs in Germany and London (1862). She was long a favorite in London; also toured the United States (1878 and 1884); her last appearance was at Mapleson's benefit concert in London (June, 1889). —Cf. M. de Mensiaux, Trebelli, a biographical sketch (London, 1890).

Treharne, Bryceson, music editor and composer; b. Merthyr Tydfil, Wales, May 30, 1879; d. New York, Feb. 4, 1948. He studied at the Royal College of Music in London, under Parry, Stanford, and Davies. In 1901 he went to Australia, and was for 10 years prof. at the Univ. of Adelaide; returning to Europe in 1911, he lived in Paris, Milan, Vienna, and Munich; at the outbreak of World War I, he was interned in Germany, at Ruhleben. There he wrote nearly 200 songs and other works; an exchange of prisoners of war enabled him to return to England; in 1917 he settled in America; was music editor for the Boston Music Co. and Willis Music Co. (1928-47). Among his songs are Ozymandias, The Fair Circassian, A Lover's Prayer, The Night, Dreams, Love's Tribute, and Renunciation.

Tremblay, George, Canadian-American composer; b. Ottawa, Jan. 14, 1911; studied with his father, a church organist; in 1919 moved to the U. S., eventually settling in Los Angeles. He studied with Schoenberg; wrote his first major work, a string quartet, in the strict 12-tone system (1936). —Other works: 2 symphonies (1940; 1946), 2 wind quintets (1940), 2 piano sonatas (1938), etc.

Trend, John Brande, English hispanist; b. Southampton, Dec. 17, 1887; d. Cambridge, April 20, 1958. He received his education at Cambridge Univ.; spent several years in Spain; in 1933 was appointed prof. of Spanish at Cambridge Univ. —Books: A Picture of Modern Spain: Men and Music (London, 1921); Luis Milan and the Vihuelistas (London, 1925); The Music of Spanish History to 1600 (London, 1926); Manuel de Falla and Spanish Music (N. Y., 1929).

Trento, Vittorio, Italian composer; b. Venice, 1761; d. there, 1833. Pupil of Bertoni; produced several ballets at Venice, followed by a number of cantatas, farces, and comic operas. He was cembalist at the Teatro S. Samuele, Venice, and then at La Fenice; music director of the Italian opera at Amsterdam (1806), and some years later at Lisbon. His most popular stage work was the opera buffa Quanti casi in un sol giorno, ossia Gli assassini (Venice, Dec., 1801), which was also given in London, as Roberto l'Assassino (Feb. 3, 1807). Other operas are: Teresa vedova (Venice, Jan. 13, 1802), Ines de Castro (Leghorn, Nov. 9, 1803), Ifigenia in Aulide (Naples, Nov. 4, 1804), Andromeda (Naples, May 30, 1805), and Le Gelosie villane (Florence, Nov. 2, 1825).

Treu (troy) (Italianized as Fedele), Daniel Gottlieb, German composer; b. Stuttgart, 1695; d. Breslau, Aug. 7, 1749. He studied violin with Kusser, and with Vivaldi at Venice. After bringing out 12 operas at Venice, he took an Italian opera troupe to Breslau, where from 1725-27 he produced his operas Astarte, Coriolano, Ulisse e Telemacco, and Don Chisciotte with much success. In 1727 he became Kapellmeister at Prague; then in Breslau.

Tréville, Yvonne de (real name, Edyth La Gierse), American coloratura soprano; b. (of French father and American mother) Galveston, Texas, Aug. 25, 1881; d. New York, Jan. 25, 1954. She made her début in N. Y. as Marguerite (1898); then went to Paris, where she studied with Madame Marchesi; appeared at the Opéra-Comique as Lakmé (June 20, 1902); sang in Madrid, Brussels, Vienna, Budapest, Cairo, and in Russia; from 1913, gave concert tours in the U. S. and sang in light operas. Her voice had a compass of 3 full octaves, reaching the high G.

Trial (trê-ahl'), Jean-Claude, French composer; b. Avignon, Dec. 13, 1732; d. Paris, June 23, 1771. He studied violin in his native city, then went to Paris, where he became associated with Rameau; was conductor at the Paris Opéra. He wrote several operas: Silvie (Fontainebleau, Oct. 17, 1765), Théonis ou Le Toucher (Paris, Oct. 11, 1767), La Fête de Flore (Paris, June 18, 1770); also instrumental pieces.

Triggs, Harold, American pianist and composer; b. Denver, Col., Dec. 25, 1900. He studied at the Univ. of Chicago and later at the Juilliard Graduate School, N. Y., with Joseph and Rosina Lhévinne, Rubin Goldmark, and others. In 1932 he formed a piano duo with Vera Brodsky (q.v.); settled in N. Y.; taught at Columbia Univ. His compositions include the symph. poem for string orch. The Bright Land (N. Y., March 29, 1942), 2 piano sonatas (1951, 1953), and 18 preludes for piano (1945).

Tritto, Giacomo, Italian composer; b. Altamura, April 2, 1733; d. Naples, Sept. 16, 1824. He studied with Cafaro at the Cons. della Pietà de' Turchini; became subteacher (primo maestrino) and Cafaro's assistant in teaching harmony, also succeeded him as concertmaster at the Teatro San Carlo. From 1799 to 1807 he was principal teacher (primo maestro) at the Cons.; followed Paisiello in 1816 as maestro of the Royal Chapel. Bellini, Spontini, Mercadante, Meyerbeer, and Conti were his pupils. His first opera, La Fedeltà in amore, was performed at Naples in 1764; some 50 others were produced subsequently in Naples, Rome, Venice, Milan, etc.; of these Le Vicende amorose (Rome, 1788) and Gli Americani (Naples, Nov. 4, 1802) were fairly successful. Other works included 3 cantatas, a Mass for double chorus with 2 orchestras, 7 other Masses (3 of them with orch.); 2 Passions with orch., a Te Deum, motets, etc. (none printed). He publ. Partimenti e regole generali per conoscere qual numerica dar si deve ai vari movimenti del basso (1821), and Scuola di contrappunto, ossia Teoria musicale (1823). — Cf. F. Florimo, La Scuola musicale di Napoli, vol. III (Naples, 1880); J. A. de la Fage, in Miscellanées musicales (Paris, 1844); G. de Napoli, Giacomo Tritto, in 'La Lettura' (Oct., 1924) and La Triade melodrammatica altamura [G. Tritto, V. Lavigna, S. Mercadante] (Milan, 1931).

Trneček (trněh'-chěhk), Hanuš, Czech harpist and composer; b. Prague, May 16, 1858; d. there, March 28, 1914. He studied at the Prague Cons.; was harpist at the Hoftheater in Schwerin (1882-88); from 1888 prof. of harp and piano at the Prague Cons. — Works: the operas Der Geiger von Cremona (Schwerin, 1886), Amaranta (Prague, Nov. 16, 1890; in Czech), Andrea Crini (Prague, Feb. 2, 1900), Die gesühnte Schuld (posthumous; not produced); a symphony; a piano concerto; a violin concerto; an orchestral suite; piano pieces; edited Beethoven's piano sonatas for the Prague Cons. series.

Tromlitz, Johann Georg, German flutist and flute maker; b. Gera, Feb. 9, 1726; d. Leipzig, Feb. 4, 1805. He publ. Kurze Abhandlung vom Flötenspielen (1786); Ausführlicher und gründlicher Unterricht die Flöte zu spielen (1791); Über die Flöte mit mehreren Klappen (1800); and articles in the 'Allgemeine Musik-Zeitung' (1799); also 3 concertos for flute and strings; 2 books of sonatas for piano and flute; 6 Partien for flute; songs.

Trotère, Henry (real name, Trotter), English song composer; b. London, Dec. 14, 1855; d. there, April 10, 1912. Some of his songs that enjoyed success were Once for All, Léonore, Ever dear, Asthore, The Deathless Army, Love can wait.

Trotter, Thomas Henry Yorke, English musical educator; b. London, Nov. 6, 1854;

d. there, March 11, 1934. Educated at New College, Oxford (M. A., 1887; Mus. Doc., 1892); studied music with F. E. Gladstone and F. Bridge; principal of the London Academy of Music from 1915, developing there a new system for teaching music, based on ear-training and cultivation of the rhythmic sense; he came to the U. S. and introduced his system at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y. — Books: Constructive Harmony (1911); Rhythmic Gradus; Ear-training and Sight-reading Gradus; The Making of Musicians (1914); Music and Mind (1924).

Troutbeck, Rev. John, English compiler of hymns; b. Blencowe, Cumberland, Nov. 12, 1832; d. London, Oct. 11, 1899. Graduate of Oxford (B. A., 1856; M. A., 1858); from 1865-69, precentor of Manchester Cathedral; in 1869, canon of Westminster. — Publ. 'The Manchester Psalter' (1868); 'Manchester Chant Book' (1871); 'Cathedral Paragraph Psalter'; 'Hymn Book for Use in Westminster Abbey'; Music Primer for Schools, with R. F. Dale (1873; often republ.); Church Choir Training (1879). He made translations of German, French, and Italian opera librettos publ. by Novello. — Cf. the 'Mus. Times' (May and Nov., 1899).

Truhn, Friedrich Hieronymus, German composer and writer on music; b. Elbing, Nov. 14, 1811; d. Berlin, April 30, 1886. He studied with Dehn, Klein, and Mendelssohn; wrote for the Leipzig 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik' during Schumann's editorship; lived chiefly at Berlin, where he founded and conducted the 'Neue Liedertafel'; made a concert tour with Hans von Bülow in 1854. — Works: marionette opera, Der bairische Hiesel (Berlin, 1832); operetta, Der vierjährige Posten (1833); comic opera, Trilby (Berlin, May 22, 1835); melodrama, Kleopatra (Berlin, 1853); also wrote Über Gesangkunst (1885).

Truinet. See Nutter.

Trunk (tröönk), Richard, German critic and conductor; b. Tauberbischofsheim, Baden, Feb. 10, 1879. Pupil of I. Knorr at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt (1894-95); 1896-99, at the Royal Academy in Munich. In 1906 appointed teacher of singing at the Theresien-Gymnasium; 1907-12, music critic of the 'Münchener Post'; 1912-14, conductor of the 'Arion' in New York and of the 'Arion' in Newark. He then returned to Munich; from 1916-22, critic of the Bayreuth

'Staatszeitung'; from 1925-34, co-director of the Rheinische Musikschule in Cologne, head of the choral class at the Hochschule, and conductor of the Cologne 'Männerchorverein'; in 1934 succeeded Hausegger as director of the Akademie der Tonkunst in Munich. After 1945 he went to live in Riederau-am-Ammersee. Composed over 100 songs; also choruses, chamber music, etc.

Trutovsky, Vasily Fedorovitch, Russian composer and collector of folksongs; b. Belgorod, 1740; d. St. Petersburg, 1810. He was the son of an orthodox priest; was a court singer and player on the gusli during the reigns of Empress Elizabeth, Peter III, and Catherine II. His historic achievement was the compilation of the first comprehensive collection of Russian folksongs, in 4 issues (1776, 1778, 1779, 1795). He also was the first in Russia to publish piano pieces; the earlier publications of Russian piano music were anonymous. His Chanson russe variée for harpsichord or piano (St. Petersburg, 1780) was republ. in 'Old Russian Piano Music,' ed. by A. Drozdov and T. Trofimov (Moscow, 1946).

Tschaikowsky. See Tchaikovsky.

Tschirch, (Friedrich) Wilhelm, German choral conductor and composer; b. Lichtenaue, June 8, 1818; d. Gera, Jan. 6, 1892; pupil of the Royal Institute for Church-Music, Berlin; music director at Liegnitz 1843-52; then court conductor at Gera. By invitation of the German-American choral societies, he visited the U. S. in 1869, and produced many of his celebrated men's choruses at N. Y., Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Chicago, etc. He publ. salon pieces for piano under the pseudonym 'Alexander Czernsky.'

Tschudi. See Broadwood.

Tsfasman, Alexander Naumovitch, foremost Russian conductor of jazz music; b. Alexandrovsk, Ukraine, Dec. 14, 1906. He studied piano with Felix Blumenfeld at the Moscow Cons. In 1926 he organized a jazz band in Moscow, and from 1939 to 1946 was music director of the All-Union Radio Jazz-band; toured with it all over Russia. He also composed a concerto for piano and jazz band, and numerous popular songs.

Tsintsadze, Sulkhan, Soviet Georgian cellist and composer; b. Gori, Aug. 23, 1925. He studied cello in Tiflis, and later at the Moscow Cons., graduating in 1950; also studied composition there. — Works: opera, The Golden Fleece (1953); a symph. (1954); piano concerto on native Georgian themes (1954); violin concerto (1947); cello concerto (1947); 4 string quartets; 3 suites for string quartet, on songs of the nations of the Soviet Union; pieces for cello and piano; film music.

Tua (too'-ah), Teresina (real name Maria Felicità), Italian violinist; b. Turin, May 22, 1867. She studied with Massart at the Paris Cons., where she took the 1st prize in 1880; toured the Continent with brilliant success; made her English début at the Crystal Palace, London, May 5, 1883; also appeared in America (1887). In 1889 she married Count Franchi-Verney della Valetta (q.v.), and withdrew from the concert stage till the autumn of 1895, when she set out on a successful European tour, including Russia, where her accompanist and joint artist was Rachmaninoff. Franchi died in 1911; in 1913 she married Emilio Quadrio. She taught at the Milan Cons. from 1915 to 1924, and then at the Santa Cecilia in Rome; subsequently abandoned her career, and entered the convent dell'Adorazione in Rome as Sister Maria di Gesù.

Tubin, Eduard, Swedish composer; b. Tartu (of Estonian parents), June 18, 1905. He studied music with A. Kapp in Estonia and with Kodály in Budapest. In 1944 he returned to Sweden. He wrote 5 symphonies, 2 violin concertos and a double-bass concerto, 2 violin sonatas, saxophone sonatas, ballads and other works for piano, choral pieces and songs.

Tucher (too'-her), Gottlieb, Freiherr von, German writer on music; b. Nuremberg, May 14, 1798; d. Munich, Feb. 17, 1877. He was in the judicial service in Bavaria; from 1856 to 1868 was judge of the Supreme Court of Munich. His musical publications include 'Kirchengesänge der berühmtesten älteren italienischen Meister . . .' (1827; dedicated to Beethoven), and 'Schatz des evangelischen Kirchengesangs' (1848; 2 vols.); he also wrote Über den Gemeindegesang der evangelischen Kirche (1867).

Tucker, Richard, American tenor; b. New York, Aug. 28, 1914. He studied with Paul Althouse. On Jan. 25, 1945 he made his début at the Metropolitan Opera House in La Gioconda; later sang leading parts as a lyric tenor.

Tuckerman, Samuel Parkman, American organist and composer; b. Boston, Feb. 11, 1819; d. Newport, R. I., June 30, 1890. Pupil of Carl Zeuner in Boston; organist and choirmaster of St. Paul's Church, 1840; studied the organ in various English cathedral towns from 1849, received the degree of Mus. Doc., Lambeth, in 1853; returned to his Boston position, and gave lectures on early cathedral music and church music; resided in England 1856-64, and for many years in Switzerland. Wrote much church music and edited 'The Episcopal Harp' (Boston, 1844); 'The National Lyre' (Boston, 1848); 'Cathedral Chants' (1858); 'Trinity Collection of Church Music' (Boston, 1864).

Tuckey, William, English singing master; b. Somersetshire, 1708; d. Philadelphia, Sept. 14, 1781. He claimed to have been a vicar-choral at Bristol Cathedral before going to America, where he was active from 1754; in March of that year he established himself as a singing teacher in New York; he taught the charity pupils at Trinity Church there, also giving performances of church music with orch. On Jan. 16, 1770, he conducted what was probably the 1st performance in America of Handel's Messiah (overture and 16 numbers). He composed a 'Thanksgiving Anthem' (1760), a setting of the 97th Psalm, etc. — Cf. C. G. Sonneck, Early Concert-Life in America (1907).

Tudway, Thomas, English composer; b. 1650; d. Cambridge, Nov. 23, 1726. From 1660 chorister in the Chapel Royal, under Dr. Blow; lay-vicar at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, 1664; organist of King's College, Cambridge, 1670; teacher of choristers there, 1679; prof. of music, Cambridge Univ., 1704; suspended 1706-07, retired 1726. Mus. Bac., Cantab., 1681; Mus. Doc., 1705. He composed services, motets, and anthems; his 'Collection of . . . Services and Anthems used in the Church of England from the Reformation to the Restoration of King Charles II . . .', in 6 MS vols., is in the British Museum.

Tufts, John, American minister and pioneer compiler of church music; b. Medford, Mass., Feb. 26, 1689; d. Amesbury, Mass., Aug. 17, 1750. He graduated from Harvard Univ. in 1708; was ordained minister at Newbury, Mass., in 1714; upon retirement in 1738, he moved to Amesbury, Mass., where he settled as a shopkeeper. About 1721 he publ. A Very Plain and Easy Introduction to the Art of Singing Psalm Tunes (no copy previous to the 1721 ed. is known to exist); in this book, letters instead of notes were used on the staff; it was very popular (at least 11 eds. publ. up to 1774; reprint, Philadelphia, 1954). — Cf. N. D. Gould, Church Music in America (1853); F. J. Metcalf, American Writers and Compilers of Sacred Music (1925); E. H. Pierce, The Rise and Fall of the 'Fugue-Tune' in America, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1930); C. K. Shipton, Sibley's Harvard Graduates (Boston, 1937; pp. 457-61); I. Lowens, John Tufts' Introduction to the Singing of Psalm-Tunes (1721-1744): The First American Music Textbook, in the 'Journal of Research in Music Education' (vol. II, 1954). See also 'Dictionary of American Biography' (vol. XIX, 1936).

Tufts, John Wheeler, American organist and teacher; b. Dover, N. H., May 12, 1825; d. Camden, Maine, March 18, 1908. He went to Germany in 1846, studying in Frankfurt, and in Leipzig under Moscheles (piano) and Hauptmann (theory); returned to Bangor, Maine, in 1848; organist at the Unitarian Church and conductor of the 'Bangor Choral Society'; lived later in Portland as organist of the Union Church and conductor of the 'Haydn Association.' Settled in Boston as teacher and organist (at King's Chapel 15 years), also conductor of the 'Chelsea Choral Society.' He wrote many songs and hymn tunes, church services, piano pieces, and a book on piano technique. Author of a series of school-music works, notably the Normal Music Course and the Cecilian Series of Study and Song.

Tulou (tü-loo'), Jean-Louis, French flutist; b. Paris, Sept. 12, 1786; d. Nantes, July 23, 1865. He was a pupil of Wunderlich at the Paris Cons.; in 1804, 1st flute at the Italian opera; in 1813 he succeeded Wunderlich at the Opéra, resigning in 1822, but resuming the position in 1826 (with the title of 'première flûte solo'); in 1829 he was appointed flute prof. at the Cons.; retired from both positions in 1856. He won his brilliant triumphs with the old-fashioned flute, and until his retirement obstinately opposed the introduction of Böhm's improved instrument into the Paris Conservatoire. He wrote 5 flute concertos; airs variés for flute with orch.; a trio for 3 flutes; flute duos; many solo pieces for flute.

Tuma, Franz, Bohemian virtuoso on the viola da gamba and composer; b. Kosteletz, Oct. 2, 1704; d. Vienna, Feb. 4, 1774. He was a pupil of Czernohorsky at Prague and Fux at Vienna; from 1741, chamber composer to the dowager Empress Elisabeth. — Works: 30 Masses, a Miserere, responses, etc.; also instrumental pieces. A selection of Tuma's works was publ. by O. Schmid (choruses, Passion music, piano pieces); a symphony was ed. by P. A. Pisk. —Cf. O. Schmid, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' II.

Tunder, Franz, celebrated German organist and composer; b. Burg auf Fehmarn, 1614; d. Lübeck, Nov. 5, 1667. From 1632-41, court organist at Gottorp, where he studied with J. Hecksclauer, a pupil of Frescobaldi; 1641, organist of the Marienkirche in Lübeck, being succeeded at his death by his son-in-law, Dietrich Buxtehude (q.v.). —7 chorale fantasias for organ by Tunder were discovered in 1903 in the Lüneburg tablature-books (1 publ. by Straube, in 'Alte Meister des Orgelspiels,' new series); solo and choral cantatas ed. by M. Seiffert in 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vol. 3); 2 preludes and fugues for organ ed. by R. Buchmayer (1927); 4 organ preludes etc. in 'Organum.'—Cf. W. Stahl, F. T. und D. Buxtehude (Leipzig, 1926) and F. T., in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' VIII; J. Hennings, Tunderiana, in 'Lübeckische Blätter,' Jahrg. 75, Nr. 53 (1934). A complete ed. of Tunder's organ chorale arrangements was begun in 1958, edited by Rudolf Walter.

Turchi (toor'-kē), Guido, Italian composer; b. Rome, Nov. 10, 1916. He studied with Pizzetti, and his early works show a Romantic quality characteristic of his teacher; however, the chief impact on his music was made by a study of Bartók's works; his concerto for string orch. (Venice, Sept. 8, 1948) is dedicated to Bartók's memory. Among his other compositions are a trio for flute, clarinet, and viola (1945); incidental music to the Bacchae of Euripides (1953); Invettiva for small chorus and 2 pianos (1946); 2 Notturmi sacri for men's chorus and orch. (1944). —Cf. F. d'Amico, Guido Turchi, in 'Tempo' (Autumn, 1951).

Tureck, Rosalyn, American pianist; b. Chicago, Dec. 14, 1914. In 1928 she won first prize at a children's piano tournament in Chicago; made her début at the age of 11, playing with the Chicago Symph. Orch.; then studied with Olga Samaroff at the Juilliard School of Music, graduating in 1936; in 1943 became instructor there. In 1947 she made her first European tour, appearing in London and Scandinavia; later toured England, Scotland, and Ireland (1953-55), and in 1955-56, France, Germany, Italy, etc. She specializes in Bach; her interpretation of the Goldberg Variations is particularly notable.

Turina, Joaquín, prominent Spanish composer; b. Seville, Dec. 9, 1882; d. Madrid, Jan. 14, 1949. He studied with local teachers; then entered the Madrid Cons. as a pupil of Tragó (piano). In 1905 he went to Paris, where he studied composition with Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum, and piano with Moszkowski. In Paris a meeting with Albéniz and Manuel de Falla proved a turning point in his career; he determined to write national Spanish music; returning to Madrid in 1913, he produced 2 symph. works in a characteristic Spanish style: La Procesión del rocío and Sinfonía sevillana, combining Romantic and Impressionist elements in an individual manner; the same effective combination is found in his chamber music of Spanish inspiration (Escena andaluza, La Oración del torero, etc.) and his piano music (Sonata romántica, Mujeres españolas, etc.); he also wrote operas and incidental music for the theater. —Works: operas: Margot (Madrid, Oct. 10, 1914) and Jardín de oriente (Madrid, March 6, 1923); incidental music: Navidad (Madrid, 1916), La Adúltera penitente (Barcelona, 1917), La Anunciación (Madrid, 1924); for orch.: La Procesión del rocío, symph. poem (Madrid, March 30, 1913), Evangelio, symph. poem (Madrid, April 8, 1915), 3 Danzas fantásticas (1920), Sinfonía sevillana (San Sebastian, Sept. 11, 1920), Ritmos, choreographic fantasy (Barcelona, Oct. 25, 1928), Rapsodia sinfónica, for piano and string orch. (Madrid, March 11, 1933); chamber music: piano quintet (1907), string quartet (1911), Escena andaluza, for viola, string quartet, and piano (1912), La Oración del torero, for string quartet (1925), 2 piano trios (1926; 1933), 2 violin sonatas (1929; 1934), piano quartet (1931), Serenata for string quartet (1935), Círculo, for violin, cello, and piano (1936), Las nueve musas (9 pieces for various instruments; 1945); for piano: Sevilla, suite pintoresca (1909), Sonata romántica (1909), Coins de Séville, suite (1911), Tres danzas andaluzas (1912), Album de viaje (1916), Mujeres españolas (2 sets, 1917, 1932), Cuentos de España, 2 sets of 7 pieces each (1918; 1928), Niñerías, 2 sets of children's pieces (1919; 1931), Sanlúcar de Barrameda (1922), El Cristo de la Calavera (1924), Jardines de Andalucía, suite (1924), La Venta de los gatos (1925), El Barrio de Santa Cruz (1925); La Leyenda de la Giralda, suite (1927), Dos danzas sobre temas populares españoles (1927), Verbena madrileña, 5 pieces (1927), Mallorca, suite (1928), Evocaciones, 3 pieces (1929), Recuerdos de la antigua

España, 4 pieces (1929), Viaje marítimo, suite (1930), Ciclo pianístico: Toccata y fuga, Partita, Pieza romántica, El Castillo de Almodóvar (1930-31), Miniaturas, 8 pieces (1930), Danzas gitanas, 2 sets of 5 pieces each (1930; 1934), Tarjetas postales (1931), Sonata fantástica (1930), Radio Madrid, suite (1931); Jardín de niños, 8 pieces (1931); El Circo, 6 pieces (1932), Silhuetas, 5 pieces (1932), En la zapatería, 7 pieces (1933), Fantasia italiana (1933), Trilogía: El poema infinito (1933), Ofrenda (1934), Hipócrates (1934), Rincones de Sanlúcar (1933), Bailete, suite de danzas del siglo XIX (1933), Preludios (1933), Fantasia sobre cinco notas (1934), Concierto sin orquesta (1935), En el cortijo, 4 pieces (1936-40); Prelude, for organ (1914); Musette, for organ (1915); for guitar: Sevillana (1923), Fandanguillo (1926), Ráfaga (1930), Sonata (1932), Homenaje a Tárrega, 2 pieces (1935); songs: Rima (1911), Poema en forma de canciones (1918), 3 arias (1923), Canto a Sevilla, cycle (1927), 2 Canciones (1927), Corazón de mujer (1927), Trípico (1929), 3 Sonetos (1930), 3 Poemas (1933), Homenaje a Lope de Vega (1935); publ. an Enciclopedia abreviada de la música (Madrid, 1917).—Cf. C. Bosch, Impresiones estéticas (Madrid, 1918); H. Collet, L'Essor de la musique espagnole au XX<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1929); A. Salazar, La Música contemporánea en España (Madrid, 1930); F. Sopena, Joaquín Turina (Madrid, 1943); W. Dean, Joaquín Turina, in the 'Chesterian' (April, 1949).

Türk, Daniel Gottlob, German organist and teacher; b. Clausnitz, Saxony, Aug. 10, 1756; d. Halle, Aug. 26, 1813. He was a pupil in harmony and counterpoint of Homilius while studying at the Kreuzschule, Dresden; he had learned to play the violin at home and after he entered Leipzig Univ. J. A. Hiller continued his instruction, and engaged him as violinist at the theater and the 'Grosses Concert.' In 1776, cantor of the Ulrichskirche, Halle, and music teacher at the Gymnasium; 1779, music director of the Univ.; on becoming organist at the Liebfrauenkirche in 1787, he resigned his positions as cantor and teacher. He publ. an important clavier method (1789; 2nd ed., 1802) and instructive pieces for piano; 18 sonatas and sonatinas for piano; songs; and theoretical works. An opera, church music, symphonies, organ pieces, are in MS. Some piano pieces for 4 hands were ed. by Döflein (1933).—Cf. H. Glenewinkel, D. G. T. (dissertation, Halle, 1909); G. E. Hedler, D. G. T. (dissertation, Leipzig, 1936); also the 'Festschrift' publ. on the 125th anniversary of his death, Daniel Gottlob Türk (Halle, 1938).

Turle, James, English organist and composer; b. Somerton, Somerset, March 5, 1802; d. London, June 28, 1882. He was assistant organist to Greatorex at Westminster Abbey till 1831, then succeeded him as organist and master of the choristers, resigning in 1875. He conducted the 'Antient Concerts' 1840-43; was music master at the School for the Indigent Blind 1829-56. He was a noted teacher. He composed services, anthems, chants, and hymn tunes; ed. several collections of church music (e.g., 'The Westminster Abbey Chant Book,' with Dr. Bridge).

Turner, Alfred Dudley, American pianist and teacher; b. St. Albans, Maine, Aug. 24, 1854; d. there, May 7, 1888. He studied at the New England Cons. of Music and the Boston College of Music, and later taught at these schools. —Works: 3 morceaux, for piano and cello; suite for piano and cello; Sonate dramatique for piano; 2 sonatas for piano and violin; sonata for piano and cello; piano pieces.

Turner, Charles, American composer; b. Baltimore, Nov. 25, 1921. He studied violin at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, and composition with Samuel Barber; later took courses with Nadia Boulanger. He served as a naval officer during World War II; played concerts in Europe; in 1954 received a fellowship awarded by the Italian government, and took up residence in Rome. His violin concerto was performed at the Detroit Institute of Arts in 1940; his symph. sketch Encounter was performed for the first time by the Cleveland Orch., Dec. 29, 1955; a ballet, Pastorale, was given its première in New York Jan. 14, 1957.

Turner, Godfrey, English composer; b. Manchester, March 27, 1913; d. (suicide) N. Y., Dec. 7, 1948. He studied with E. J. Dent at Cambridge Univ. (musicology) and with Nadia Boulanger in Paris. He came to the U. S. in 1936; taught at the San Francisco Cons. (1938-43); was music editor for Boosey & Hawkes, N. Y. (1944-46); then secretary of the American Music Center, N. Y. (1946-48). —Works: Trinity Concerto, for chamber orch.; viola concerto; Sonata concertante, for piano and string orch.; Fanfare, Chorale and Finale for brass; Saraband and Tango; Gregorian Overture (Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 2, 1947; winner of the Broadcast Music, Inc., Contest).

Turner, Robert Comrie, Canadian composer; b. Montreal, June 6, 1920. He studied at the Royal College of Music, London, with Herbert Howells and Gordon Jacob (1947-48), with Roy Harris at Colorado College (1947) and in Nashville (1949-50); received his Mus. Doc. degree from McGill Univ. in 1953. In 1952 he was appointed music producer for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Vancouver; taught composition at the Univ. of British Columbia (1955-57). His works include: Sinfonia for small orch. (1953); Opening Night, overture (1955); Lyric Interlude for orch. (1956); 2 string quartets (1949; 1954); quintet for piano and woodwinds (1951); violin sonata (1956); 2 Choral Pieces (1952); The Seasons, a song cycle (1954); a piano sonata (1955); a Nocturne for piano (1946); 4 Little Pieces for harp (1957); Canon, Fugue, and Choral for organ (1957).

Turner, Walter James, English poet and writer on music; b. Shanghai, China, Oct. 13, 1889; d. London, Nov. 18, 1946. He studied with his father (organist of St. Paul's Cathedral, Melbourne, Australia), also privately in Dresden, Munich, and Vienna. He settled in London, where he became music critic for 'The New Statesman.' Among his books on music the most valuable is Mozart: the Man and his Work (1938). Others are Music and Life (1922); Variations on the Theme of Music (1924); Orpheus, or the Music of the Future (1926); Beethoven, the Search for Reality (1927; new ed., 1933); Musical Meanderings (1928); Music, a Short History (1932; 2nd ed., 1949); Facing the Music (1933); Wagner (1933); Berlioz: the Man and his Work (1934); Music: An Introduction to its Nature and Appreciation (1936); English Music (1941); English Ballet (1944).

Turner, William, English composer; b. Oxford, 1651; d. London, Jan. 13, 1740. Was at first a chorister at Christ Church, Oxford, under E. Lowe, and later at the Chapel Royal under H. Cooke. He was a choir-singer at Lincoln Cathedral, a vicar choral of St. Paul's, and a lay vicar of Westminster Abbey; in 1669 he was made a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal; received the degree of Mus. Doc. from Cambridge Univ. in 1696. Composed church music, anthems, songs, catches.

Turnhout, Gérard de (real name Gheert Jacques), Netherlands composer; b. Turnhout, c. 1520; d. Madrid, Sept. 15, 1580. In 1545, choir-singer at Antwerp Cathedral, of which he was appointed Kapellmeister in 1563; in 1572, Philip II of Spain called him to Madrid as maestro of the Royal Chapel there. Publ. 1 book of motets a 4-5 (1568), 1 book of motets and chansons a 4-6 (1569), and 1 Mass in Praestantissimorum divinae musicae auctorum Missae X (1570). —His son, Jean de Turnhout, was Kapellmeister to the Archduke Alexander Farnese, governor of the Netherlands, at Brussels from 1586; from 1611 2nd Kapellmeister, and from 1618, first, of the Royal Chapel there. He publ. 2 books of madrigals and one of motets.

Turpin, Edmund Hart, English organist and composer; b. Nottingham, May 4, 1835; d. London, Oct. 25, 1907. He was a pupil of Hullah and Pauer in London, where he settled in 1857; served as organist of various churches; publ. a collection for organ, 'Student's Edition of Classical Authors'; wrote the oratorios St. John the Baptist and Hezekiah; hymn tunes; many works for organ. He was editor of 'The Musical Standard' (from 1880) and for a time also of 'The Musical World.' —Cf. C. W. Pearce, A Biographical Sketch of E. H. Turpin (London, 1911).

Turski, Zbigniew, Polish composer; b. Konstantin, near Warsaw, July 28, 1908. He studied composition with P. Rytel at the State Cons. in Warsaw; was music director of the Polish Radio (1936-39); after the war, he conducted orchestras in the provinces. In 1948 his 2nd symph., The Olympiad, was awarded a prize by the Association of Polish Composers and the Music Jury of the 14th Olympiad in London. He writes in an advanced harmonic idiom, influenced by French modernism. His music written before 1945 was lost during the war; later works include, besides The Olympiad (1948), symph. No. 3 (1953); violin concerto (1951); a string quartet (1951); cantatas, Ziemia (1952) and Vistula River (1953); miscellaneous compositions for piano; songs; music for the theater, films, and radio.

Turtchaninov (töör-chäh-ně'-nóhf), Piotr Ivanovitch, Russian composer of sacred music; b. Kiev, Nov. 20, 1779; d. St. Petersburg, March 16, 1856. He studied music with Sarti when the latter was at the St. Petersburg court; ordained priest in 1803; taught singing at the imperial court chapel; from 1831 to 1841 was high priest at various churches. His masterly arrangements and harmonizations of old liturgical melodies of the Russian church were publ. posthumously in 4 vols. His autobiography was publ. in St.

Petersburg in 1863. — Cf. A. Preobrazhensky, The High Priest P. I. Turtchaninov (St. Petersburg, 1910); V. Lebedev, P. I. Turtchaninov (Tambov, 1910).

Tuthill, Burnet Corwin, American composer; b. New York, Nov. 16, 1888. He was educated at Columbia Univ. (M. A., 1910); took up a business career; was general manager of the Cincinnati Cons. (1922-30); then returned to music; entered the Cincinnati College of Music, receiving the degree of Mus. M. in 1935; became prof. at Southwestern College, Memphis, and in 1937 became director of the Memphis College of Music. He began to compose very late in life, but compensated for it by increased productivity. — Works: Bethlehem, pastorella for orch. (Interlochen, Mich., July 22, 1934, composer conducting); Laurentia, symph. poem (Rochester, Oct. 30, 1936); Come Seven, rhapsody for orch. (1935; St. Louis, Feb. 19, 1944); Symph. in C (1940); clarinet concerto (1948); Nocturne for solo flute and strings (1933); Intrada for chamber orch. (1935); Intermezzo for 2 clarinets and bass-horn (1927); Fantasy Sonata, for clarinet and piano (1932); Sonatina for flute and clarinet (1933); piano trio (1933); Variations on When Johnny Comes Marching Home, for piano and woodwind quintet (1934); Sailors' Hornpipe, for wind quintet (1935); Divertimento, for wind quartet (1936); clarinet quintet (1936); violin sonata (1937); saxophone sonata (1941).

Tuukkanen, Kalervo, Finnish conductor and composer; b. Mikkeli, Oct. 14, 1909; studied with Madetoja and Krohn. He has written 3 symphonies, several suites for orch., concertos, and choral works. He is the author of a monograph on his teacher, Madetoja (Helsinki, 1947).

Tuxen, Erik, German-Danish conductor; b. Mannheim (of Danish parents) July 4, 1902; d. Copenhagen, Aug. 28, 1957. In 1916 he moved to Denmark; studied architecture and music in Copenhagen; then in Paris, Vienna, and Berlin. He conducted the Danish State Radio Orch. (1936-41); made guest appearances in the U. S. (1950-51), presenting a concert of Scandinavian music at Carnegie Hall (April 2, 1951); in the summer of 1954 he conducted in South America.

Tveitt, Geirr, Norwegian composer and pianist; b. Hardanger, Oct. 19, 1908. He studied piano in Vienna and Paris; then toured in Europe. An exceptionally prolific composer, he has written 29 piano sonatas, 5 piano concertos, a violin concerto, 3 symphonies, 3 string sextets, 2 string quartets, 4 operas, 2 ballets, and over 100 songs. — Publ. Tonalit  stheorie des parallelen Leitonssysteme (Oslo, 1937).

Tweedy, Donald, American composer; b. Danbury, Conn., April 23, 1890; d. there, July 21, 1948. He was educated at Harvard Univ. (B. A., 1912; M. A., 1917), where his teachers were Walter Spalding and E. B. Hill; later studied composition with Goetschius at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. He taught at Vassar College (1914-16), the Eastman School of Music (1923-27), Hamilton College (1937-38), and Texas Christian Univ. (1945-46). He publ. a Manual of Harmonic Technic Based on the Practice of J. S. Bach (1928). — Works: ballet, Alice in Wonderland (1935); L'Allegro, symph. study (Rochester, May 1, 1925); 3 Dances for orch. (1925); Williamsburg, suite for orch. (1941); Anthem for Lent: Out of the Depths, for soli with organ (1942); viola sonata (1916); violin sonata (1920); cello sonata (1930); piano pieces.

Tye, Christopher, English organist and composer; b. c. 1500; d. c. 1572. He may have been a chorister at King's College, Cambridge, in 1511 (identification uncertain, since no first name is given for a choirboy named Tye appearing on an extant list of choristers). In 1537 he received his Mus. B. from Cambridge; on Sept. 10, 1541, he was appointed organist of Ely Cathedral (resigned in 1561); Mus. Doc. at Cambridge in 1545; was ordained a priest in 1560 at Doddington. He describes himself as a gentleman of the King's Chapel in the title-page of his only publ. work, The Actes of the Apostles, translated into Englyshe metre . . . to syng and also to play upon the Lute (London, 1553; it includes the first 14 chapters of Acts). The hymn tunes 'Windsor or Eton' and 'Winchester Old' are adapted from tunes in this collection. Tye was an important composer of English church music; in MS he left Masses, services, motets, and anthems. The 'Euge Bone' Mass was ed. by Arkwright in 'The Old English Edition' (No. 10); other examples in 'The Oxford History of Music' (vol. II) and in Walker's 'History of Music in England.' — Cf. G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 782-83).

Tyes, John, English organist and composer who flourished early in the 15th century. A Gloria for 2 voices and one instrument and a Sanctus for 4 voices are among the works included in the 'Old Hall MSS.'

Tyndall, John, eminent physicist and acoustician; b. Leighlin Bridge, Ireland, Aug. 2, 1820; d. Hindhead, Surrey, England, Dec. 4, 1893. His 2 works in the domain of acoustics are Sound (1867 and many subsequent eds.), a lucid and scholarly explanation of acoustical phenomena, and On the Transmission of Sound by the Atmosphere (1874). He was prof. of natural philosophy at the Royal Institute from 1853. —Cf. 'Dictionary of National Biography' (vol. XIX, pp. 1358-63).

Typp, W., English singer and composer who was active in the early decades of the 15th century. An Agnus Dei, 2 Credos, and 4 Sanctus settings by him are found among the 'Old Hall MSS.'

Tyrwhitt, Gerald. See Berners, Lord.

Tzarth (Czarth, Zarth), Georg, Bohemian violinist; b. Hochtann, April 8, 1708; d. Mannheim, Germany, 1778. He was a friend of Franz Benda (q.v.), whom he accompanied to Warsaw; in 1734 he entered the chapel of Crown Prince Frederick at Rheinsberg; in 1758 joined the court orch. at Mannheim. He wrote symphonies, concertos, string trios, violin sonatas, etc. in the 'Mannheim School' style; examples of his works are found in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vols. XV-XVI, edited by Riemann).

U

Ubaldu (or Ugbaldus, Uchubaldus). See Hucbald.

Uber, Christian Friedrich Hermann, German composer; b. Breslau, April 22, 1781; d. Dresden, March 2, 1822. He was a law student at Halle, but also studied music under Türk, and became chamber musician to Prince Louis Ferdinand of Prussia. After holding various positions as violinist and conductor, he settled in Dresden. He wrote the operas Der falsche Werber (Kassel, 1808) and Der frohe Tag (Mainz, 1815); incidental music to various plays; some violin works; songs to texts in German and French.

Uberti (Hubert), Antonio, male soprano; b. (of German parents) Verona, 1697; d. Berlin, Jan. 20, 1783. He was one of the most brilliant pupils of Porpora, and was known as 'il Porporino' (little Porpora). In 1741 he entered the service of Frederick the Great in Berlin. He was greatly renowned in Germany for his singing of Italian operas.

Uccellini (öc-tcheh-lë-në), Marco, Italian composer; b. Modena, c. 1610; date and place of death unknown. He was maestro di cappella at the ducal court of Modena from 1645, and at the Modena Cathedral from 1654. From 1639 to 1667 he publ. a variety of chamber music (sonatas, arias, canzonas, etc.); his advanced violin technique calls for use of the 6th position. He also wrote an opera, Li Eventi di Filandro ed Edessa, which was presented in Parma in 1675 (the music is not extant); 2 ballet pieces: Le Navi d'Enea (1673) and Il Giove d'Elide fulminato (1677). Riemann publ. a sonata by Uccellini in 'Alte Kammermusik'; some pieces were publ. by Wasielewski; others by Torchi in 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. VII).

Udbye, Martin Andreas, Norwegian composer; b. Trondheim, June 18, 1820; d. there, Jan. 10, 1889. He studied in Leipzig with Hauptmann; returning to Trondheim, he was organist at various churches. He wrote 2 operettas, Hjemvæ (Oslo, April 8, 1864) and Junkeren og Flubergrosen (Oslo, Jan. 7, 1870); several cantatas; 3 string quartets; military marches; organ pieces; piano works; songs.

d'Udine, Jean (real name Albert Cozanne), French writer on music; b. Landivisiau, Finistère, July 1, 1870; d. Paris, April, 1938. He was a practicing lawyer, but also wrote music criticism. In 1909 he founded in Paris the 'École Française de Gymnastique Rythmique' for teaching the methods of Jacques-Dalcroze. —Books: La Corrélation des sons et des couleurs en art (1897); Lettres paradoxales sur la musique (Paris, 1900); L'Orchestration des couleurs (1903); Paraphrases musicales (Paris, 1904); Gluck (1906); L'Art et le geste (1912); Les Transmutations rythmiques (1921); Qu'est-ce que la musique? (1925); Traité de géométrie rythmique (1926). Also wrote songs: Les Chants de la jungle (1905), Rondels pour après (1924), etc.

Ugalde (ü-gahld'), Delphine (née Beaucé), French soprano; b. Paris, Dec. 3, 1829; d. there, July 19, 1910. She received her first instruction in singing from her mother, an actress; subsequently studied with Moreau-Sainti; made her début in Paris in 1848 as Angèle in Auber's Domino noir; in 1866 assumed the management of the Bouffes-Parisiens, taking leading roles in Offenbach's operettas; in 1867 she appeared in her own operetta, La Halte au moulin. She retired in 1871, and settled down as a successful vocal teacher. She was married twice, to a Spanish musician, Ugalde, who died in 1858, and to an impresario, Valcollier.

Ugarte (öo-gahr'-tè), Floro M., Argentine composer; b. Buenos Aires, Sept. 15, 1884. He studied in Buenos Aires, and at the Paris Cons. under Fourdrain, with whom he collaborated in writing the ballet Sigolene. He returned to Argentina in 1913; in 1924, became prof. of the National Cons. there; was also for several years musical director of the Teatro Colón; in that capacity he visited N. Y. in 1940, to engage singers. —Works: operatic fairy tale, Saika (Buenos Aires, July 21, 1920); Entre las montañas, symph. suite (conducted in Buenos Aires by Richard Strauss in 1923 during his guest appearances there); La Rebelión del agua, symph. poem (Buenos Aires, Oct. 16, 1935); De mi tierra, symph. suite (1927); Piri, choreographic poem (1944); symph. in A (1946; Buenos Aires, May 13, 1952); Tango, for orch. (Buenos Aires, Sept. 5, 1951); chamber music; songs; piano pieces.

Ugolini (öo-güh-lé'-nè), Vincenzo, Italian composer; b. Perugia, c. 1570; d. Rome, May 6, 1638. Pupil of B. Nanini in Rome, where from 1592 to 1603 he was choirmaster at the Church of S. Maria Maggiore; from 1609 to 1615, at the Cathedral of Benevento; then returned to Rome, and in 1616 became choirmaster of S. Luigi dei Francesi; in 1620 he succeeded Suriano as maestro of the Cappella Giulia of St. Peter's (until 1626); in 1631, he resumed his former post at S. Luigi dei Francesi, retaining it till death. He was the teacher of Benevoli. A notable representative of Palestrina's school, he publ. 4 books of motets for 1, 2, 3, and 4 voices with continuo (1616-19); 2 books of Psalms for 8 voices (1620); 2 books of Masses and motets for 8 and 12 voices (1623); 1 book of songs and motets a 12 (1624); 2 books of madrigals a 5 (1615).

Ugolino de Orvieto, Italian musical theorist; d. c. 1449. He was archpriest at the Cathedral of Ferrara from about 1440; his treatise, De musica mensurata (MS), is in the Biblioteca Casanatense in Rome. —Cf. U. Kornmüller, Die Musiklehre des Ugolino de Orvieto, in the 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (1895).

Uhl, Alfred, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, June 5, 1909. He was a pupil of Franz Schmidt; was in the Austrian army (1940-43), and was severely wounded. In 1945 he was appointed teacher of composition at the Vienna Academy of Music. His music is patterned after Classical forms, with particular emphasis on contrapuntal clarity. His works include a divertimento for 4 clarinets; Eine vergnügliche Musik, for 8 wind instruments (1943); Konzertante Sinfonie, for clarinet and orch. (1944); Sonata graziosa for orch. (1947).

Uhlig (öo'-lih), Theodor, German violinist and writer on music; b. Wurzen, near Leipzig, Feb. 15, 1822; d. Dresden, Jan. 3, 1853. He studied violin with Schneider in Dessau, and in 1841 became a violinist in the Dresden Orch. He was one of the most devoted friends and admirers of Wagner; made the vocal score of Lohengrin; Wagner's letters to him were publ. in 1888 (English transl., 1890). Of his 84 works (symphonies, chamber music, theater pieces, etc.) only a violin concerto and some piano pieces and songs were publ. His articles are of some importance; they were publ. as Musikalische Schriften by L. Frankenstein (Regensburg, 1913). —Cf. M. Ahrend, Theodor Uhlig, der früh verstorbene Wagnerianer (Bayreuth, 1904).

Ujj (öo'-ë), Béla, Hungarian composer of operettas; b. Vienna, July 2, 1873; d. there, Feb. 1, 1942. He lost his sight in childhood, but studied music and composed a number of successful operettas which were produced in Vienna. They include the following: Der Herr Professor (Dec. 4, 1903); Kaisermanöver (March 4, 1905); Die kleine Prinzessin (May 5, 1907); Drei Stunden Leben (Nov. 1, 1909); Chantecler (Oct. 25, 1910); Der Türmer von St. Stephan (Sept. 13, 1912); Teresita (June 27, 1914); Der Müller und sein Kind (Oct. 30, 1917).

Ulbrich, Maximilian, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, c. 1752; d. there, Sept. 14, 1814. He studied with Wagenseil; was a government clerk and pursued music as an avocation. His Singspiel Der blaue Schmetterling was produced in Vienna on April 2, 1782; he also wrote an oratorio; several symphonies; church music.

Ulfrstad, Marius Moaritz, Norwegian composer; b. Borgund, Sept. 11, 1890. He studied at the Cons. of Oslo; then in Berlin (with Humperdinck), in Florence (with Pizzetti), and in Paris (with Ravel). Returning to Oslo, he founded his own music school there (1921); was music critic of the 'Morgenposten' (1922-40) and the 'Aftenposten' (1945-47). His works include 5 symphonies; several suites for orch. (Norwegia, Islandia, Grönlandia, Svalbardia, etc.); Arctic Suite for piano and orch.; 2 violin concertos (1923; 1935); much chamber music; about 250 choral pieces; nearly 1,000 songs, including arrangements of folksongs.

Ullmann, Viktor, Austrian conductor and composer; b. Teschen, Jan. 1, 1898. He studied with Schoenberg in Vienna; then lived in Prague, where he conducted theater music. He wrote 2 operas, Peer Gynt (after Ibsen) and Der Sturz des Antichrist. His 5 variations and double fugue were performed at the Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music in Geneva (April 7, 1929); his string quartet was given at the London Festival (June 18, 1938); other chamber works were heard at concerts of modern music in Europe and America. His style is atonal, but he adheres to the Classical pattern in formal design.

Ulrich, Homer, American musicologist; b. Chicago, March 27, 1906. He studied bassoon and cello at the Chicago Musical College, and played these instruments in various orchestras; was bassoonist with the Chicago Symph. Orch. (1929-35); received his M.A. at the Univ. of Chicago with the thesis The Penitential Psalms of Lasso (1939). He was head of the music dept. of Monticello College (1935-38); then taught at the Univ. of Texas (associate prof., 1939; prof., 1951); also played bassoon with the San Antonio Symph. In 1953 he was appointed head of the reorganized music dept. of the Univ. of Maryland. —Books: Chamber Music (a valuable survey; N. Y., 1948); Education of a Concert-Goer (N. Y., 1949); Symphonic Music (N. Y., 1952); Famous Women Singers (N. Y., 1953); Music; a Design for Listening (N. Y., 1957).

Ulrich (ööl'-rih), Hugo, German composer; b. Oppeln, Silesia, Nov. 26, 1827; d. Berlin, May 23, 1872. After studying in Breslau, he went to Berlin in 1846 and took lessons from Dehn. For a few years he taught at the Stern Cons. (1859-63); otherwise earned his living by working for publishers. He wrote 3 symphonies, of which the 2nd, entitled Symphonie triomphale, won a prize of 1500 francs offered by the Brussels Academy in 1853. Other works include a piano trio, a cello sonata, a string quartet, piano pieces, and songs. He made excellent arrangements of Beethoven's symphonies for piano, 4 hands.

Ulybyshev. See Oulibichev.

Umlauf, Ignaz, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, 1746; d. Mödling, near Vienna, June 8, 1796. In 1772 he became violinist in the court theater, and in 1778, conductor of the German Opera in Vienna; in 1789 was appointed sub-conductor (under Salieri) of the Imperial Chapel in Vienna. He was a highly popular composer of Singspiele; inaugurated the season of the German Singspiele at the Burg Theater (Feb. 17, 1778) with his piece Bergknappen; there followed a number of others: Die Apotheke (June 20, 1778); Die pucefarbenen Schuhe, oder Die schöne Schusterin (June 22, 1779); Das Irrlicht, oder Endlich fand er sie (Jan. 17, 1782); Der Oberamtmann und die Soldaten (1782); Der Ring der Liebe (Dec. 3, 1786). Zu Steffan sprach im Traume, an aria from Das Irrlicht, enjoyed great popularity; Eberl wrote a set of variations on it, which was misattributed to Mozart. The score of Umlauf's 1st Singspiel, Die Bergknappen, was edited by R. Haas in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 36).

Umlauf, Michael, Austrian violinist and composer, son of Ignaz Umlauf; b. Vienna, Aug. 9, 1781; d. Baden, near Vienna, June 20, 1842. He played the violin at the Vienna Opera; conducted at court theaters; wrote piano music; brought out a Singspiel, Der Grenadier (Vienna, July 8, 1812). He assisted Beethoven in conducting the 9th Symphony and other works (actually led the performances, with Beethoven indicating the initial tempos).

Unger, Caroline, Hungarian contralto; b. Stuhlweissenburg, Oct. 28, 1803; d. at her villa near Florence, March 23, 1877. She studied voice in Milan with D. Ronconi, and in Vienna with Aloysia Lange (Mozart's sister-in-law) and with Johann Michael Vogl. Beethoven chose her to sing the contralto parts in the first performances of his Missa Solemnis and 9th Symph. (May 7, 1824); long afterwards she recounted that she turned Beethoven's head around that he might see the applause, which he could no longer hear. She went to Italy, where she changed the spelling of her name to Ungher, to secure correct pronunciation in Italian. Several Italian composers (Donizetti, Bellini, Mercadante, etc.) wrote operas especially for her. In 1833 she appeared in Paris. In 1839 she was engaged to be married to the poet Lenau, but the engagement soon was broken; in 1841 she married the French writer François Sabatier (1818-91) and retired from the stage. She publ. an album of 46 songs, under the title Lieder, Mélodies et Stornelli. —(Cf. C. Hartwig, Fr. Sabatier und Karoline Sabatier-Unger, in 'Deutsche Rundschau' (May, 1897); F. Margit Polgár, Unger-Sabatier (Budapest, 1941).

Unger, Georg, German tenor; b. Leipzig, March 6, 1837; d. there, Feb. 2, 1887. He was originally a student of theology; made his operatic début in Leipzig at the age of 30. Hans Richter heard him in Mannheim and recommended him to Wagner for the role of Siegfried. He studied the part with Hey, and his interpretation of it made him famous.

Unger, Hermann, German composer and writer on music; b. Kamenz, Oct. 26, 1886. He studied philology in Leipzig and Munich, and received his Dr. phil. (1910) with a dissertation on Greek poetry; in Munich he also studied music with Edgar Istel and Joseph Haas; then went to Meiningen, where he took lessons with Max Reger (1911-13). He served in the German army in World War I; in 1919 became teacher at the Cons. of Cologne; in 1925 was appointed lecturer at the Cologne Hochschule für Musik; retired in 1945. His musical compositions include the operas Der Zauberhandschuh (1927) and Richmodis von Aducht (1928); a Christmas fairy tale, Die Geschichten vom Weihnachtsbaum (1943); 2 symphonies; Japanisches Liederspiel for mixed chorus and orch.; Der Gott und die Bajadere for declamation, chorus, and orch.; several symph. poems; much chamber music; choral works; song cycles; piano suites. —Books: Musikalisches Laienbrevier (Munich, 1921); Max Reger (Munich, 1921); Musiktheoretische Laienbibel (1922); Musikgeschichte in Selbstzeugnissen (Munich, 1928); Beethovens Vermächtnis (1929); Musikanten gestern und heute (Siegen, 1935); Anton Bruckner und seine 7. Sinfonie (Bonn, 1944).

Unger, Max, German musicologist and conductor; b. Taura, May 28, 1883. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. and attended Riemann's lectures at the Univ. (1904-06); Dr. phil. (1911) with the dissertation Muzio Clementis Leben (publ. Langensalza, 1914); wrote music criticism in the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik.' In 1933 he was compelled to leave Germany and settled in Zürich; then went to Volterra, Italy. He devoted his efforts mainly to Beethoven research; publ. about 150 papers on various aspects of Beethoven's life and works; of these the most important are Auf Spuren von Beethovens unsterblicher Geliebten (Langensalza, 1911), Ludwig van Beethoven und seine Verleger S. A. Steiner und Tobias Haslinger in Wien, A. M. Schlesinger in Berlin (Berlin, 1921), Beethovens Handschrift (Bonn, 1926), Ein Faustopernplan Beethovens und Goethes (Regensburg, 1952); edited the catalogue of the Bodmer Beethoven collection in Zürich, under the title Eine Schweizer Beethovensammlung: Katalog (Zürich, 1939).

Unger-Sabatier. See Unger, Caroline.

Uninsky, Alexander, Russian pianist; b. Kiev, Feb. 2, 1910. He studied at the Kiev Cons.; then in Paris; toured in Europe until 1939; went to South America in 1940, and gave successful recitals there; then came to the U. S., where he continued his concert career. In 1955 he was appointed prof. at the Cons. of Toronto, Canada.

Untersteiner, Alfredo, Italian musicologist; b. Rovereto, April 28, 1859; d. Merano, Jan. 1918. He studied with Pembaur in Innsbruck; lived in Merano; was interned there as an enemy alien by the Austrians during World War I, and died in a concentration camp. He publ. Storia della musica (2 vols.; 1900; many reprints; in English as A Short History of Music (N. Y., 1902) and Storia del violino, dei violinisti e della musica per violino (1904)).

Upton, George Putnam, American writer on music; b. Boston, Oct. 25, 1834; d. Chicago, May 19, 1919. He was graduated from Brown Univ. (1854); in 1855 went to Chicago, where in 1861 he joined the editorial staff of the 'Tribune,' acting also as music critic (until 1885); his were the first music reviews to appear in any Chicago newspaper. In 1872 he founded the Apollo Club there. —Books: Letters of Peregrine Pickle (1870); Woman in Music (1880); The Standard Operas (1886; new ed., 1928); The Standard Oratorios (1887; 12th ed., 1909); The Standard Cantatas (1888; 7th ed., 1899); The Standard Symphonies (1889); Musical Pastels (1902); The Standard Light Operas (1902); E. Reményi, Musician, Littérateur and Man (with G. D. Kelley; 1906); The Standard Concert Guide (1908; new eds., 1930, 1947); Standard Concert Repertory (1909); Standard Musical Biographies (1910); The Song (1915);

In Music's Land (1920). The Standard Operas was reissued in an enlarged form, ed. by Felix Borowski (1936; reprint, 1947). Upton ed. the autobiography of Theodore Thomas (1905). His own autobiography, Musical Memories, was publ. in 1908.

Upton, William Treat, American musicologist; b. Tallmadge, Ohio, Dec. 17, 1870. He was educated at Oberlin College and Cons. of Music; later studied piano with Leschetizky in Vienna (1896-98) and Joseph Lhévinne in Berlin (1913-14). From 1898 he taught piano at Oberlin Cons.; also was church organist in Cleveland (until 1918). —Books: Art-Song in America (Boston, 1930; supplement, 1938); Anthony Philip Heinrich: A 19th-Century Composer in America (N. Y., 1939); William Henry Fry, American Journalist and Composer-Critic (N. Y., 1954). He brought out a new ed. of O. G. Sonneck's Bibliography of Early Secular American Music (Washington, 1945).

Urbach (oor'-bah), Otto, German pianist and composer; b. Eisenach, Feb. 6, 1871; d. Dresden, Dec. 14, 1927. He studied with Iwan Knorr and Humperdinck in Frankfurt, with Draeseke in Dresden, and with Klindworth in Berlin. In 1898 he was appointed prof. of piano at the Dresden Cons. He wrote an opera, Der Müller von Sans-Souci (Frankfurt, 1896); an overture, Bergfahrt; a string quartet; a septet for wind instruments; piano pieces; many songs.

Urban (öör'-bahn), Friedrich Julius, German singing teacher and composer; brother of Heinrich Urban; b. Berlin, Dec. 23, 1838; d. there, July 17, 1918. He studied with Ries (violin) and Elsler (singing); was a successful singing teacher in Berlin; publ. a manual, Die Kunst des Gesangs, and some songs and choruses.

Urban (öör'-bahn), Heinrich, noted German pedagogue; brother of Friedrich Julius Urban; b. Berlin, Aug. 27, 1837; d. there, Nov. 24, 1901. He studied with Ries (violin) Laub, and others in Berlin; was a professional violinist; wrote much symphonic and chamber music; in 1881 he became prof. at Kullak's Academy in Berlin; acquired fame as a theory teacher; among his pupils was Paderewski. His works include a concert overture, Scheherazade; a symph., Frühling; a violin concerto; many violin pieces; songs.

Urbánek, Mojmir, Czech music publisher; b. Prague, May 6, 1873; d. there, Sept. 29, 1919. Son of the music publisher Franz Urbánek (1842-1919); left his father's firm and founded his own business in 1901, developing it into the largest of its kind in Czechoslovakia; included a music shop, printing plant, concert agency, and concert hall ('Mozarteum'); publ. works by Suk, Novák, Foerster, and other Czechoslovak composers, and the musical monthly 'Dalibor.'

Urfey, Thomas d' (known as Tom Durefey), English playwright and poet; b. Exeter, 1653; d. London, Feb. 26, 1723. He produced about 30 plays, the songs in some of which were set to music by Purcell (e.g., The Comical History of Don Quixote, in 3 parts, 1694-96). He ingratiated himself into the intimate circle of Charles II by his talent for singing his poems, adapted to popular airs of his time. Between 1683 and 1710 he publ. several collections of airs with music, and in 1719 he ed. Songs Compted, Pleasant and Divertive (5 vols., his own songs assembled in vols. 1 and 2); this was reissued the same year under the better-known title, Wit and Mirth: or Pills to Purge Melancholy (a 6th vol. was added in 1720). —Cf. C. L. Day, The Songs of Thomas D'Urfey (Cambridge, Mass., 1933).

Urhan (ü-rähn'), Chrétien, French violinist, b. Montjoie, near Aix-la-Chapelle, Feb. 16, 1790; d. Paris, Nov. 2, 1845. He was a pupil of Le Sueur in composition; revived the viole d'amour, playing in Baillot's Quartet; from 1816 he was violinist (later soloist) in the Opéra orch. In the Cons. Concerts he employed a 5-stringed violin (violon-alto, with the tuning c-g-d<sup>1</sup>-a<sup>1</sup>-e<sup>2</sup>), producing charming effects. He composed some chamber music. —Cf. P. D. Förster, Chrétien Urhan (Raigern, 1907); P. Garnault, Chrétien Urhan, in 'Revue de Musicologie' (1930).

Uriarte (oo-rē-ahr'tēh), Father Eustaquio de, Spanish musicologist; b. Durango (province of Vizcaya), Nov. 2, 1863; d. Motrico, Sept. 17, 1900. In 1878 he entered the Augustinian Order at Valladolid and in 1888 went to the monastery of Silos, near Burgos, devoting himself to the study and restoration of Gregorian chant; was a promoter of the 'Asociación Isidoriana' for the reform of religious music in Spain. His fundamental work was the Tratado teórico-práctico de canto gregoriano, según la verdadera tradición (Madrid, 1891). His shorter studies were publ., with a biographical sketch, by L. Villalba: Estética y crítica musical del padre Uriarte (Barcelona, 1904).

Uribe-Holguín (ö-re'-beh-öl-gén'), Guillerme, foremost composer of Colombia; b. Bogotá, March 17, 1880. He studied violin with Narciso Garay; in 1907 he went to Paris, where he studied with Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum; then took further violin lessons with César Thomson and Émile Chaumont in Brussels. He returned to Colombia in 1910 and became director of the newly reorganized National Cons. in Bogotá; there he conducted the student orch. He resigned in 1935 and devoted his time to his coffee plantation; however, he continued to compose and conduct. In 1910 he married the pianist Lucía Gutiérrez. His music bears the imprint of the modern French style, but his thematic material is often related to native musical resources; particularly remarkable are his Trozos en el sentimiento popular for piano, of which he wrote about 350; they are stylizations of Colombian melorhythms in a brilliant pianistic setting. He publ. an autobiography, Vida de un músico colombiano (Bogotá, 1941). —Works: for orch. (all performed by the composer in Bogotá): Sinfonia del terruño (Oct. 20, 1924); Tres danzas (May 27, 1927); Marcha festiva (Aug. 20, 1928); Serenata (Oct. 29, 1928); Carnavalesca (July 8, 1929); Cantares (Sept. 2, 1929); Villanesca (Sept. 1, 1930); Bajo su ventana (Oct. 20, 1930); Suite típica (Nov. 21, 1932); Concierto a la manera antigua, for piano and orch. (Oct. 15, 1939); Bohica (April 12, 1940); 2 violin concertos; Furata, a lyric tragedy in 3 acts; Te Deum, for soli, chorus, and orch. (1920); Requiem (1926); other sacred works; a suite for guitar; 5 violin sonatas; 2 cello sonatas; 3 string quartets; a piano quartet; 2 piano quintets; piano pieces; songs. —Cf. F. C. Lange, Guillermo Uribe-Holguín, in the 'Boletín Latino-Americano de Música' (Bogotá, 1938).

Urich, Jean, composer and publisher; b. on island of Trinidad, Sept. 9, 1849; d. London, Dec. 14, 1939. He studied in Paris with Leneveu (1868), and in London with Gounod during the latter's sojourn there (1871-74). In 1890 he founded the 'Edition Paul Dupont' in Paris, and edited 'Le Figaro musical.' —He composed the operas L'Orage (Brussels, 1879); Flora Macdonald (Bologna, 1885); Le Pilote (Monte Carlo, 1890); Le Carillon (Aix-les-Bains, 1895); Hermann und Dorothea (Berlin, 1899); La

Cigale et la fourmi (as The Cicada, London, 1912); and Tsing-Tau (London, 1914).

Urio, Francesco Antonio, Italian church composer; b. Milan, c. 1660; date and place of death unknown. He became a Franciscan monk, and in 1690 was maestro at the Church of the 12 Apostles in Rome. Publ. Motetti di concerto a 2, 3, e 4 voci con violini e senza, op. 1 (Rome, 1690); Salmi concertati a 3 voci con violini, op. 2 (Bologna, 1697); also composed a Te Deum, from which Handel 'borrowed' numerous themes, chiefly for his 'Dettingen Te Deum,' and also for his Saul and Israel in Egypt. Urio's Te Deum was publ. by Chrysander in vol. 5 of his collection, 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst' (later publ. as Supplement 2 of Handel's complete works). —Cf. E. Prout, Urio's 'Te Deum' and Handel's Use Thereof, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (Nov., 1871); S. Taylor, The Indebtedness of Handel to Works by Other Composers (Cambridge, 1906); P. Robinson, Handel and his Orbits (London, 1908).

Urlus (ür-lüs), Jacques, noted tenor; b. Hergenrath, near Aachen, Jan. 9, 1867; d. Noordwijk, June 6, 1935. When he was 10, his parents moved to Tilburg, Holland, and there he received his first instruction from an uncle, who was a choral conductor; then he studied engineering in Utrecht; subsequently studied singing with Cornelia van Zanten. He made his operatic début as Beppo in Pagliacci at Amsterdam (Sept. 20, 1894); sang there until 1900; then was engaged at the Stadtheater in Leipzig (1900-15). In 1911 he sang Siegmund in Bayreuth. He made his American début in Boston as Tristan (Feb. 12, 1912); sang this role at his first appearance with the Metropolitan Opera (Feb. 8, 1913); was Wagnerian tenor there until 1917. —Cf. O. Spengler, Jacques Urlus (N. Y., 1917; in German and English).

Urrutia Blondel, Jorge, Chilean composer; b. La Serena, Sept. 7, 1905. He studied at the Univ. of Chile; also with H. Allende and Domingo Santa Cruz. In 1928 he received a stipend from the Chilean government to study in Europe; spent 3 years in France and Germany; took lessons with Charles Koechlin, Paul Dukas, and Nadia Boulanger in Paris; and with Hindemith and Hans Merzmann at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin. Returning to Chile he was appointed prof. of harmony at the Cons. in Santiago. His major work is the ballet La Guitarra del diablo, based on Chilean folklore, and including stylized treatment of native dance tunes; it was performed in Santiago on Nov. 27, 1942; other works include 3 orchestral suites; Danzas Agrestes, for orch.; Estampas de Chile, for strings, harp, and celesta; piano trio; string quartet; Pastoral de Alhué, for flute, clarinet, celesta, harp, and strings; Canciones campesinas, for voice and strings; Sugerencias de Chile, for violin and piano; various piano pieces; simple choral works for children. —Cf. Vicente Salas Viú, La Creación musical en Chile 1900-1951 (Santiago, 1952; pp. 459-67).

Urso (öör'-söh), Camilla, noted violinist; b. Nantes, France, June 13, 1842; d. New York, Jan. 20, 1902. Her father was an Italian musician from Palermo, and her mother a singer, a native of Lisbon. She began to study violin at home as a small child; was admitted to the Paris Cons. at the age of 9 as an exception, and studied there with Lambert Massart, but soon was taken by her father on a tour in the U. S., arriving in N. Y. in Sept. 1852, with Oscar Comettant as her accompanist. Her impresario went into bankruptcy, but she was engaged by Marietta Alboni as a joint artist for a few concerts. In 1853 she traveled with the Germania Society as far west as St. Louis; then gave concerts with Henrietta Sontag, playing in New Orleans, etc. In 1855, when she was 13, she withdrew from public appearances; lived mostly in Nashville. She resumed her career in 1862 (after her marriage to Frédéric Luères of Paris), dividing her time between Europe and America; appeared with P. S. Gilmore's band in New England; in 1879 and 1894 she visited Australia; in 1895, made a tour of South Africa; then settled in N. Y.; taught at the National Cons. of Music (1891-92); continued to appear in concerts at infrequent intervals. —Cf. C. Barnard, Camilla: A Tale of a Violin, Being the Artist Life of Camilla Urso (Boston, 1874).

Urspruch (öör'-shprööh), Anton, German pianist and composer; b. Frankfurt, Feb. 17, 1850; d. there, Jan. 11, 1907. He was a pupil of Ignaz Lachner, and later of Raff and Liszt; was engaged as piano teacher at the Raff Cons. in Frankfurt (1887). He wrote an opera, Der Sturm, after Shakespeare's Tempest (Frankfurt, 1888), and a comic opera, Das Unmöglichste von Allem, after Lope de Vega's comedy El major imposible (Karlsruhe, Nov. 5, 1897). Other works include a symph., a piano concerto, a piano quintet, a piano trio, a violin sonata, a cello sonata; many piano pieces; a Sonata quasi fantasia for piano 4 hands; songs; also publ. a book, Der gregorianische Choral (1901).

Ursprung (öör'-shprööh), Otto, German musicologist; b. Günzlhofen, Jan. 16, 1879. He studied philosophy and theology at the Univ. of Munich (1899-1904), and became a Catholic priest; studied musicology with Sandberger and Kroyer; Dr. phil. (Munich, 1911); his doctoral thesis was on Jacobus de Kerle, whose selected works he edited for the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vol. 26). In 1932 he was appointed honorary prof. of the Univ. of Munich. —Books: Restauration und Palestrina-Renaissance in der katholischen Kirchenmusik (Augsburg, 1924); Münchens Musikalische Vergangenheit (Munich, 1927); Die katholische Kirchenmusik (Potsdam, 1931). He publ. articles on a variety of subjects, ranging from Catholic church music to Oriental music; brought out a posthumous ed. of Kurt Huber's lectures, under the title Musikästhetik (1954).

Ursuleac, Viorica, soprano, b. Cernauti, Rumania, March 26, 1899. She studied at the State Academy in Vienna; joined the Berlin Opera in 1933; was also connected with the Vienna Opera from 1934; created the role of Maria in Richard Strauss's opera Der Friedenstag (1938). She was the wife of the conductor Clemens Krauss (q.v.).

Usandizaga (oo-sahn-dē-thäh'-gäh), José María, Spanish (Basque) composer; b. San Sebastián, March 31, 1887; d. Yanti, Oct. 5, 1915. He studied piano with Planté, and composition with Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum in Paris; upon his return to Spain he associated himself with the Basque musical movement, to which he gave a great impetus with his opera Mendy-Mendiyan, produced at Bilbao in 1910. In his next stage work, however, he abandoned the local terrain and chose a subject of universal appeal, the story of Pierrot, as embodied in a libretto by the noted playwright Martínez Sierra; this opera, entitled Las Golondrinas (The Swallows), was produced with tremendous success at the Teatro Price in Madrid on Feb. 5, 1914, being acclaimed as a milestone in the creation of a national Spanish opera. With his gift of melody and his keen sense of the theater, Usandizaga might have carried the Spanish lyric drama to great heights; but he died of tuberculosis at the untimely age of 28. His last opera was La Llama (The Flame), produced in Madrid in 1915. He also wrote several symph. pieces: En la mar, Obertura sinfónica, Irurak-Bat, Hassan y Melihah, etc.; Ume Zuriza (The Orphan) for soli with orch.; 2 string quartets; many piano pieces on Basque themes (Los Reyes Magos, Rapsodia Vascongada, etc.). —Cf. L. Villalba, J. M. Usandizaga (1918).

Usiglio, Emilio, Italian conductor and composer; b. Parma, Jan. 8, 1841; d. Milan, July 7, 1910. He studied with Mabellini; was a successful opera conductor; gave the first Italian performance of Carmen. He was married to the singer Clementina Brusa. —Works: operas: La Locandiera (Turin, Sept. 5, 1861); L'Eredità in Corsica (Milan, June 17, 1864); Le Educande di Sorrento (Florence, May 1, 1868); La Scommessa (Florence, July 6, 1870); Le Donne curiose (Madrid, Feb. 11, 1879); Le Nozze in prigione (Milan, March 23, 1881); several ballets. Also publ. some humorous verse.

Usmanbas, Ilkan, Turkish composer; b. Constantinople, Sept. 28, 1921. He studied at the Ankara Cons. with Saygun; in 1948, appointed teacher there. In 1952 he made a tour of the U. S. —Works: violin concerto (1946); symph. (Ankara, April 20, 1950); Music for string orch., percussion, piano, and narrator (1950); Mortuary, for narrator, chorus, and orch. (1952-53); clarinet quintet (1949); oboe sonata (1949); trumpet sonata (1949); piano music; choruses.

Uspensky, Victor Alexandrovitch, Russian composer; b. Kaluga, Aug. 31, 1879; d. Tashkent, Oct. 9, 1949. He was brought up in Central Asia, where his father held a government post; then served in the Russian army; learned to play the violin; entered the St. Petersburg Cons. at the age of 29, and studied composition with Liadov, graduating in 1913. In 1918 he went to Tashkent, where he organized a music school, and taught theoretical subjects. From 1932 to 1948 he was in charge of the Musical Folklore Division of Uzbekistan; worked towards the restoration of native musical instruments. In 1925-28 he took part in an ethnographical expedition in Turkmenia, collecting a number of songs. Out of this authentic material he fashioned an Uzbek opera, Farhad and Shirin, produced in Tashkent on Feb. 26, 1936 (new version, Moscow, Uzbek Festival, May, 1937). Other works include an orch. suite on Uzbek themes, Mukanna (1944); Turkmenian Capriccio for orch. (1945); Uzbek Rhapsody for orch. (1946); choral works; piano pieces; songs. He collaborated with Victor Belaiev in a scholarly treatise, Turkmenian Music (Moscow, 1928); publ. numerous arrangements of Uzbek songs. —Cf. Yan Pekker, V. A. Uspensky (Moscow, 1953).

Ussachevsky (öö-säh-chëf-skë), Vladimir, Russian-American composer; b. Hailar, Manchuria (of Russian parents), Nov. 3, 1911. He came to America in 1930; studied at Pomona, Calif., graduating from Pomona College in 1935; then at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, with Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers; received his Ph. D. there in 1939. He was in the American army during World War II; in 1947, was appointed to the faculty of Columbia Univ. His works include Jubilee Cantata, for chorus and orch. (1938); Theme and Variations, for orch. (1935); Miniatures for a Curious Child, for orch. (1950); piano concerto (1951); piano sonata (1952); songs and choruses. He became interested in electronic music; perfected an instrument capable of transforming recorded music in various ways, producing automatically repeated notes and diverse dynamic effects; composed and arranged a piece called Sonic Contours, for tape recorder with instruments (Museum of Modern Art, N. Y., Oct. 28, 1952); with Otto Luening he composed a Poem of Cycles and Bells, for tape recorder and orch. (Los Angeles, Nov. 18, 1954) and other works of a similar nature.

Utendal, Alexander, Dutch composer; b. Netherlands, c. 1530; d. Innsbruck, May 8, 1581. He was court musician to the Archduke Ferdinand of Austria at Innsbruck. Publ. 7 Penitential Psalms (1570); 3 books of motets (1570-77); Masses and Magnificats (1573); and Fröliche neue teutsche und französische Lieder for 4-8 voices (1574 and other eds.). Reprints in Proske, Musica Divina (vol. IV), and W. Barclay Squire, Ausgewählte Madrigale, etc. —Cf. H. Osthoff, Die Niederländer und das deutsche Lied (1938; p. 333 ff.).

Uttini, Francesco Antonio Baltassarè, Italian composer; b. Bologna, 1723; d. Stockholm, Oct. 25, 1795. He studied with Pertti; in 1743 he became a member of the Accademia dei Filarmonici in Bologna. He first appeared as a singer; in 1755 he went to Stockholm as conductor of an Italian opera company, and remained there until his death, except for a visit to London in 1768. He was court conductor at the Stockholm Opera from 1767 to 1787, and wrote

7 Italian and 5 French operas. Historically he is important as the composer of the earliest operas on Swedish texts; the first, Thetis och Pelée, was written for the inauguration of the new opera house (Jan. 18, 1773); another opera to a Swedish libretto, translated from the French, was Aline Drottning uti Golconda (Aline Queen of Golconda) produced at the Stockholm Opera on Jan. 11, 1776. Of Uttini's Italian operas the best is Il Re pastore (Stockholm, July 24, 1755). A great admirer of Gluck, he brought out many of that composer's works in Stockholm. He also wrote 2 oratorios, 3 symphonies (for 4, 6, and 8 instruments), 12 sonatas, 9 trios for 2 violins with continuo. 6 of his sonatas were publ. at London in 1768. —Cf. E. Sundström, F. A. Uttini och Adolf Fredriks italienska operatrupp, in 'Svensk Tidskrift för Musikforskning' (vol. 13; 1931).

V

Vaccai, Niccolò, Italian composer and singing teacher; b. Tolentino, March 15, 1790; d. Pesaro, Aug. 5, 1848. He went to Rome as a youth and took lessons in counterpoint with Jannaconi; then studied with Paisiello in Naples (from 1812). He became a singing teacher in Venice (1818-21), Trieste (1821-23), Vienna (1823), Paris (1829-31), and London (1832), with an ever-growing reputation; was prof. of composition at the Milan Cons. (1838-44); in 1844 he retired to Pesaro, where he remained until his death. —Operas: Pietro il Grande (Parma, Jan. 17, 1824); La Pastorella feudataria (Turin, Sept. 18, 1824); Giulietta e Romeo, after Shakespeare (Milan, Oct. 31, 1825; the last scene was often used in performances of Bellini's I Capuleti e i Montecchi); his subsequent 9 operas were failures. He publ. Metodo pratico di canto italiano per camera; and 12 ariette per camera, per l'insegnamento del belcanto italiano. —Cf. G. Vaccai, Vita di N. Vaccai (Bologna, 1882).

Vach, Ferdinand, Moravian choral leader; b. Jazlovce, Feb. 25, 1860; d. Brno, Feb. 16, 1939. He studied at the Organ School in Prague; 1886, appointed conductor of the 'Moravian' choir at Kroměříž; also taught singing at the Pedagogium there, and from among his pupils formed the Moravian Teachers' Choir in 1903, with which he toured in Germany, Russia, and England (1919). In 1905 he became prof. at the Teachers' School in Brno; composed choruses and cantatas; church music.

Vachon (vähsh-öhn'), Pierre, violinist and composer; b. Arles, 1731; d. Berlin, 1802. Pupil of Chabran in Paris from 1751; played at the Concert Spirituel in 1758; from 1761, solo violinist to the Prince de Conti; from 1784, at the Royal Chapel in Berlin; pensioned in 1798. Besides stage works, he composed violin concertos, string quartets, trios, sonatas, etc. (publ. in Paris, London, and Berlin). —A quartet for strings and continuo (op. 5, no. 3) was ed. by Sidney Beck for the N. Y. Public Library (1937).

Vačkář, Dalibor, composer; b. Korčula, Yugoslavia, Sept. 19, 1905. He studied at the Prague Cons.; played violin on the Prague Radio; then devoted himself to composition for the films. Under the name Dalibor Faltis he published poetry and drama. Among his musical works are 4 symphonies; the 3rd bears the curious title (in English), Smoking Symphony (1948); he also wrote a Smoking Sonata (1936); a violin concerto; and a quartet for oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and piano.

Vaet (vaht), Jacobus, Flemish composer; b. Courtrai, 1529; d. Vienna, Jan. 8, 1567. He was a choirboy in the Church of Notre Dame at Courtrai (1543-46); after his voice changed, he received a subsidy for 2 years of further study; on Jan. 1, 1554, he was listed as Kapellmeister of the chapel of Maximilian, then the nominal King of Bohemia. His position was enhanced when his patron became Emperor Maximilian II. Vaet's music exhibits a great variety of techniques, ranging in style from those of Josquin des Prez to those of Lassus. The formative influence, however, is mainly that of Nicolas Gombert, with a characteristic florid imitation in contrapuntal parts. The extant works of Vaet comprise 82 motets and hymns, 10 Masses, 8 Magnificats, and 3 chansons; a relatively large number of his motets (at least 11) are ceremonial, written to celebrate state or court occasions. 2 vols. of his motets, Modulationes 5 vocum and Modulationes 5 et 6 vocum, were publ. in 1562 by Gardano in Venice; a 6-voice motet, Qui operatus est Petro, was printed in luxurious format on a large single parchment sheet by Hofhalter of Vienna in 1560 (facsimile in Haas, Ausführungspraxis der Musik, Potsdam, 1931, p. 129). Zacconi printed a hymn in his Prattica di musica, Libro I, folio 50. Vaet is represented also in the publications of Berg and Neuber (30 motets), Giovanelli (24 motets), Susato (7 motets), Gerlach (3 motets), Phalèse (3 motets, 2 chansons), Stephani (2 motets, 1 chanson), Waelrant and Laet (1 chanson), Nicolas du Chemin (1 chanson), and Rühling (1 motet in organ tablature). Reprints appear in Commer's Collectio operum musicorum Batavorum (20 motets) and his Musica sacra (1 Mass), and in Maldeghem, Trésor musical (1 motet). E. H. Meyer edited Jacobus Vaet, Sechs Motetten as vol. 2 of 'Das Chorwerk,' 1929, and Milton Steinhardt edited Jacobus Vaet, Zwei Hymnen as vol. 8 of 'Musik alter Meister' (1958). — Cf. Milton Steinhardt, Jacobus Vaet and His Motets (Michigan State College Press, 1951; thematic index and 3 complete works included); Milton Steinhardt, The Hymns of Jacobus Vaet, in the 'Journal of the American Musicological Society' (Fall, 1956); G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 700-01).

Vainberg, Moysey Samuilovitch, Russian composer; b. Warsaw, Dec. 8, 1919. He studied piano with Turczynski at the Warsaw Cons. and composition with Zolotarev in Minsk; he was in Tashkent in 1941-43; in 1943 settled in Moscow. — Works: opera, The Sword of Uzbekistan (Tashkent, 1941); ballet, For the Fatherland (Tashkent, 1941); cantata, In the Native Land (Moscow, Feb. 1, 1953); 3 symphonies (1942, 1946, 1949); Symphonietta (Kiev, Nov. 13, 1948); Rhapsody on Moldavian Themes (Moscow, Nov. 30, 1949); Serenade for orch. (Moscow, Nov. 7, 1954); cello concerto (1943); Moldavian Rhapsody for violin and orch. (Moscow, Oct. 21, 1951); piano quintet (1944); 6 string quartets; piano trio; string trio; 4 piano sonatas; 5 violin sonatas; cello sonata; clarinet sonata; flute sonata; many songs; music for films.

Valabrega, Cesare, Italian pianist and writer on music; b. Novara, Dec. 27, 1898. He studied piano at the Cons. of Pesaro and literature at the Univ. of Bologna; taught music history in Naples and Perugia; then settled in Rome as lecturer and critic. — Books: Schumann: arte e natura; arte e vita; arte e fede (1934; 3rd ed., 1956); Domenico Scarlatti: il suo secolo, la sua opera (1937; 2nd ed., 1955); Il piccolo dizionario musicale per tutti (1929; 2nd ed., 1952); Johann Sebastian Bach (1950); La lirica di camera di Vincenzo Davico (1953).

Valcárcel (vahl-kahr'-sühl), Teodoro, Peruvian composer; b. Puno, Oct. 18, 1900; d. Lima, March 20, 1942. He studied at the Cons. of Milan and with Felipe Pedrell in Barcelona. Returning to Peru in 1920, he settled in Lima; in 1928 he won the National Prize for Peruvian composers, and was awarded a gold medal from the municipality of Lima for his studies in Peruvian folk music. In 1929 he went to Europe once more; presented a concert of his works in Paris (April 12, 1930). He was of pure Indian origin; as a native of the highlands, he was able to collect Indian songs unpoluted by urban influences. He publ. 30 Cantos de alma vernacular; 4 Canciones incaicas; 25 Romances de costa y sierra peruana; 180 Melodías del folklore. Among his original works are the ballets (with singing) Suray-Surita and Chori Kancha; a symph. poem, En las ruinas del Templo del Sol (1940); a violin concerto, entitled Concierto indio (1939); 3 Ensayos for an ensemble of native instruments; Fiestas andinas for piano; Suite autóctona for violin and piano; songs. — A catalogue of his works was publ. by R. Holzmänn in 'Boletín Bibliográfico' (Lima, Dec., 1942).

Valderrábano. See Enriquez de Valderrábano.

Valderrama, Carlos, Peruvian composer; b. Trujillo, Sept. 4, 1887; d. Lima, Aug. 1, 1950. He studied engineering at Cornell Univ., then decided to devote himself to music; made his début as a pianist at Carnegie Hall, N. Y. (Feb. 22, 1920). He wrote many piano pieces on old Inca themes, in a salon style (several of them published), and some ballet music.

Valdrighi (vähł-dr'gē), Luigi Francesco, Italian music scholar; b. Modena, July 30, 1827; d. there, April 20, 1899. For his valuable researches regarding music and musicians in Modena he was made honorary member of the Academy of Arts and Sciences there, and of the Accademia Santa Cecilia in Rome. His collection of early musical instruments, exhibited in Bologna (1899), he bequeathed to the Museum of his native city. Under the collective title 'Musurgiana' he publ. a number of monographs on the music and musicians of Modena (1879-93); in the 'Memorie della Accademia modenese' he publ. I Bononcini di Modena (1882), Cappelle, concerti e musiche di casa d'Este (1884), and Il Phagotus d'Afranio (1895); also publ. Ricerche sulla liuteria e violinaria modenese antica e moderna (1878) and Nomocheliurgografia antica e moderna (1884; with 2 supplements, 1888 and 1894). Together with G. Ferrari-Moreni he completed A. Gandini's Cronistoria dei teatri di Modena (1873). — Cf. E. Zoccoli, Il Conte L. F. V. (Modena, 1899).

Valen, Fartein, noted Norwegian composer; b. Stavanger, Aug. 25, 1887; d. Haugesund, Dec. 14, 1952. His father was a missionary in Madagascar, and Valen spent his early youth there. Upon returning to Norway he studied with Elling in Oslo and later with Max Bruch in Berlin. His early music shows the influence of Brahms and Reger. About 1924, he developed a system of 'atonal polyphony,' completely free from traditional tonal relationships, but strongly cohesive in contrapuntal fabric and greatly varied in rhythm. He never adopted the 12-tone method of composition, but a parallelism with Schoenberg's music is observable. Valen stood apart from all nationalist developments in Norway, and was a solitary figure in this respect; however he was appreciated, and in 1935 received a state pension. A Valen Society was organized during his last year of life. His works include 5 symphonies; Sonetto di Michelangelo (1932; Copenhagen Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 2, 1947); Epithalamion (1933); Le Cimetière marin, symph. poem (1934); La Isla de las calmas (1934); Ode to Solitude (1939); violin concerto (1940; Amsterdam Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 12, 1948); Mignon, 2 songs to Goethe's words for soprano and orch. (1927); Darest thou now, O soul (Walt Whitman), for soprano and orch. (1928); piano trio (1924); 2 string quartets (1929; 1931); serenade for 5 wind instruments (1947); violin sonata (1916); several piano pieces, including a sonata, sur-named The Hound of Heaven, after Francis Thompson (1941); choral works a cappella; in songs. —Cf. K. Lange, Fartein Valen, in 'Nordisk Musikkultur' (Feb., 1953).

Valencia, Antonio María, Colombian pianist and composer; b. Cali, Nov. 10, 1902; d. there, July 22, 1952. He studied at the Schola Cantorum in Paris (from 1923) with Vincent d'Indy and Paul Le Flem; returning to Colombia in 1930, he founded the Cali Cons., and was its director until his death, with the exception of a brief period of directorship of the Bogotá Cons. (1937-38). He gave piano recitals in Europe and America. —Works: Chirimía y bambuco sotaño for orch. (1942); Egloga incaica for flute, oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1935); Emociones caucanas, for piano, violin, and cello (1938); numerous pieces for piano solo, inspired by native melorhythms (8 Ritmos y cantos suramericanos, Sonatina boyacense, etc.); a Requiem (1943) and other church music; choruses and songs.

Valente, Antonio (known as 'il Cieco,' i.e. the blind man), Italian organist and composer; b. Naples, about 1520. Blind from infancy, he played the organ; was organist at Sant'Angelo a Nido in Naples. His first publication, Intavolatura de cimbalo: Recercate, fantasie et canzoni francese desminuite con alcuni tenori balli et varie sorti de contraponti . . . (Naples, 1575), is in Spanish keyboard tablature and contains early keyboard fantasias, written out in detail; his 2nd book, Versi spirituali sopra tutte le note, con diversi canoni spartiti per suonar negli organi, messe, vespere et altri officii divini (Naples, 1580), represents an early type of keyboard partitura; 3 numbers were reprinted by L. Torchi in 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. 3): —Cf. N. Caravaglios, Una nuova 'Intavolatura de Cimbalo' di Antonio Valente Cieco, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (vol. XXIII, p. 491); Willi Apel, Neapolitan Links between Cabezon and Frescobaldi, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1938).

Valente, Giorgio. See Vitalis, George.

Valente, Vincenzo, Italian operetta composer; b. Corigliano Calabro, Feb. 21, 1855; d. Naples, Sept. 6, 1921. At the age of 15 he wrote a song, Ntuniella, which became popular; continued writing Neapolitan songs of great appeal (Basta ca po', Comme te voglio amà!, Canzone Cafona, Mugliera comme fa, Ninuccia, Tiempo felice, L'Acqua, etc.), about 400 songs in all. He also brought out numerous operettas: I Granatieri (Turin, Oct. 26, 1889), La Sposa di Charolles (Rome, March 3, 1894), Rolandino (Turin, Oct. 15, 1897), L'Usignuolo (Naples, May 10, 1899), Lena (Foggia, Jan. 1, 1918), L'Avvocato Trafichetti (Naples, May 24, 1919), Nènesi (posthumous, Naples, July 23, 1923). His son, Nicola Valente (b. Naples, Aug. 28, 1881), was also a composer of Neapolitan songs and light operas.

Valentin, Erich, German musicologist; b. Strasbourg, Nov. 27, 1906. He studied with Otto Volkman in Magdeburg, and with Sandberger in Munich (Ph. D., 1928); held several posts as lecturer on music and librarian. From 1957, co-editor of 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik.' —Books: Die Entwicklung der Toccata im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert (Munich dissertation; Münster, 1930); Georg Philipp Telemann: eine Biographie (Burg, 1931; 2nd ed., Hamelin, 1947); Richard Wagner (Regensburg, 1937); Dichtung und Oper: eine Untersuchung zum

Stilproblem der Oper (Leipzig, 1938); Hans Pfitzner (Regensburg, 1939); Wege zu Mozart (Regensburg, 1941; 4th ed., 1950); Beethoven (Salzburg, 1942; English transl., N. Y., 1958); W. A. Mozart: Wesen und Wandlung (Hamelin, 1948); Handbuch der Chormusik (Regensburg, 1953); Handbuch der Instrumentenkunde (Regensburg, 1954); contributed articles to various musical magazines; brought out editions of works by Mozart, Telemann, etc.

Valentini, Giovanni, Italian composer; b. Venice; d. Vienna, April, 1649. He was a pupil of Giovanni Gabrieli; from 1614, organist to the Archduke Ferdinand at Graz, becoming court organist at Vienna when Ferdinand ascended the throne in 1619; in 1629 succeeded Prioli as Imperial Kapellmeister. He was a renowned teacher of organ. Publ. Motetti a 6 voci (1611); 5 books of madrigals for 3 to 11 voices with instruments; Musiche a 2 voci with bass for organ (1622); Canzoni per sonar, 4-8 voices; in MS, Masses, Magnificats, a Stabat Mater, and sonatas. Riemann published an 'Enharmonische Sonate' in 'Alte Kammermusik' but its authenticity is disputed.

Valentini, Giuseppe, Italian violinist and composer; b. c. 1681; d. c. 1740. He was at Rome in 1700; from 1710 at Bologna in the service of the Prince di Caserta, and from 1735 at the grand-ducal court of Florence. His violin technique was highly developed (some compositions call for the 6th position). Publ. 12 Sinfonie for 2 violins and continuo (organ); 7 Bizzarrie for 2 violins and cello; 12 Fantasie for 2 violins and continuo; 12 Suonate for the same; Idee per camera for violin solo and cello (or cembalo); 12 Concerti grossi for strings and continuo; 12 Sonate o Alletamenti for violin and continuo. --Modern reprints ed. by O. Respighi, G. Salmon, A. Moffat, etc.

Valentini, Pier Francesco, Italian theorist and composer of the Roman School; b. Rome, c. 1570; d. there, 1654. He was a pupil of G. M. Nanini. Publ. Canone . . . sopra le parole del Salve Regina, 'Illos tuos misericordes oculos ad nos converte,' con le resolutioni a 2, 3, 4 e 5 voci (1629); a canon with over 2000 possible resolutions; the theme is in Kircher's Musurgia, I, p. 402; Canone nel nodo di Salomone a 96 voci (1631); also in Musurgia, I, p. 104; Canone a 6, 10, 20 voci (1645); 2 books of madrigals a 5 with continuo ad lib. and 2 books of motets with instruments (1654); 6 books of Canzonetti spirituali for 1 to 4 voices (1655-56); 2 books of Musiche spirituali for 1 and 2 voices, Canzoni, sonetti ed arie a voce sola, 4 books of Conzonette ed arie a 1, 2 voci (all 1657); 2 books of litanies and motets for 2 to 4 voices. Also 2 stage works (favole), La Mitra and La Trasformazione di Dafne (both 1654), and several theoretical works (in MS). --Cf. L. Kurz, Die Tonartenlehre des römischen Theoretikers und Komponisten P. F. Valentini (dissertation; Kassel, 1937).

Valentino, Henri-Justin-Armand-Joseph, French conductor; b. Lille, Oct. 14, 1785; d. Versailles, Jan. 20, 1865. In 1820 he was 2nd conductor, and in 1824 became 1st conductor, at the Opéra in Paris; from 1831 to 1837 was conductor at the Opéra-Comique; then founded a society of popular concerts of classical music, as a rival enterprise to the Conservatory Concerts, at the Salle St-Honoré (since called the 'Salle Valentino'), but discontinued them in 1841.

Valerius, Adrianus (Adriaan), Dutch musician; b. Middelburg, 1575; d. Veer, Jan. 27, 1625. From 1606 lived in Veer as a notary; publ. an important lute-tablature book, Nederlandsche Gedenckclanck (Haarlem, 1626; reprinted in part in the publ. of the 'Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis' II [1871]; 2nd ed., The Hague, 1893; 3rd ed., Utrecht, 1931; new ed., Amsterdam, 1942). --Cf. J. W. Enschedé, De Wilhelmus-melodie in de Gedenckclanck van Valerius, in the 'Tijdschrift' of the Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis (vol. 5; 1897); see also 'Six Ancient Songs of the Netherlands, from A. V.' (ed. by E. Kremser; English text by Th. Baker; N. Y., 1894).

Vallas, Léon, French writer on music; b. Roanne (Loire), May 17, 1879; d. Lyons, May 9, 1956. After studying medicine in Lyons, he took up music; in 1903 founded the 'Revue Musicale de Lyon' (from 1912 to 1914 this was known as the 'Revue de Musique Française,' and from 1920 to 1929, as 'Nouvelle Revue Musicale'); in 1908 he was engaged as lecturer on music history at the Univ. of Lyons. --Books: La Musique à l'Académie de Lyon au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (part of his doctoral thesis, Lyons, 1908; the complete work was publ. as Un Siècle de musique et de théâtre à Lyon, 1688-1789, Lyons, 1932); Le Théâtre et la ville, 1694-1712 (1919); Les Idées de Claude Debussy, musicien français (Paris, 1927; English transl. as The Theories of Claude Debussy, London, 1929); Georges Migot (Paris, n.d.); Claude Debussy et son temps (Paris, 1932; English transl. as Claude Debussy, His Life and Works, London, 1933); Achille-Claude Debussy, a brief biography (Paris, 1944); a 2-vol. biography of Vincent d'Indy: vol. 1, La Jeunesse (1851-1886); vol. 2, La Maturité, la vieillesse (1886-1931), publ. in Paris (1946; 1950); La véritable histoire de César Franck (Paris, 1950; in English as César Franck, London, 1951).

Valle de Paz. See Del Valle de Paz.

Valle-Riestra (vahl'-yeh-rē-es'-trāh), José María, Peruvian composer; b. Lima, Nov. 9, 1859; d. there, Jan. 25, 1925. He studied as a child in London; after his return to Lima, he continued his musical education without a teacher; as a mature musician, he went to Paris for further studies, with André Gedalge (1895-97). When the Academia Nacional de Música was organized in Lima, he was appointed prof. there. In his compositions, it was his aim to contribute towards the establishment of a national school by the employment of old Inca melodies. His opera Ollanta (Lima, Dec. 26, 1900) was a successful dramatization of an Inca subject. His other two operas on Inca themes were Las Rosas de Jamaica (1 act), and Atahualpa (3 acts). He also wrote Misa de Requiem for chorus and orch.; En Oriente for orch.; Elegia for string orch.; choruses a cappella; songs.

Valleria (real name Schoening), Alwina, American soprano; b. Baltimore, Oct. 12, 1848; d. Nice, Feb. 17, 1925. She studied singing in London with Luigi Arditi; made her first appearance in London (June 2, 1871); was engaged to sing Italian opera at St. Petersburg; returning to England, she became very successful in opera, including the Wagnerian repertory. She made her American début as Marguerite (N. Y., Oct. 22, 1879); sang Leonora at the Metropolitan Opera House (Oct. 26, 1883); but then retired from the stage.

Vallet (vāh-lā'), Nicolas, French lutenist; b. Cocheni, 1583; d. Amsterdam, c. 1626. In 1615 he publ. at Amsterdam a book of French, German, and English songs, also preludes, fantasias, etc., in lute tablature: Secretum Musarum (2nd ed., 1618, with the title Paradisus musicus testudinis); also publ. Le second livre de tabulature de luth (1618), and 21 Psaumes de David (in lute tablature; 1619).

Vallotti, Francesco Antonio, Italian theorist and composer; b. Vercelli, June 11, 1697; d. Padua, Jan. 10, 1780. A Franciscan monk, he was a pupil of Calegari at Padua; from 1728, maestro at the church of S. Antonio. He was one of the foremost organists of his time. —Publ. works: Responsoria in parascève, Resp. in Sabbato Sancto, and Resp. in Coena Domini, all a 4 (Masses, motets, etc., in MS at Padua); and Della scienza teorica e pratica della moderna musica, Book 1 (Padua, 1779; republ. by Bernardino Rizzi, Padua, 1950; other 3 books unpubl.), a learned work agreeing in the main principles with Rameau and Tartini, and correcting some of their errors; Vallotti's system is explained in La vera idea delle musicali numeriche signature, by L. A. Sabbatini, who, like Abbé Vogler, was Vallotti's pupil. —Cf. L. A. Sabbatini, Notizie sopra la vita e le opere di F. A. Vallotti (Padua, 1780).

Valvasensi, Lazaro, Italian organist and composer; b. Valvasone (Udine), c. 1600; date of death unknown. In 1622, he was organist at Murano (Venice); in 1626, choir-master at Tolmezzo (Udine); from 1634-40, organist at Valvasone. Publ. Letanie della B. V. a 5 voci, con un Mottetto nell' ultimo concertato per sonar nell'Organo (Venice, 1622); Compieta concertata a 4 voci with continuo (Venice, 1626); Secondo giardino d'amorosi fiori (23 solo airs and 1 duet, with instrumental accompaniment; Venice, 1634; unique copy at Christ Church, Oxford).

Valverde (vāh-l-vēhr'-dēh), Joaquín, Spanish composer of light opera; b. Badajoz, Feb. 27, 1846; d. Madrid, March 17, 1910. He played the flute in bands from the age of 13; then studied at the Cons. of Madrid; received a prize for his orchestral work, Batylo (1871). From 1871 to 1889 he conducted theater orchestras in Madrid; taught flute at the Madrid Cons., and wrote melodic studies for his instrument. In collaboration with Chueca (q.v.), he wrote a number of zarzuelas, of which the most celebrated was La gran vía (Madrid, July 2, 1886; produced in London on April 18, 1906 as Castles in Spain); it contains the march Cádiz, which became immensely popular. — His son, Joaquín Valverde y San Juan, known under his diminutive given name Quinito (b. Madrid, Jan. 2, 1875; d. Mexico City, Nov. 4, 1918), was also a composer; wrote some 250 light pieces for the theater; his zarzuela El gran capitán was especially successful. He died during an American tour which he undertook as conductor of a light opera company.

Van Aerde, Raymond (Joseph Justin), Belgian musicologist; b. Mechlin, June 4, 1876; d. there, March, 1944. He was librarian and lecturer on music history at the Cons. of Mechlin. His writings include a life of Cipriano de Rore (Mechlin, 1909); Les Tuerlinckx, luthiers à Malines (Mechlin, 1914); Ménétriers communaux et instrumentistes . . . à Malines de 1311 à 1790 (Mechlin, 1911); Musicalia; documents pour servir à l'histoire de la musique . . . à Malines (2 vols.; Mechlin, 1925-30); Les Ancêtres flamands de Beethoven (Mechlin, 1928).

Van Beinum, Eduard. See Beinum.

Van Bree, Joannes. See Bree.

Van Cleve, John Smith, American pianist and composer; b. Maysville, Ky., Oct. 30, 1851; d. New York, Dec. 28, 1917. He became totally blind at the age of 9; studied with Apthorp in Boston; was active in Cincinnati as a piano teacher and music critic (1879-97); then lived in Chicago; in 1913 moved to N. Y. He publ. a Gavotte humoresque for piano, and some other pieces. —Cf. L. C. Elson, The History of American Music (N. Y., 1904; p. 331).

Van den Boorn-Coclet (koh-klä'), Henriette, Belgian composer; b. Liège, Jan. 15, 1866; d. there, March 6, 1945. She studied with Radoux and Dupuis at the Liège Cons., and subsequently taught harmony there. Her compositions attracted considerable attention. She wrote a symph.; a symph. poem, Le Renouveau; a Sérénade, for cello and piano; various piano pieces (Mazurka, Caprice, etc.); songs.

Van den Borren, Charles (-Jean-Eugène), eminent Belgian musicologist; b. Ixelles, near Brussels, Nov. 17, 1874. He studied theory with E. Closson; after receiving the degree of Dr. juris, he practiced law until 1905; then devoted himself to historical research in music; became one of the greatest authorities on the music of the Renaissance; was lecturer at the Univ. of Liège (1927-44); from 1926, prof. of music history at the Université Libre of Brussels; held many positions in learned societies. —Writings: L'Œuvre dramatique de César Franck (1907); Les Origines de la musique de clavecin en Angleterre (1912; English transl. as The Sources of Keyboard Music in England, 1914); Les Musiciens belges en Angleterre à l'époque de la Renaissance (1913); Les Origines de la musique de clavecin dans les Pays-Bas (Nord et Sud) jusque vers 1630

(1914); Les Débuts de la musique à Venise (1914); Orlande de Lassus (1920); Le Manuscrit musical M.222 C.22 de la Bibliothèque de Strasbourg (Antwerp, 1924); Guillaume Dufay (1926); Études sur le quinzième siècle musical (Antwerp, 1941); Peter Benoît (Brussels, 1942); Roland de Lassus (Brussels, 1944); Geschiedenis van de muziek in de Nederlanden (2 vols.; Antwerp, 1948-51); etc. He edited 'Polyphonia sacra' (15th-century pieces; publ. London, 1932); 'Pièces polyphoniques profanes de provenance liégeoise (XV<sup>e</sup> siècle)' (Brussels, 1950); co-editor of the collected works of Philippe de Monte (1927 ff.). —A compendium, Homage to Charles Van den Borren (Antwerp, 1945), contains a list of his works; cf. also A. Van der Linden, Les septante-cinq ans de Charles Van den Borren, in 'Revue Belge de Musicologie' (vol. 3; 1949).

Van den Eeden. See Eeden.

Van der Horst, Anton. See Horst.

Van der Linden, Cornelis, Dutch conductor and composer; b. Dordrecht, Aug. 24, 1839; d. there, May 28, 1918. He studied with Kwast (piano) and F. Böhme (theory); after sojourns in Belgium, Paris, and Germany, he conducted various choral organizations; from 1875, also led symphony concerts; he was conductor of the newly established Nederlandsche Oper in Amsterdam (1888-94); produced 2 of his own operas there: Catharina en Lambert (Nov. 24, 1888) and Leiden Ontzet (The Relief of Leiden) (April 1, 1893); he also wrote 7 overtures, cantatas, piano sonatas, and many choral works and songs.

Van der Straeten (sträh'-ten), Edmond, Belgian music historian; b. Audenarde, Dec. 3, 1826; d. there, Nov. 26, 1895. He studied philosophy in Ghent; went to Brussels in 1857 as secretary to Fétis, with whom he studied counterpoint. He held a lifelong position at the Royal Library, and rarely left Belgium; was active as music critic (1859-72); wrote an opera, Le Proscrit. His reputation rests upon his scholarly publications, dealing with music in the Low Countries. He publ. a monumental work of reference, La Musique au Pays-Bas avant le XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle (1867-88; 8 vols.); other writings are: Coup d'œil sur la musique actuelle à Audenarde (1851); Notice sur Charles-Félix de Hollande (1854); Notice sur les carillons d'Audenarde (1855); Recherches sur la musique à Audenarde avant le XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle (1856); Examen des chants populaires des Flamands de France, publiés par E. de Coussemaker (1858); Jacques de Gœuy, chanoine d'Embrun (1863); J.-F.-J. Janssens (1866); Wagner; Verslag aan den heer minister van binnenlandsche Zaken (1871); Le Théâtre villageois en Flandre (2 vols.; 1874, 1880); Les Musiciens belges en Italie (1875); Voltaire musicien (1878); La Mélodie populaire dans l'opéra 'Guillaume Tell' de Rossini (1879); Lohengrin: instrumentation et philosophie (1879); Turin musical (1880); Jacques de Saint-Luc (1887); La Musique congratulatoire en 1454, etc. (1888); Cinque lettres intimes de Roland de Lassus (1891); Notes sur quelques instruments de musique (1891); Les Ballets des rois en Flandre; xylographie, musique, coutumes, etc. (1892); Nos périodiques musicaux (1893); Charles V musicien (1894); Les Willems, luthiers gantois du XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1896; with C. Snoeck).

Van der Straeten, Edmund Sebastian Joseph, German cellist; b. Düsseldorf, April 29, 1855; d. London, Sept. 17, 1934. He studied cello in Cologne; in 1881 went to London, where he entered the Guildhall School of Music; in 1889 he began to study the viola da gamba, and later formed a trio with his son Ludwig and N. Greiffenhagen for the performance of music for viols by English, French, and German composers of the Baroque. —Author of The Technics of Violoncello Playing (1898; 2nd ed., 1905); The Romance of the Fiddle (1911); History of the Violoncello, the Viol da Gamba, their Precursors and Collateral Instruments (1915); The History of the Violin (2 vols.; 1933).

Van der Stucken, Frank (Valentin), American conductor; b. Fredericksburg, Texas, Oct. 15, 1858; d. Hamburg, Aug. 16, 1929. Taken by his parents to Antwerp in 1866, he studied with Peter Benoît; then spent 2 years (1876-78) in Leipzig, where he was aided in his study of composition by Reinecke, and met Grieg; was in Weimar with Liszt (1883); then returned to the U. S.; became conductor of the N. Y. Arion Society (1884-95), and took it on a tour in Germany in 1892. He was the first to conduct a concert of symph. works by American composers abroad, when at the Paris Exposition (July 12, 1889) he gave 1st European performances of works by MacDowell, Foote, Chadwick, Huss, and others; also conducted a series of concerts (including American compositions) in Germany. From 1895 to 1903 he was director of the Cincinnati College of Music; from 1895 to 1907, conductor of the Cincinnati Symph. Orch. On the sudden death of Anton Seidl (1898), he was called upon to conduct the remaining concerts of the season of the N. Y. Philharmonic. From 1907 he lived chiefly in Germany. He wrote an opera, Vlasda (not produced); Pagina d'Amore, for orch. and a number of light pieces for strings; also choruses. —Cf. 'Publications of the American Academy of Arts and Letters' No. 77 (N. Y., 1932).

Van Dieren, Bernard. See Dieren.

Van Doorslaer, Georges, Belgian musicologist; b. Mechlin, Sept. 27, 1864; d. there, Jan. 16, 1940. He was a physician by profession, but studied music as an avocation; wrote several valuable treatises dealing with Belgian musicians: Herry Bredemers, 1472-1522 (Antwerp, 1915); De Toonkunstenaars der familie Vredeman (Antwerp, 1920); La Vie et les œuvres de Philippe de Monte (Brussels, 1921); and Rinaldo del Mel (Antwerp, 1922). Also edited 8 vols. in the collected ed. of works by Philippe de Monte.

Van Dresser, Marcia, American soprano; b. Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 4, 1877; d. London, July 11, 1937. She studied in Chicago and N. Y.; sang minor parts at the Metropolitan Opera (1903-04); then after further study in Germany, she made her European début in Dresden (1907); was a member of the Dessau Opera (1908-10) and of the Frankfurt Opera (1911-14). Returning to the U. S. in 1915, she gave a recital in N. Y. (March 22, 1915), and joined the Chicago Opera (1915-17).

Van Duyze (fan doiz), Florimond, Belgian music scholar and composer; b. Ghent, Aug. 4, 1843; d. there, May 18, 1910. He studied at the Ghent Cons., winning the Belgian Grand Prix de Rome in 1873 with the cantata, Torquato Tasso's dood. He wrote 11 operas, which he produced in Ghent and Antwerp. He made valuable studies of old Netherland vocal music and publ. the important collection 'Het oude nederlandse Lied' (4 vols.; 1903-08), also a new ed. of Phalèse's Duytsch musijck boeck (1572; Leipzig, 1903). Wrote Oude nederlandse Liedern (1889); Het eenstemmig fransch en nederlandse wereldijk Lied in de belgische gewesten, van de XI<sup>e</sup> eeuw tot heden (1902). —Cf. P. Bergmans, Florimond van Duyze, in the 'Annuaire' of the Académie royale des sciences . . . (Brussels, 1919).

Van Dyck, Ernest (Marie Hubert), Belgian tenor; b. Antwerp, April 2, 1861; d.

Berlaer-lez-Lierre, Aug. 31, 1923. He studied law; was a journalist in Paris; sang in the Ninth Symph. of Beethoven at a Lamoureux concert (Dec. 2, 1883); made his operatic début as Lohengrin in the memorable French première on May 3, 1887; his performance of Parsifal in Bayreuth (1888) was highly praised; from 1888 to 1898 he was a member of the Vienna Opera; from 1898 to 1902, he sang Wagnerian roles at the Metropolitan Opera (début as Tannhäuser, Nov. 29, 1898). After his return to Europe he continued to appear as a Wagnerian tenor until 1906, when he settled down as a singing teacher in Brussels and Antwerp. In 1886 he married Augusta Servais, a sister of the famous cellist.

Van Gilse, Jan. See Gilse.

Van Hagen, Peter Albrecht, Dutch musician active in America; b. Holland, 1750; d. Boston, 1803. After his arrival in America from Holland in 1774, he settled in Charleston, S. C., as a music teacher; from 1789 to 1796, was in N. Y., giving concerts with his wife and son; in 1796 the family moved to Boston. He composed a Federal Overture (1797; not to be confused with The Federal Overture by B. Clarr, q.v.); a Funeral Dirge for George Washington (1800); much theater music. His son, Peter Albrecht, Jr. (1781-1837), born in Charleston, was also a musician; he wrote songs and composed an overture. — Cf. O. G. Sonneck, Early Concert-Life in America (1907).

Van Hal. See Wanhal.

Van Hoogstraten, Willem. See Hoogstraten.

Van Hoose, Ellison, American tenor; b. Murfreesboro, Tenn., Aug. 18, 1868; d. Houston, Texas, March 24, 1936. He studied with Luckstone in N. Y., Jean de Reszke in Paris, and also in Rome and London. He made his operatic début with the Damrosch Opera Co. in Philadelphia as Tannhäuser (Dec. 11, 1897); toured with Mme. Melba in the U. S. (1903-05) and Mme. Sembrich (1906-07); toured in Europe (1908-10); was a member of the Chicago Opera Co. (1911-12); then devoted himself mainly to oratorio singing.

Van Katwijk, Paul. See Katwijk.

Van Lier, Bertus, Dutch composer; b. Utrecht, Sept. 10, 1906. He studied composition with Willem Pijper in Amsterdam, and conducting with Scherchen in Strasbourg; settled in Utrecht as conductor, composer, and music critic. In 1945 he became an instructor at the Rotterdam Cons. Among his works are several symphonies; De Dijk, for narrator and chamber orch.; chamber music; choruses; piano music. He also wrote a ballet, Catharsis (Utrecht, Nov. 29, 1950).

Van Lier, Jacques, Dutch cellist; b. The Hague, April 24, 1875; d. Worthing, England, Feb. 25, 1951. He studied cello with Hartog at The Hague and with Eberle in Rotterdam; joined the Berlin Philharmonic in 1897; from 1899 to 1915 was instructor of cello at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Cons. in Berlin. He was cellist in the 'Holländisches Trio,' with J. van Veen (violin) and Goenraad Bos (piano), which enjoyed a European reputation (1900-07); in 1915 settled in The Hague; after 1939 went to England. He publ. Violoncellbogentechnik and Moderne Violoncelltechnik der linken und der rechten Hand; also edited about 400 classical pieces for cello. — Cf. 'Musical Opinion' (Oct., 1931).

Van Maldeghem. See Maldeghem.

Van Maldere, Pierre. See Maldere.

Vannuccini (vähn-nööch-chê-nê), Luigi, noted Italian singing master; b. Fojano, Dec. 4, 1828; d. Montecatini, Aug. 14, 1911. He studied at the Cons. in Florence, where he became an opera conductor (1848); then turned to the study of the piano, and appeared as a concert pianist with excellent success; finally settled in Florence, devoted himself exclusively to vocal training, and acquired fame as a singing master. He publ. some songs and piano pieces. — Cf. L. Neri, Luigi Vannuccini, in 'Musica d'Oggi' (1931).

Van Otterloo, Willem, Dutch conductor; b. Winterswijk, Dec. 27, 1907. He studied cello with Orobio de Castro and composition with Sem Dresden at the Amsterdam Cons.; played the cello in the Utrecht Orch.; 1933, assistant conductor there; 1937, associate conductor. In 1949 he became conductor of the Residentie Orch. at The Hague. His compositions include an Introduction and Allegro for orch.; a suite for string orch.; a sinfonietta for winds; Divertimento for brass, celesta, piano, and percussion (Holland Festival, The Hague, June 5, 1952, composer conducting); choral works; piano pieces; songs. — Cf. W. Paap, Willem van Otterloo, in 'Mens en Melodie' (April, 1949).

Van Raalte, Albert. See Raalte, Albert van.

Van Rooy (fan roh'-ē), Anton (Antonius Maria Josephus), Dutch baritone; b. Rotterdam, Jan. 1, 1870; d. Munich, Nov. 28, 1932. He was a chorister in a church; studied voice with Stockhausen at Frankfurt. In 1897 he was engaged to sing at Bayreuth, and performed there the 3 Wotans with excellent success. On Dec. 14, 1898 he made his American début as Wotan in Die Walküre at the Metropolitan Opera, where he appeared each season until 1908, singing in the summers at Covent Garden, London, and Bayreuth. In 1908 he was engaged as a regular member of the Frankfurt Opera. He was particularly distinguished in Wagnerian roles, but also was noted for his interpretations of Escamillo in Carmen and Valentin in Faust.

Van Vactor, David, American composer and conductor; b. Plymouth, Ind., May 8, 1906. He studied at Northwestern Univ. with Arthur Kittl (flute) and Arne Oldberg, Felix Borowski and Albert Noelte (composition). After a year in Vienna (1928) he returned to Chicago, where he became a flutist in the Chicago Symph. Orch. (1931-43). He organized a woodwind quintet, and toured Latin America; went to South America as conductor in 1946. From 1943 to 1945, he was flutist and assistant conductor of the Kansas City Philharmonic; in 1947 he was appointed conductor of the Knoxville Symph. Orch. — Works: Chaconne for string orch. (Rochester, May 17, 1928); 5 Little Pieces for Big Orchestra (Ravinia Park, Ill., July 5, 1931); The Masque of the Red Death, after Poe (1932); flute concerto (Chicago, Feb. 26, 1933); Passacaglia and Fugue (Chicago, Jan. 28, 1934); Concerto grosso for 3 flutes, harp, and orch. (Chicago, April 4, 1935); Overture to a Comedy, No. 1 (Chicago, June 20, 1937); Symphonic Suite (Ravinia Park, Ill., July 21, 1938); Symphony in D (1936-37; N. Y., Jan. 19, 1939, composer conducting; awarded prize of $1,000 in the American Composers Contest sponsored by the N. Y. Philharmonic); Divertimento, for small orch. (Ravinia Park, Ill., July 8, 1939); Overture to a Comedy, No. 2 (Indianapolis, March 14, 1941); Variazioni Solenne (performed under the title Gothic Impressions by the Chicago Symph. Orch., Feb. 26, 1942); Music for the Marines (Indianapolis, March 27, 1943); 5 Bagatelles, for strings (Chicago, Feb. 7, 1938); viola concerto (Ravinia Park, Ill., July 13, 1940); chamber music: flute quintet (1932); suite for 2 flutes (1933); string quartet (1940); string trio (1942); flute sonata (1945); Pastorale and Dance for flute and strings (1947); choral pieces.

Van Vechten, Carl, American novelist and writer on music; b. Cedar Rapids, Iowa, June 17, 1880. He graduated from the Univ. of Chicago (1903); assistant music critic of the N. Y. Times (1906-07 and 1910-13); was its Paris correspondent in 1908-09; wrote the program notes for the N. Y. Symph. Society in 1910-11. In 1931 he occupied himself much with photography, and took a great number of pictures of musicians; his collection of photographs is at Fiske Univ. in Nashville. He publ. 5 Old English Ditties (1904). Books wholly or largely on music: Music After the Great War (1915); Music and Bad Manners (1916); Interpreters and Interpretations (1917; partly republ. as Interpreters, 1920); The Merry-Go-Round (1918); The Music of Spain (1918); In the Garret (1920); Red (1925); Excavations (1926). — Cf. E. G. Lueders, Carl Van Vechten and the Twenties (Albuquerque, 1955).

Van Vleck, Jacob, a 'Moravian' minister; b. New York, 1751; d. Bethlehem, Pa., July 3, 1831. He was director of the Young Ladies' Seminary at Bethlehem from 1790-1800; consecrated a bishop in 1815. Among the 'Moravians' who were active as composers, he was the first American-born. — Cf. A. G. Rau and H. T. David, A Catalogue of Music by American Moravians (Bethlehem, 1938); H. T. David, Background for Bethlehem: Moravian Music in Pennsylvania, in 'Magazine of Art' (April, 1939).

Van Vliet, Cornelius, cellist; b. Rotterdam, Sept. 1, 1886. He began to study cello at 9; in 1903 went to Leipzig, where he appeared as soloist; then joined the Prague Philharmonic as 1st cellist, and traveled with it in Poland and Russia; in 1908 was engaged by Mahler as 1st cellist with the Vienna Philharmonic; in 1911 settled in the U. S. He was 1st cellist of the Minneapolis Symph. Orch. (1912-19); 1st cellist of the N. Y. Philharmonic (1919-29); 1st cellist of the Pittsburgh Symph. Orch. (1938-41); prof. of cello at the Univ. of Colorado (1948-53); in 1954 he went to Mexico.

Van Westerhout, Niccolò, Italian composer; b. (of Dutch parentage) Mola di Bari, Dec. 17, 1857; d. Naples, Aug. 21, 1898. He was a pupil of Nicola d'Arienzo at the Naples Cons.; then became a prof. of harmony there. He wrote 3 operas: Cimbe- lino (Rome, April 7, 1892), Fortunio (Milan, May 16, 1895), and Dona Flor (Mola di Bari, April 18, 1896, on the opening of the Teatro Van Westerhout, named after him); another opera, Colomba, was produced posthumously (Naples, March 27, 1923). In addition he wrote 2 symphonies, a violin concerto; publ. many piano pieces of considerable merit, and songs.

Van Wyk, Arnold. See Wyk, Arnold van.

Van Zandt, Marie, American coloratura soprano; b. N. Y., Oct. 8, 1861; d. Cannes, Dec. 31, 1919. She studied with her mother, the well-known American soprano, Jennie van Zandt; made her début in Turin (1879); was engaged at the Opéra-Comique, Paris (1880-85); sang at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y. during the season of 1891-92; in 1896 she rejoined the Opéra-Comique. Delibes wrote the role of Lakmé for her, and she created it at the Opéra-Comique on April 14, 1883.

Van Zanten, Cornelia, famous Dutch soprano and pedagogue; b. Dordrecht, Aug. 2, 1855; d. The Hague, Jan. 10, 1946. She studied with K. Schneider at the Cologne Cons., and in Milan with Lamperti, who developed her original contralto into a coloratura soprano voice. She made her début in Turin; then sang in Germany; toured in America in 1886-87 as a member of the National Opera Co. under the directorship of Theodore Thomas; then returned to Europe; appeared in special performances of Der Ring des Nibelungen in Russia; finally became a member of the Nederlandsche Oper in Amsterdam; also taught at the Amsterdam Cons. (1895-1903); subsequently lived in Berlin, highly esteemed as a singing teacher; eventually settled in The Hague. She publ. songs to German and Dutch texts; with (I. E. Poser, brought out Leitfaden zum Kunstgesang (Berlin, 1903). —Cf. J. W. Hofstra, C. van Zanten, in 'Mensch en Melodie' (vol. 1; 1946).

Varèse, Edgar, remarkable composer; b. (of French and Italian parentage) Paris, Dec. 22, 1885. At the age of 12, he wrote an opera, Martin Paz, after Jules Verne; against his father's wishes, he gave up preparing for the École Polytechnique, and left home in 1904 in order to devote himself to music. He entered the Schola Cantorum in Paris, and studied there with Vincent d'Indy and Albert Roussel; also with Widor at the Paris Cons.; won the 'bourse artistique' (a stipend) offered by the city of Paris; founded and conducted the chorus of the Université Populaire and organized the concerts of the Château du Peuple. Going to Berlin, he organized and conducted there the 'Symphonischer Chor'; came to the U. S. in Dec. 1915 and founded in N. Y. the New Symph. Orch. for performances of modern music (1st concert, April 11, 1919); in 1921, founded (with Carlos Salzedo) the International Composers' Guild (1st concert, Dec. 17, 1922); in 1926, organized the Pan American Society for promoting music of the Americas; later conducted a choral group in N. Y.; lived in N. Y. and Paris; worked on problems of electronic music with René Bertrand, inventor of the Dynophone. — Varèse is one of the boldest innovators in 20th-century music. His early works (most of which are lost or destroyed) were of a Romantic and Impressionistic nature; these include 3 Pièces d'orchestre (1904); Rhapsodie romaine for orch. (1905); the symph. poems Bourgogne (1910), Gargantua (1912), Mehr Licht (1912), Les Cycles du Nord (1914); and an opera in German, to a libretto of Hugo von Hofmannsthal, Oedipus und die Sphinx (1910-14). After this period, he proceeded to work out an entirely new concept of musical composition, governed by considerations of functional efficiency and power of aural impact; he dispensed with thematic development, and ruled out consonant harmony; in the scores of Amériques and Arcana he employs a very large orchestra, with dynamic effects of extraordinary subtlety and rhythm of great intricacy. In Ionisation, for percussion instruments and 2 sirens, he uses sounds without definite pitch. In other works he sets himself a task of obtaining optimal effect with given sonorities, in keeping with his conception of music as 'organized sound.' Performances of his works in Europe and America often evoked protests and sometimes resulted in riotous demonstrations. —Works: Offrandes, for voice and small orch. (1922); Hyperprism, for wind instruments and percussion (N. Y., March 4, 1923); Octandre for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn, trumpet, trombone, and double-bass (1924); Intégrales, for small orch. and percussion (N. Y., March 1, 1925); Amériques for large orch. (Philadelphia, April 9, 1926, Stokowski conducting); Ionisation, for 41 percussion instruments and 2 sirens (1931; N. Y., March 6, 1933, N. Slonimsky conducting); Equatorial, for bass voice, trumpets, trombones, organ, percussion, and thereminovox (N. Y., April 15, 1934); Density 21.5, for flute unaccompanied (1935); Deserts, for wind instruments, percussion, and 3 interpolations of 'organized sound' electronically treated (Paris, Dec. 2, 1954); Poème Électronique, composed for the Philips Pavilion at the Brussels Exposition, and spatially distributed over 400 loudspeakers (1958). —Cf. H. Cowell, The Music of Edgar Varèse, in 'Modern Music' (Jan.-Feb., 1928); J. H. Klarén, Edgar Varèse (Boston, 1928); P. Rosenfeld, An Hour With American Music (Philadelphia, 1929; pp. 160-79); F. Waldman, Edgar Varèse, in the 'Juilliard Review' (Fall, 1954); O. Vivier, Innovations instrumentales d'Edgar Varèse, in the 'Revue Musicale' (Jan., 1956); M. Wilkinson, An Introduction to the Music of Edgar Varèse, in 'The Score' (March, 1957).

Varga, Tibor, violinist; b. Győr, Hungary, July 4, 1921. He studied at the Music Academy, Budapest, with Hubay, and later with Karl Flesch; gave concerts from the age of 10; lived in London and taught there at the Royal Academy of Music; in 1949 appointed prof. at the Music Academy in Detmold. He specializes in modern music.

Varlamov (vahr-lah'-möf), Alexander Egorovitch, Russian composer of songs; b. Moscow, Nov. 27, 1801; d. St. Petersburg, Oct. 27, 1848. At the age of 10 he entered the Imperial Chapel at St. Petersburg, where his fine voice attracted the attention of Bortniansky, the director, who then became his teacher. As a young man he was attached to the Russian Embassy at The Hague as leader of the Russian church choir there (1819-23); then returned to Moscow, where he taught singing and violin (1823-29); later went to St. Petersburg as a singing teacher. He wrote 223 songs (publ. in 12 vols. by Stellovsky) in the Russian folk style; one of them, Krasny Sarafan (The Red Dress), achieved tremendous popularity; Wieniawski made use of it in his violin piece, Souvenir de Moscou. He was the author of the first Russian singing method, Shkola Penya (Moscow, 1840).

Varney, Astrid, soprano; b. Stockholm, April 25, 1918, of Hungarian parents, both professional singers. She was taken to America as a child, and studied first with her mother, then with Hermann Weigert (1890-1955), whom she married in 1944. She made her début as Sieglinde at the Metropolitan Opera (Dec. 6, 1941), substituting for Lotte Lehmann without rehearsal; then toured in the U. S., England, Argentina, and Mexico.

Varney, Louis, French composer; b. New Orleans, La., May 30, 1844; d. Cauterets, France, Aug. 20, 1908. His father, Pierre Joseph Alphonse Varney (q.v.), was director of a French opera company in New Orleans (1840-50). Louis Varney was taken to Paris at the age of 7 and remained there for the rest of his life. From 1876 he produced about 40 light theater works, including the comic opera Les Mousquetaires au couvent (Paris, March 16, 1880), which remained a standard item in the French light opera repertory.

Varney, Pierre Joseph Alphonse, French composer; b. Paris, Dec. 1, 1811; d. there, Feb. 7, 1879. He studied with Reicha at the Paris Cons.; was active as theater conductor in Belgium, Holland, and France. From 1840 to 1850 he was director of the French Opera Company in New Orleans, where he married Jeanne Aimée Andry; their son Louis Varney was born there. The family returned to Paris in 1851. Varney set to music a poem by Rouget de Lisle, Mourir pour la patrie, which became popular during the Paris revolution of 1848.

Varvoglis, Mario, Greek composer; b. Athens, Dec. 22, 1885. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Leroux, and later at the Schola Cantorum with Vincent d'Indy. Returning to Greece in 1922, he was appointed prof. of music history at the Athens Cons. His early music was influenced by Massenet; later he evolved a more independent style, using some Greek melodic patterns. His symph. prelude Sainte-Barbara (1912) was publ. by the French Institute of Athens in 1948. —Other works: incidental music to the classical Greek tragedies Agamemnon (1932) and Medea (1942); Suite pastorale for strings (1910); Caprice grec for cello solo and orch. (1914); symph. poem Behind the Wire Fence (1945); and a 'study in symph. contrasts' Lauriers et cyprès (1950). In 1937 he received the Grand Prize for Music of the Athens Academy of Arts.

Vasconcellos (vähs-kong-sähl'-ösh), Joaquim de, Portuguese lexicographer; b. Oporto, Feb. 10, 1849; d. there, March 1, 1936. From 1865 to 1869 he studied at the Univ. of Coimbra; 1871-75, traveled in Germany, France, England, and Spain; from 1883 prof. of German at the Lyceum of Oporto, and from 1884 also director of the Museum for Industries and Commerce. He publ. the biographical dictionary Os Musicos portugueses . . . (1870), containing much new matter, and many emendations of old; a monograph on Luiza Todi (1873; 2nd ed., 1929); Ensaio critico sobre o catalogo del rey Don João IV (1873); publ. a facsimile ed. of the catalogue of the Royal Library of Lisbon [destroyed by the earthquake of 1755] (1874-76; with index and commentary, 1905); also contributed to Pouglin's supplement to Fétis' 'Biographie universelle.'

Vasiliev-Buglay, Dmitri Stepanovitch, Russian composer; b. Moscow, Aug. 9, 1888; d. there, Oct. 15, 1956. He studied in Moscow with Kastalsky and others at the Synod School; then was active as a choral conductor. After the revolution he became a member of the Association of Proletarian Musicians, preaching the extreme simplification of music for the masses. He wrote mostly vocal music; his choruses enjoyed some popularity. He also wrote an opera designed for performance by members of collective farms, Fatherland Calls.

Vásquez, Juan, Spanish composer; b. Badajoz, in the first quarter of the 16th century; place and date of death unknown. He composed many excellent 'villancicos,' for 3, 4, and 5 voices, often using folksongs for the chief melodic part. Many of these are found in Spanish tablature books of the period (e.g., those of Milán, Fuenllana, Enriquez de Valderrábano, Pisador, and Daza, from 1535 to 1576), arranged as solo songs with instrumental accompaniment. He publ. Villancicos y canciones a 3 y a 4 (Osuna, 1551); Recopilación de sonetos y villancicos a 4 y a 5 (Seville, 1560; modern ed. by H. Anglés in 'Monumentos de la Música Española,' Barcelona, 1946).

Vasseur (väh-sör'), Léon (-Félix-Augustin-Joseph), French composer; b. Bapaume, Pas-de-Calais, May 28, 1844; d. Paris, July 25, 1917. He studied at the École Niedermeyer in Paris; in 1870 became organist of the Versailles Cathedral; after a few years he turned to composing light music; also conducted theater orchestras. He wrote about 30 operettas, but his most successful one was his first production, La Timbale d'argent (Paris, April 9, 1872). He also publ. sacred music: 'L'Office divin' (a collection of Masses, offertories, antiphons, etc.); '20 motets des grands maîtres'; a method for organ or harmonium; transcriptions for harmonium and piano.

Vassilenko (vah-si-lëhn'-koh), Sergey Niki-forovitch, Russian composer; b. Moscow, March 30, 1872; d. there, March 11, 1956. He studied law at the Univ. of Moscow, graduating in 1896; took private music lessons with Gretchaninov and G. Conus; entered the Moscow Cons. in 1895 as a student of Taneyev and Ippolitov-Ivanov, winning the gold medal upon graduation (1901) with a dramatic cantata, Legend of the Great City of Kitezh (Moscow, March 1, 1902; later adapted as an opera, and produced in Moscow, March 3, 1903). In 1906 he was appointed prof. of composition at the Moscow Cons.; held this position until 1950. He also organized and conducted popular symph. concerts in Moscow (1907-17); conducted concerts in Berlin (1909 and 1912) and in many Russian centers. In 1953 he received the Order of Lenin. His music reveals his profound interest in Russian and Asian folklore; there is also a considerable influence of French Impressionism, both in the selection of exotic subjects and in the idiomatic use of characteristic harmonic progressions; however, his basic style remained essentially within the 19th-century tradition. — Works: Operas: Son of the Sun (Moscow, May 23, 1929; deals with the Boxer Rebellion in China); Christopher Columbus (1933); The Blizzard (Tashkent, June 12, 1939); The Grand Canal (Tashkent, Jan. 12, 1941); Suvorov (Moscow, Feb. 23, 1942). Ballets, etc.: Noya (1923); Joseph the Handsome (Moscow, March 3, 1925); Lola (1926; revised, and produced Moscow, June 25, 1943); The Gypsies, after Pushkin (Leningrad, Nov. 18, 1937); Akbilyak (Tashkent, Nov. 7, 1943); Mirandolina (Moscow, Jan. 16, 1949). For orch.: 5 symphonies: No. 1 (Moscow, Feb. 17, 1907), No. 2 (Moscow, Jan. 7, 1913), No. 3, Italian, for wind instruments and Russian folk instruments (1925), No. 4, Arctic (Moscow, April 5, 1933), No. 5 (1938); Vir, for bass and orch. (Kislovodsk, July 6, 1896); Three Combats, symph. poem (1900); Poème épique, symph. poem (Moscow, March 14, 1903); The Garden of Death, symph. poem after Oscar Wilde (Moscow, May 4, 1908); Hircus Nocturnus (Moscow, Feb. 3, 1909; his most popular work; frequently performed abroad; N. Y., Nov. 20, 1918, by the Russian Symph. Orch.); Incantation for voice and orch. (1910); violin concerto (1910-13); Au Soleil, suite for orch. (Moscow, 1911); Valse Fantastique (Moscow, Jan. 16, 1915); Zodiac, suite on old French melodies (1914); Exotic Suite for tenor and 12 instruments (1916); Chinese Suite (Leningrad, Oct. 30, 1927); Hindu Suite (Moscow, 1927); Turkmenian Suite (Moscow, 1931); Soviet East (1932); Uzbek Suite (1942); cello concerto (1944); Ukraine (1945); trumpet concerto (1945); several works for folk instruments: 10 Russian Folksongs, for voice, oboe, balalaika, accordion, and piano (1929); concerto for balalaika and orch. (1931); a suite for balalaika and accordion (1945). Chamber music: 3 string quartets; piano trio; viola sonata; Serenade for cello and piano; Oriental Dance, for clarinet and piano (1923); Japanese Suite, for wind instruments, xylophone, and piano (1938); Chinese Sketches, for woodwind instruments (1938); woodwind quartet on American themes (1938); a number of songs, of which A Maiden Sang in a Church Choir (1908) is the best. Vasilenko publ. a book of memoirs, Pages of Reminiscences (Moscow, 1948) and vol. I of a manual of orchestration (1952). —Cf. Victor Belaiev, S. N. Vasilenko (Moscow, 1927; in Russian and German).

Vatielli, Francesco, Italian musicologist; b. Pesaro, Dec. 31, 1876; d. Portogruaro, Dec. 12, 1946. He studied philology in Bologna and Florence; music at the Liceo Musicale Rossini in Pesaro; in 1905 he was appointed instructor of music history at the Liceo Musicale in Bologna; also lectured on musicology at the Univ. there. He was co-founder of the Associazione dei Musicologi Italiani; also edited various music journals. He wrote incidental music for several plays, piano pieces, and songs; publ. a number of important papers dealing mainly with music in Bologna: Vita ed arte musicale a Bologna (1922; reprinted in 1927 as Arte e vita musicale a Bologna; 2 vols.); also books on other subjects: La 'Lyra Barberina' di G. B. Doni (1908); Primordi dell'arte del violoncello (1918); Materia e forme della musica (1922; 2nd ed., 1928); Il Principe di Venosa e Leonore d'Este (on Gesualdo; Milan, 1941); edited a collection of 17th-century airs, 'Antiche cantate d'amore' (3 vols.; 1916-20); also 'Antiche cantate spirituali,' 'Antichi maestri bolognesi,' etc. —Cf. A. Della Corte, Francesco Vatielli, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (April-Sept., 1947).

Vaucorbeil (voh-kohr-bäy'), Auguste-Emmanuel, French composer; b. Rouen, Dec. 15, 1821; d. Paris, Nov. 2, 1884. He studied with Marmontel, Dourlen, and Cherubini at the Paris Cons.; made himself known by songs and 2 string quartets; produced a comic opera, La Bataille d'amour (Paris, April 13, 1863); another opera, Mahomet, remained unperformed. His lyric scene, La Mort de Diane, for solo, chorus, and orch., had some success. In 1872 he became government commissioner for the Paris theaters; from 1879, director of the Opéra.

Vaughan Williams, Ralph (real last name Williams), foremost English composer; b. Down Ampney, Gloucestershire, Oct. 12, 1872; d. London, Aug. 26, 1958. He was the son of a clergyman, and received his education at Charterhouse School, London (1887-90) and at Trinity College, Cambridge (1892-95); obtained his B.Mus. in 1894, and B.A. in 1895; took the degree of Mus. Doc. at Cambridge in 1901. In 1890-92 and again in 1895-96 he studied at the Royal College of Music, London, where his teachers were Parratt (organ), Parry and Stanford (composition); in 1897-98 he studied with Max Bruch in Berlin. In 1909, when he was already a mature composer, he went to Paris to seek advice from Ravel, and had several sessions with him to advance his technique of composition still further. In 1904 he joined the English Folk Song Society, and became profoundly interested in the native materials of English music. His 3 Norfolk Rhapsodies for orch. (he discarded Nos. 2 and 3), written in 1906, demonstrate this national trend in his work; the opera Hugh the Drover (1911-14) is strongly impregnated with English folk music. His Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis for strings (1910) indicates a widening of his concept of the English idiom by embracing music of the Tudor period, both sacred and secular; modal counterpoint in particular claimed his attention. Outstanding among his works is the London Symphony (1914; revised 1920), revealing the esthetic attitude of the modern period but rooted in the Elizabethan tradition. In his later works, Vaughan Williams adopted an advanced technique of harmonic writing, with massive agglomerations of chordal sonorities; parallel progressions of triads are especially favored, but there is no intention of adhering to any uniform method of composition; rather, there is a great variety of procedures integrated into a distinctively personal and thoroughly English style. A parallel with Sibelius (for whom Vaughan Williams always professed admiration and to whom he dedicated his 5th symphony) may plausibly be drawn; both are proponents of nationalism without isolationism, and stylistic freedom without eclecticism. — During World War I Vaughan Williams served with the British Army in Macedonia and France, becoming an officer in the artillery; after the Armistice he became prof. of composition at the Royal College of Music, London; also conducted the London Bach Choir (1920-28). In 1922 he visited the U. S. to conduct his Pastoral Symphony at the Norfolk, Conn., Festival (June 7); in 1932, made another U. S. visit, as a lecturer at Bryn Mawr College. In 1935 he received the Order of Merit from King George V. After the death of his first wife in 1951, he married his secretary, Mrs. Ursula Wood (Feb. 7, 1953). In 1954 he made his third tour in the U. S.; lectured at Cornell and Yale. He continued to compose vigorously; completed his 9th symphony at the age of 85. —WORKS: Operas: The Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains, a 'pastoral episode' after Bunyan's The Pilgrim's Progress (London, July 11, 1922); Hugh the Drover, a ballad opera (1911-14; London, July 14, 1924); Sir John in Love, after Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor (London, March 21, 1929); The Poisoned Kiss, a 'romantic extravaganza' (Cambridge, May 12, 1936); Riders to the Sea (London, Nov. 30, 1937); The Pilgrim's Progress, a 'morality' (1949; Covent Garden, London, April 26, 1951; includes material from the earlier opera The Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains). Ballets: Old King Cole (Cambridge, 1923); On Christmas Night (Chicago, 1926); Job, a masque for dancing (London, July 5, 1931). Incidental music: to Ben Jonson's Pan's Anniversary (1905); The Wasps by Aristophanes (1909); The Mayor of Casterbridge, by Thomas Hardy (1953). Vocal works: Willow Wood, for baritone, women's chorus, and orch., after Dante Gabriel Rossetti (1903; Liverpool Festival, 1909); Towards the Unknown Region, for chorus and orch., after Walt Whitman (1905; revised 1918); A Sea Symphony (symph. No. 1), for soprano, baritone, chorus, and orch., after Walt Whitman (Leeds Festival, 1910); 5 Mystical Songs, for baritone, chorus, and orch. (Worcester Festival, 1911); Fantasia on Christmas Carols (Hereford Festival, 1912); 2 motets for double chorus (1913); Mass in G minor (1923); Sancta Civitas, oratorio (Oxford, May 7, 1926); Te Deum, for mixed chorus and organ (1928); Benedicite, for soprano, chorus, and orch. (1929); Magnificat, for contralto, women's chorus, and orch. (1932); Dona nobis pacem, for soprano, baritone, chorus, and orch. (Huddersfield, Oct. 2, 1936); 5 Tudor Portraits, for contralto, baritone, chorus, and orch. (Norwich Festival, 1936); Flourish for a Coronation (London, 1937); Thanksgiving for Victory, for soprano solo, speaker, chorus, and orch. (London, May 8, 1945); The Sons of Light (London Philharmonic with a chorus of 1,000 school children; May 6, 1951); Epithalamion, cantata (1953); This Day, cantata (Worcester Festival, Sept. 8, 1954); A Vision of Aeroplanes, motet for chorus and organ (St. Michael's, Cornhill, June 4, 1956). For orch.: Serenade for small orch. (1901); Bucolic Suite (1902); 2 Impressions: Harnham Down and Boldrewood (1902); 3 Norfolk Rhapsodies: No. 1, in E minor (London, Aug. 23, 1906); Nos. 2 and 3 (Cardiff Festival, Sept. 27, 1907; withdrawn by the composer); Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis, for strings (Gloucester Festival, Sept. 6, 1910, composer conducting); symph. No. 2, A London Symphony (1914; revised version, London, May 4, 1920); The Lark Ascending, romance for violin and orch. (1914; London, June 14, 1921); symph. No. 3, Pastoral Symphony (London, Jan. 26, 1922); Flos Campi, suite for viola, small chorus, and small orch. (London, Oct. 19, 1925); Concerto accademico, for violin and orch. (London, Nov. 6, 1925); Fantasy on Sussex Folk-Tunes, for cello and orch. (1930); piano concerto (London, Feb. 1, 1933; also arranged for 2 pianos with orch.); suite for viola and orch. (London, Nov. 12, 1934); symph. No. 4, in F minor (London, April 10, 1935); 5 Variants of 'Dives and Lazarus', for string orch. and harp, commissioned by the British Council for the N. Y. World's Fair (N. Y. Philharmonic, June 10, 1939); symph. No. 5, in D major (London, June 25, 1943); concerto for oboe and strings (Liverpool, Sept. 30, 1944); symph. No. 6, in E minor (London, April 21, 1948); Romance, for harmonica and orch. (N. Y., May 3, 1952); symph. No. 7, Sinfonia antartica (1951-52; Manchester, Jan. 14, 1953); concerto for bass tuba and orch. (London, June 13, 1954); symph. No. 8 (Manchester, May 2, 1956); symph. No. 9 (London, April 2, 1958). Chamber music: string quartet No. 1 (1908; revised 1921); Fantasy Quintet, for 2 violins, 2 violas, and cello (1910); On Wenlock Edge, for tenor, string quartet, and piano (1909); 6 Studies in English Folksong, for cello and piano (1927); string quartet No. 2 (1945). Also numerous songs to words by English poets; arrangements of English folksongs; some short piano pieces; Introduction and Fugue, for 2 pianos (1946); organ pieces; hymn tunes; carols. Film music: Coastal Command (1942); The People's Land (1943); The Story of a Flemish Farm (1943; suite for orch. from it, London, July 31, 1945); Stricken Peninsula (1945); The Loves of Joanna Godden (1947); Scott of the Antarctic (1949; material taken from it incorporated in Sinfonia antartica). —Literary works: English Folksongs (a lecture presented at the English Folk Dance and Song Society, London, 1912); National Music

(London, 1934; embodies lectures at Bryn Mawr College); Some Thoughts on Beethoven's Choral Symphony, with Writings on Other Musical Subjects (London, 1953; contains reprints of several of his earlier articles); The Making of Music (Ithaca, N. Y., 1955; lectures delivered at Cornell Univ. and Yale Univ. in 1954). Editions: '15 Folk-Songs from the Eastern Counties' for voice and piano, in the 'Journal of the Folk-Song Society' (vol. I, No. 8); Purcell's 'Welcome Odes' (vols. XV and XVIII of the Purcell Society ed.); 'The English Hymnal' (1906); 'The Oxford Carol Book' (with Percy Dearmer and Martin Shaw; 1928).—Bibliography: Monographs in the 'Musical Pilgrim' series (London): A. E. F. Dickinson, An Introduction to the Music of R. V. W. (1928), Frank Howes, The Dramatic Works of R. V. W. (1937), Frank Howes, The Later Works of R. V. W. (1937). Other books: Hubert Foss, R. V. W.: a Study (London, 1950); Percy M. Young, V. W., in 'Contemporary Composers' series (London, 1953); Frank Howes, The Music of R. V. W. (London, 1954); S. Pakenham, R. V. W.: A Discovery of His Music (London, 1957). Magazine articles: in 'Music & Letters': A. H. Fox Strangways, R. V. W. (1920), H. Howells, V. W.'s 'Pastoral' Symphony (1922), E. Rubbra, The Later V. W. (Jan., 1937), W. Kimmel, V. W.'s Choice of Words (1938), H. Murrill, V. W.'s Pilgrim (1951); in the 'Music Review': V. W.'s Fifth Symph. (Jan., 1945), R. Hawthorne, A Note on the Music of V. W. (1948), A. E. F. Dickinson, Toward the Unknown Region (1948), Elsie Payne, V. W. and Folksong (1954); in the 'Mus. Quarterly': W. Kimmel, V. W.'s Melodic Style (Oct., 1941). Other magazine articles: H. C. Colles, The Music of V. W., in the 'Chesterian' (1922); A. E. F. Dickinson, A Bibliography of Works by R. V. W., in 'Gamut' (July, 1928); H. Howells, V. W. in 'The Score' (Dec., 1952); chapters in books: G. Pannain, R. V. W., in Modern Composers (English transl. from Italian, London, 1932), D. F. Tovey, Essays in Musical Analysis, vols. II and IV (London, 1935-39), E. Blom, R. V. W., in The Book of Modern Composers, ed. by David Ewen (N. Y., 1942).

Vaurabourg-Honegger, Andrée. See Honegger, Arthur.

Vautour, Thomas, English composer; b. c. 1590; date and place of death unknown. In 1616 he received the degree of B.Mus. at Lincoln College, and in 1619 publ. a collection of madrigals, The First Set: Beeing Songs of divers Ayres and Natures, of 5 and 6 parts (reprinted by Fellows in 'The English Madrigal School' vol. XXXIV). Another work by Vautour is An Elegie on the Death of his right worshipful Master, Sir Thomas Beaumont (1614). —Cf. E. H. Fellowes, The English Madrigal Composers (1921).

Veazie, George Augustus, American music educator; b. Boston, Dec. 18, 1835; d. Chelsea, Mass., Nov. 20, 1915. From 1869 to 1903 he was supervisor of music in the public schools of Chelsea; during many years of cooperation with Luther W. Mason (q.v.) he brought about important reforms and improvements in the system of primary instruction; from 1888 till 1902 he also was a member of the faculty of the New England Cons. He composed several light operas and numerous part-songs, and edited collections of school songs.

Vecchi (vēh-kē), Orazio (Horatio), Italian composer; b. Modena, 1550 (baptized Dec. 6); d. there, Feb. 19, 1605. He was a pupil of Salvatore Essenga in Modena; in 1586, having taken holy orders, he went to Reggio as choirmaster, but before the end of the year he moved on to Correggio, where he obtained a canonry. In 1596 he returned to Modena and was appointed maestro at the Cathedral (Oct. 26); 2 years later he was also maestro at the ducal court there, and music master to the young princes. On Oct. 7, 1604, he was deprived of his post as choirmaster at the Cathedral, probably through the intrigues of a former pupil, Geminiano Capilupi; this circumstance is believed to have hastened his death. Vecchi was highly regarded as a composer in his day; his works—Masses, motets, madrigals, canzonette, etc.—were chiefly printed in Venice, but editions also appeared in Germany and elsewhere. He was invited to the court of the Emperor Rudolf II at Vienna, and in 1600 went to Rome in the suite of Cardinal Alessandro d'Este. His lasting fame is due above all to his 'commedia harmonica' L'Amfiparnasso, performed at Modena in 1594 and printed at Venice in 1597; this is a kind of musical farce written not in the monodic style of Peri's Dafne, but in madrigal style, with all the text sung by several voices (i.e., a chorus a 4-5); it has been called a 'madrigal opera,' but it was not intended for the theater and it stood entirely apart from the path that opera was to take. L'Amfiparnasso, newly arranged by F. Liuzzi, was performed at the Florence Festival in 1938; modern eds. have been publ. by Eitner (vol. 26 of the 'Publikationen der Gesellschaft der Musikforschung') and Torchi ('L'Arte Musicale in Italia' vol. IV). Of special interest among Vecchi's other compositions is the Veglie di Siena ovvero i varii humori della musica moderna a 3-6 voci (1604; also Nuremberg, 1605, as Noctes ludicrae; modern ed. by B. Somma), which uses colorful devices to express a wide variety of moods and feelings. Examples of Vecchi's music are in Schering's 'Beispielen' (No. 164); Chilesotti's 'Biblioteca di rarità musicali' vol. V, Torchi's 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' vol. II, Einstein's 'Golden Age of the Madrigal,' etc. — Bibliography: A. Catellani, Della vita e delle opere di O. V. (Milan, 1858); E. J. Dent, The 'Amfiparnasso' of O. V., in 'Monthly Mus. Record' (1906; Nos 423-24); E. J. Dent, Notes on the 'Amfiparnasso' of O. V., in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1910-11); L. Frati, Un Capitolo autobiografico di O. V., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1915); J. C. Hol, H. V. als weltlicher Komponist (diss., Basel, 1917), H. V. et l'évolution créatrice, in 'Scheurleer-Festschrift' (1925), H. V., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1930), and H. V.'s weltliche Werke (Strasbourg, 1934); G. Roncaglia, Il Luogo e la data di nascita di O. V., in the 'Rassegna Musicale' (April, 1929); G. Perinello, L'Amfiparnasso, commedia harmonica d' H. V., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1937); G. Roncaglia, O. V., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1949); O. V., Precursore del melodramma, a symposium on the 400th anniversary of Vecchi's birth (Modena, 1950); A. Luoldi, O. V., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1950); G. Camillucci, L'Amfiparnasso, commedia harmonica, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1951); G. Roncaglia, Gli Elementi precursori del melodramma nell' opera di O. V., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1953); L. Ronga, Lettura storica dell' 'Amfiparnasso' di O. V., in 'Rassegna Musicale' (1953).

Vecchi, Orfeo, Italian composer of sacred music; b. Milan, 1540; d. there, c. 1603. He was maestro di cappella at Santa Maria della Scala in Milan; most of his MSS are preserved there. His extant published works include 3 collections of Masses for 5 voices (1588; 1598; 1602); 2 Magnificats; 7 Penitential Psalms for 6 voices (1601); Cantiones sacrae, for 6 voices (1603) and for 5 (1608), etc. — Cf. F. X. Huberl, Orfeo Vecchi, in the 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (1907); A. Einstein, Un Libro di canzoni spirituali di Orfeo Vecchi, in 'Bibliofilia' (Florence, 1938).

Vecsei (veh'-châ), Desider Josef, Hungarian pianist; b. Budapest, Sept. 25, 1882. He studied in Budapest, and then with Emil Sauer at the Vienna Cons. He made concert appearances as a child; toured in Europe until 1915; then went to the U. S., and settled in Hollywood as a piano teacher. He wrote songs and piano pieces.

Vecsey (veh'-châ), Franz von, Hungarian violinist; b. Budapest, March 23, 1893; d. Rome, April 6, 1935. He received his first instruction from his father, Ludwig Vecsey, a good violinist; at the age of 8 he became a pupil of Hubay, and made such rapid progress that his parents decided to send him on a European tour as a child prodigy; he appeared in Berlin (Oct. 17, 1903), London (May 2, 1904), and N. Y. (Jan. 10, 1905); toured Italy, Scandinavia, and Russia; then lived in Germany and Italy. He composed some violin pieces.

Vega, Carlos, Argentine writer on music; b. Canelas, near Buenos Aires, April 14, 1898. He studied at the Univ. of Buenos Aires (philosophy and literature); subsequently devoted himself mainly to folklore research in music. In 1926 he was appointed chief of the music section of the Argentine Museum of Natural Sciences; in 1933, was placed in charge of the folklore division of the literature faculty at the Univ. of Buenos Aires. He traveled throughout the rural regions of Argentina and other South American countries to collect materials on folk-songs and folk dances, using the phonograph for recording them; devised a special choreographic notation. His many books are basic sources for the study of Argentine folk music. — Publications: Danzas y canciones argentinas (Buenos Aires, 1936); La Música popular argentina: Canciones y danzas criollas (1941); Panorama de la música popular argentina (Buenos Aires, 1944); a series of monographs on Argentinian dances (with choreographic ideograms): La Chacarera, El Cuando, El Gato, El Triunfo, El Carnavalito, La Condición (Buenos Aires, 1944-45); Los Instrumentos musicales . . . de la Argentina (Buenos Aires, 1946).

Veinus, Abraham, American musicologist; b. New York, Feb. 12, 1916. He studied at the City College of N. Y., Cornell Univ. (M.A., 1937), and Columbia Univ. (1946-48). In 1948 he joined the faculty of the Dept. of Fine Arts at Syracuse Univ. He publ. The Concerto (1944), Victor Book of Concertos (1948), and Pocket Book of Great Operas (with Henry Simon, 1949).

Veit (vīt), Wenzel Heinrich, Bohemian composer; b. Leitmeritz, Jan. 19, 1806; d. there, Feb. 16, 1864. He was a member of the judiciary, but applied himself earnestly to the study of music; was music director at Aachen. He wrote a number of works in various genres; he is remembered chiefly for his effective choruses and solo songs. —Works: Festmesse in D, for soli, chorus, and orch.; overtures; a symph.; 5 string quintets; 4 string quartets; a piano trio; male choruses in Czech and German; songs. —Cf. A. John, W. H. Veit. Lebensbild eines deutschen Tondichters (Eger, 1903); H. Ankert, W. H. Veit als Musikdirektor in Aachen (Leitmeritz, 1906).

Velasco Maidana, José María, Bolivian composer and conductor; b. Sucre, July 4, 1899. He studied violin in Buenos Aires; subsequently taught music history at the National Cons. of La Paz. In 1937 he conducted some of his works in Buenos Aires, and in 1938 in Berlin; in 1943, toured in South America and Mexico. His ballet Amerindia, on a subject from pre-Columbian history, was produced in Berlin (Dec. 6, 1938), and later in La Paz (May 27, 1940). He conducted the 1st performances of his symph. works with the La Paz Symph. Orch., of which he was regular conductor: Cory Wara (Oct. 6, 1941); Los Hijos del Sol (Feb. 6, 1942); Vida de Cóndores (March 14, 1942); Los Huacos (April 22, 1942); Los Khusillos and Cuento Brujo (April 11, 1943).

Velden, Renier van der, Belgian conductor and composer; b. Antwerp, Jan. 14, 1910. He studied with Joseph Jongen in Brussels; then was engaged as radio conductor in Antwerp. —Works: Divertimento for string orch. (1939); Sinfonietta for strings (1942); oboe concerto (1941); trio for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1943); sextet for wind instruments and piano (1948).

Venatorini. See Mysliveczek.

Venegas de Henestrosa, Luis, Spanish organist and composer of the 16th century; was in the service of Cardinal Juan Tavera in Toledo; publ. the oldest known Spanish book of organ music, Libro de cifra nueva para tecla, harpa y vihuela (Alcalá de Henares, 1557; modern ed. by H. Anglès, Barcelona, 1944); this contains organ pieces by Palero, P. Vila, Soto, Venegas himself, etc.; also pieces for vihuela (old Spanish guitar); transcriptions of sacred works by Morales, Josquin, Soto, etc., and solo songs with instrumental accompaniment. The book is written in Spanish organ tablature. — Cf. G. Morphy, Les Luthistes espagnols du XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle (Leipzig, 1902); J. B. Trend, Luis Milan and the Vihuelistas (London, 1925); H. Anglès, Orgelmusik der Schola Hispanica vom XV.-XVII. Jahrhundert, in 'Peter Wagner-Festschrift' (Leipzig, 1926); J. Ward, The Editorial Methods of Venegas de Henestrosa, in 'Musica Disciplina' (1952).

Vengerova (věhn-gěh'-röh-väh), Isabelle, distinguished piano pedagogue; b. Minsk, Russia, March 1, 1877; d. New York, Feb. 7, 1956. She studied at the Vienna Cons. with Joseph Dachs, and privately with Leschetizky; then with Anna Essipoff in St. Petersburg. In 1906 she was appointed instructor at the St. Petersburg Cons.; in 1910, prof. there. She toured in Russia as pianist; in 1923, came to the U. S.; American début with the Detroit Symph. Orch. (Feb. 8, 1925) in Schumann's piano concerto. She became prof. at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia when it was founded in 1924; in 1950, received an honorary doctor's degree there. Among her piano pupils at the Curtis Institute were Leonard Bernstein, Samuel Barber, and Lukas Foss. She also taught privately in New York.

Venosa, Prince of. See Gesualdo.

Venth (vehnt), Karl, violinist, conductor, and composer; b. Cologne, Feb. 16, 1860; d. San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 29, 1938. His father was a German, his mother Croatian. He studied violin with his father, and later at the Cologne Cons., where he was also a pupil of Ferdinand Hiller; continued his violin studies for a year in Brussels with Wieniawski. In 1880 he emigrated to the U. S.; was concertmaster of the Metropolitan Opera orch. (1884-88); conductor of the Brooklyn Symph. Orch. (1889-1902); concertmaster of the St. Paul Symph. Orch. (1907-12); conductor of the Dallas Symph. Orch. (1911-13). In 1913 he was appointed dean of the School of Fine Arts of Texas Woman's College, Fort Worth; in 1913 organized the Fort Worth Symph. Orch., which he conducted for several years. In 1932 he joined the faculty of San Antonio Univ., remaining there until his death. —Works: for the stage: Pan in America, a 'lyric dance drama' (won the prize of the National Federation of Music Clubs; produced at its Biennial Convention, Asheville, N. C., June 13, 1923); The Rebel, a fairy opera with dance (Fort Worth, May 29, 1926); Lima Beans, short opera: Alexander's Horse, a musical play; The Juggler, for voices and instruments; Dolls, a 'musical extravaganza'; The Sun God, an Oriental opera; Cathal, short music drama; Jack, music drama; etc.; several symph. works (Forest Scenes, Norse Dance, Indian Prologue, etc.); a Mass in D; 2 string quartets; a piano trio; numerous piano compositions (Sonata appassionata, 2 rhapsodies, etc.); songs. His autobiography, My Memories, was publ. posthumously (1939). — Cf. E. E. Hipsher, American Opera and Its Composers (Philadelphia, 1934; pp. 416-18).

Venzano (vën-tsäh'nö'h), Luigi, Italian composer; b. Genoa, 1814; d. there, Jan. 26, 1878. He played the cello at the Carlo Felice Theater in Genoa, and taught at the Cons. there; publ. many songs, including Valzer cantabile, which is often sung in the lesson-scene of The Barber of Seville; also composed an operetta, La Notte dei schiaffi (Genoa, April 25, 1873) and a ballet, Benvenuto Cellini (Milan, Aug. 24, 1861); publ. piano pieces and singing exercises.

Veprik, Alexander Moiseyevitch, Russian composer; b. Balta, near Odessa, June 23, 1899. While still a boy he went to Leipzig, where he studied piano with Karl Wendling, graduating in 1914. He then returned to Russia; entered the Moscow Cons. in 1923 as a pupil of Miaskovsky. From 1930 to 1942 he taught orchestration there. He was associated with the Jewish cultural movement in Russia, and wrote several works in the traditional Jewish manner: Dances and Songs of the Ghetto, for orch. (1927); Kaddish, for voice with instruments (1925); a Jewish Communist Youth Song (1926); later wrote music based on Ukrainian folk-songs. Other works: 2 symphonies (1931, 1938); The Song of Jubilation, for orch. (Moscow, March 17, 1937); rhapsody for viola and piano (1929); a number of piano pieces; songs. He publ. an instructive manual, The Treatment of Orchestral Instruments (Moscow, 1947); Principles of Bach's Orchestration (Moscow, 1955).

Veracini (vëh-räh-chë'në), Francesco Maria, Italian violinist and composer; b. Florence, Feb. 1, 1690; d. near Pisa, c. 1750. Pupil of his uncle, Antonio Veracini, of Casini, and of Gasparini; an eminent virtuoso, he toured widely, and in 1714 was heard in Venice by Tartini, greatly influencing the latter's style; 1715-17, soloist at the Italian Opera in London; 1717-22, chamber virtuoso at the court of Dresden; 1735-45, in London again, producing several operas there; being eclipsed by Geminiani, he retired to Pisa about 1746, dying in extreme poverty. Publ. 24 violin sonatas with continuo (1721, 1744); in MS: concertos for violin and symphonies for strings and harpsichord, also a theoretical treatise (in the library of the Cons. Cherubini at Florence). Modern reprints by G. Jensen, L. Torchi, E. Pente, etc. — Cf. L. Torchi, in 'Revista Musicale Italiana' (1889; p. 69); M. Pincherle, Les Violinistes (Paris, 1924); A. Damerini, Elogio dell' asino e monte di Stradella in un trattato di F. M. Veracini, in 'La Scala' (March, 1956).

Verbrugghen (fëhr-brüg'-gen), Henri, violinist and conductor; b. Brussels, Aug. 1, 1873; d. Northfield, Minn., Nov. 12, 1934. He studied with Hubay and Ysaye at the Brussels Cons.; in 1893 was engaged as violinist in the Scottish Orch. in Glasgow; then was concertmaster in various orchestras in Wales; also conducted summer concerts there, while retaining his position in Glasgow. In 1903 he founded the Verbrugghen String Quartet, which won a good reputation. In 1915 he went to Australia, and established the National Cons. in Sydney. In 1922-23 he was guest conductor of the Minneapolis Symph. Orch.; then became its regular conductor (until 1932).

Verdelot (vëhr-dëh-lö'h'), Philippe, noted Flemish composer; date of birth unknown; d. c. 1550. He settled in Italy while young and became a singer at San Marco in Venice about 1525; from about 1530 he was choirmaster at San Giovanni in Florence. His works were widely printed, both in Italy and France; he was one of the earliest composers of madrigals; most of his approximately 100 works of that type appeared in collections along with those by other composers. Willaert (q.v.) arranged 22 of Verdelot's madrigals as solo songs with lute accompaniment, in tablature: Intavolatura degli Madrigali di Verdelotto de cantare e sonare nel lauto . . . (Venice, 1536). Verdelot's last publication was a book of motets, Electioes diversorum Motetorum distinctae (1549). Only a single Mass by him is known, entitled Philomena, included in Scotto's Liber V missarum (1544). Verdelot added a 5th part to Janequin's Bataille, first publ. in Susato's 10th book of Chansons (Antwerp, 1545; modern reprint by Commerce). Reprints of madrigals by Verdelot are in Maldeghem's 'Trésor musical'; P. Wagner's Das Madrigal und Palestrina; Riemann's Handbuch der Musikgeschichte, II,

VERDI

1; Schering's 'Beispielen' (Nos. 98/98); Einstein's The Italian Madrigal (vol. 3); etc. See A. Einstein, Claudio Merulo's Ausgabe der Madrigale des Verdelot, in the 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. VIII) and The Italian Madrigal, vol. 1 (Princeton, 1949); also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954, pp. 316-19).

Verdi, (Fortunino) Giuseppe (Francesco), illustrious Italian composer of operas; b. Le Roncole, near Busseto, Duchy of Parma, Oct. 10, 1813; d. Milan, Jan. 27, 1901. His father was an innkeeper; the son's precocious talent was trained by the village organist, Baistrocchi; his progress was so extraordinary that he often substituted for his teacher at the church organ, and as a mere boy, succeeded him at the post, receiving a regular, though modest, payment for his services. He studied with Ferdinando Provesi at Busseto for 4 years, until the age of 16, and began to compose music, which he played at a local church; an overture by him was performed at the municipal theater in 1828. A Busseto merchant named Antonio Barezzi enabled Verdi to continue his musical education in Milan. Verdi applied for admission to the Milan Cons.; being older than the average age for entrance, he had to take a special examination, which, however, he failed to pass; the registrar, Francesco Basili, reported that his piano playing was inadequate, and his hand position wrong; as to Verdi's ability in composition, the report found the presence of talent, but insufficient technical knowledge. In all probability, this judgment reflected the actual state of Verdi's musical education at that time, but the examiners showed a lack of imagination in not waiving the rigid rules in an exceptional case. Verdi then turned to private instruction with Vincenzo Lavigna, the maestro al cembalo at La Scala. Verdi labored industriously over counterpoint, canon, and fugue, and assiduously frequented the opera, absorbing the art of dramatic composition. In the summer of 1834 he was engaged as municipal maestro at Busseto, but held this post only for 6 months, going to Milan for another period of study with Lavigna. From July 1835 to Sept. 1838 he was again in Busseto, holding the posts of director of the local music school and of the Philharmonic Society, returning to Milan in 1838. On May 4, 1836, he married Barezzi's daughter, Margherita; they had 2 children who died in infancy; Margherita herself died in Milan on June 18, 1840. In Busseto Verdi wrote his 1st opera, Oberto, conte di San Boni- facio, which was accepted by La Scala, Milan, and performed there with success on Nov. 17, 1839. His next opera, Un Giorno di regno (1840), was a failure. He then set to work on a new opera, Nabucco, which was given at La Scala (1842) with tremendous success, Signorina Giuseppina Strepponi (q.v.) taking the leading feminine role of Abigaille; this was followed by another successful opera, I Lombardi alla prima Crociata (La Scala, 1843); the subject, derived from events in the First Crusade, appealed to the Milan public, arousing their national aspirations for freedom. From that time, Verdi's standing with the management of La Scala was assured, and other opera houses in Italy were open to his productions. After his domestic tragedy, he was greatly consoled by the friendship and constant companionship of Giuseppina Strepponi, whom he eventually married on Aug. 29, 1859. His opera Ernani (1844), after Victor Hugo's romantic play, Hernani, written for the Teatro La Fenice in Venice, was acclaimed and produced on 15 different stages within a year. Then followed a series of works that added little to Verdi's fame: I due Foscari (1844); Giovanna d'Arco (1845); Alzira (1845); Attila (1846); Macbeth (1847); I Masnadieri (1847); Il Corsaro (1848); and La Battaglia di Legnano (1849). Luisa Miller obtained some success in Naples (1849); but Stiffelio, produced at Trieste in 1850, was a complete failure. Despite his changing fortunes, Verdi's financial prosperity grew, and he showed considerable business acumen in dealing with publishers and impresarios. He traveled to London in 1847; spent some time in Paris in 1848; then returned to Italy. Early in 1851 he completed his first real masterpiece, Rigoletto, which was brought out at La Fenice in Venice; it was followed by Il Trovatore, produced in Rome (1853) and La Traviata, staged at La Fenice (1853). These 3 operas firmly established Verdi's reputation. His 1st French opera, Les Vêpres siciliennes, was produced at the Paris Opéra (1855) with moderate success; there followed Simone Boccanegra, written for Venice (1857), Un Ballo in maschera (Rome, 1859), La Forza del destino, brought out in St. Petersburg (1862), and Verdi's 2nd and last French opera, Don Carlos (Paris Opéra, 1867). In the meantime, Verdi became involved in the Italian struggle for independence. He was not a politician, and never participated in revolutionary agitation, beyond expressing his patriotic views. But his choice of subject for his grand opera, Un Ballo in maschera (originally entitled La Vendetta in Domino), based on a play by Scribe and describing the assassination of the Swedish king Gustav III in 1792, was ill-timed because of the recent attempted assassination of Napoleon III. Verdi was compelled to transfer the scene of action in his opera from Sweden to Massachusetts, with Gustav III becoming Governor Riccardo of Boston; this episode stirred Verdi's admirers, who linked his name with that of Victor Emmanuel, the future King of Italy. The cry 'Viva Verdi' became, by using the 5 letters of his name as initials, a political slogan: 'Viva Vittorio Emanuele Re D' Italia.' In 1869 Verdi received an offer to write an opera on an Egyptian subject for the new theater in Cairo to celebrate the opening of the Suez Canal. The financial terms were extremely advantageous; the scenario was in French; Antonio Ghislanzoni wrote the Italian libretto, entitled Aida. The opera was produced in Cairo on Christmas Eve in 1871, attended by a multitude of notables and newspaper correspondents; characteristically, Verdi refused to make the journey to Cairo and hear the première, explaining that it was his art and not he personally that was important. The style of Aida showed a remarkable advance from his earlier masterpieces. Verdi injected here a new element of tone painting; the orchestra ceased to be a mere accompaniment and became a vital element in the drama. Aida's popular success fully justified the praise bestowed upon it; productions followed in Italy, all over Europe, and in America. Verdi's next work was not an opera, but the Messa da Requiem, written in memory of Alessandro Manzoni, and performed for the 1st time at the Milan Cathedral, on the 1st anniversary of Manzoni's death (1874). After Rossini's death (1868), Verdi conceived the idea of honoring his memory by a requiem to which 13 Italian composers were to contribute one number each, Verdi reserving for himself the last, the Libera me. The plan did not succeed, and Verdi incorporated his number in the 'Manzoni Requiem.' 15 years elapsed after Aida until the production of a new Verdi opera, Otello (La Scala, 1887); the libretto, after Shakespeare, was by Arrigo Boito, and it possessed a poetic value of its own; Verdi, at the age of 73, succeeded in creating for it a score of great dramatic intensity and lyric beauty. Yet he never departed from the basic Italian operatic style, which he cultivated all his life; no concession was made to the growing fashion of music drama, in the Wagner manner; clear separation of aria, recitative, and chorus were still the rule. Otello surprised the musical world by its power in the delineation of character. Still greater was the astonishment generated by the appearance of Verdi's last opera, Falstaff, also to a libretto by Boito, after Shakespeare's The Merry Wives of Windsor, which Verdi completed in his 80th year. The score reveals a genius for subtle comedy; in this work of Verdi's old age, he, for the first time, applied a highly developed art of counterpoint; the orchestra here has more of a symphonic character than in any of Verdi's preceding operas. Verdi's last work was a group of sacred choruses, 4 Pezzi sacri; in one of them Verdi made use of the so-called 'scala enigmatica' (c, db, e, f#, g#, a#, b, c). —Innumerable honors were showered upon Verdi by royalty and society. In 1860 he was elected to the 1st National Parliament of Italy (resigned in 1865); in 1875 he was nominated a Senator. After the première of Falstaff, the King of Italy wished to create him 'Marchese di Busseto,' but Verdi declined the honor. In 1899 he founded in Milan the 'Casa di Riposo per Musicisti' in memory of his second wife (d. 1897); for its maintenance he set aside 2,500,000 lire, and after his death the income from his works, payable for 30 years. The full extent of the provision may be estimated from the fact that during his life Verdi received in royalties from Aida alone the sum of 4,000,000 lire. —Verdi was unquestionably the greatest figure in Italian opera. He instinctively understood the purpose and function of music in the theater, and developed a superb craft of dramatic and lyric writing. His melodic gift was of the greatest inventiveness; in his best operas he created arias and ensembles of extraordinary affective appeal. As musical tastes changed under the impact of Wagner, Liszt, and their followers, Verdi's music lost stature; in the view of some critics, it was lowered to the level of 'barrel-organ' repertory. A movement 'back to Verdi' developed in the 2nd quarter of the 20th century, as Wagnerianism began to recede. The frequency of performances of Verdi's operas rose sharply, not only in Italy, but also in Germany and Austria, France and England, and in America, and modern composers became interested in Verdi's music as a product of pure art, unobscured by artifice. The 50th anniversary of Verdi's death was widely observed in 1951; special performances and festivals were given; Toscanini conducted a concert of Verdi's works, including the 'Manzoni Requiem,' in Carnegie Hall, N. Y., on Jan. 27, 1951. Excerpts from Verdi's operas were presented in the Roman Colosseum on Oct. 7, 1951.

VERDI

VERDI

WORKS

OPERAS: Oberto, Conte di San Bonifacio (Milan, Nov. 17, 1839); Un Giorno di regno (also as Il finto Stanislao; Milan, Sept. 5, 1840); Nabucco (Milan, March 9, 1842; N. Y., April 4, 1848); I Lombardi alla prima Crociata (Milan, Feb. 11, 1843; N. Y., March 3, 1847; Paris, Nov. 26, 1847, as Jérusalem, with a new libretto and a ballet); Ernani (after Victor Hugo's Hernani; Venice, March 9, 1844; London, March 8, 1845; N. Y., Park Theater, April 15, 1847; Metropolitan Opera, Jan. 28, 1902); I due Foscari (Rome, Nov. 3, 1844; N. Y., June 6, 1847); Giovanna d'Arco (Milan, Feb. 15, 1845); Alzira (Naples, Aug. 12, 1845); Attila (Venice, March 17, 1846; N. Y., March 15, 1850); Macbeth (Florence, March 14, 1847; N. Y., Niblo's Garden, April 24, 1850; St. Petersburg, 1854, as Sivardo, il Sassone; revised version, Paris, April 21, 1865); I Masnadieri (after Schiller's Die Räuber; London, July 22, 1847; Milan, Sept. 20, 1853; N. Y., June 2, 1860); Il Corsaro (Trieste, Oct. 25, 1848); La Battaglia di Legnano (Rome, Jan. 27, 1849; later as L'Assedio d'Arlem); Luisa Miller (Naples, Dec. 8, 1849; N. Y., Castle Garden, July 20, 1854; London, June 3, 1858; Metropolitan Opera, Dec. 21, 1929); Stiffelio (Trieste, Nov. 16, 1850); Rigoletto (after Hugo's Le Roi s'amuse; Venice, March 11, 1851; London, May 14, 1853; N. Y., Academy of Music, Feb. 19, 1855; Metropolitan Opera, Nov. 16, 1883); Il Trovatore (Rome, Jan. 19, 1853; N. Y., Academy of Music, May 2, 1855; Metropolitan Opera, Oct. 26, 1883); La Traviata (also given as Violetta; Venice, March 6, 1853; N. Y., Academy of Music, Dec. 3, 1856; Metropolitan Opera, Nov. 6, 1883); Les Vêpres siciliennes (libretto by Scribe; Paris, June 13, 1855; N. Y., Academy of Music, Nov. 7, 1859; Milan, Feb. 4, 1856, as Giovanna di Guzman); Simone Boccanegra (Venice, March 12, 1857; revised, Milan, March 24, 1881; Metropolitan Opera, Jan. 28, 1932); Aroldo (a revision of Stiffelio; Rimini, Aug. 16, 1857); Un Ballo in maschera (Rome, Feb. 17, 1859; N. Y., Academy of Music, Feb. 11, 1861; Metropolitan Opera, Dec. 11, 1889); La Forza del destino (St. Petersburg, Nov. 10, 1862; N. Y., Academy of Music, Feb. 24, 1865; Metropolitan Opera, Nov. 15, 1918); Don Carlos (Paris, March 11, 1867; N. Y., Academy of Music, April 12, 1877; Metropolitan Opera, Dec. 23, 1920); Aida (Cairo, Dec. 24, 1871; Milan, Feb. 8, 1872; N. Y., Academy of Music, Nov. 25, 1873; Metropolitan Opera, in German, Nov. 12, 1886); Otello (Milan, Feb. 5, 1887; N. Y., Academy of Music, April 16, 1888; Metropolitan Opera, March 24, 1891); Falstaff (Milan, Feb. 9, 1893; Metropolitan Opera, Feb. 4, 1895). OTHER WORKS: Requiem Mass ('Manzoni Requiem'; 1874); 4 Pezzi sacri (1898); Ave Maria and Stabat Mater for mixed chorus a cappella; Laudi alla Vergine Maria for female chorus a cappella; Te Deum for double chorus with orch.; Inno delle Nazioni (for the London Exhibition of 1862); a string quartet in E minor (1873); Ave Maria for soprano and strings (1880); Pater noster for 5-part chorus a cappella (1880); 6 Romanze (Non t'accostare all'urna; More, Elisa; In solitaria stanza; Nell'orrore di notte oscura; Perduta ho la pace; Deh pietosa); 2 songs for bass, L'Esule and La Seduzione; Guarda che bianca luna, nocturne for soprano, tenor, and bass with flute obbligato; Album di sei romanze (Il Tramonto; La Zingara; Ad una stella; Lo Spazzacamino; Il Mistero; Brindisi); Il Poveretto, romanza; Tu dici che non m'ami, stornello.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — A. BIOGRAPHY: A. Pugin, V.: Histoire anecdotique de sa vie et de ses œuvres (Paris, 1886; in English, N. Y., 1887); E. Hanslick, G. V. Zur Geschichte seines Lebens, insbesondere seiner Jugendzeit, in Suite (Vienna, 1885); Prince de Valori, V. et son œuvre (Paris, 1895); L. Parodi, G. V. (Genoa, 1895); F. Crowest, V.: Man and Musician (London, 1897); G. Monaldi, V. (Turin, 1899; 3rd ed., Milan, 1943; German transl. as G. V. und seine Werke, Stuttgart, 1898, publ. before the Italian original); G. Cavarretta, V.: Il Genio, la vita, le opere (Palermo, 1899); C. Perinello, G. V. (Berlin, 1900); M. Basso, G. V.: La sua vita, le sue opere, la sua morte (Milan, 1901); N. Marini, G. V. (Rome, 1901); E. Checchi, G. V. (Florence, 1901); O. Boni, V.: L'Uomo, le opere, l'artista (Parma, 1901; 2nd ed., 1913); E. Colonna, G. V. nella vita e nelle opere (Palermo, 1902); L. Sorge, G. V.: Uomo, artista, patriota (Lanciano, 1904); P. Voss, G. V. Ein Lebensbild (Diessen, 1904); F. Garibaldi, G. V. nella vita e nell'arte (Florence, 1904); A. Visetti, V. (London, 1905); G. Bragagnolo and E. Bettazzi, La Vita di G. V. narrata al popolo (Milan, 1905); A. d'Angeli, G. V. (Bologna, 1910; 2nd ed., 1912); C. Bellaiguc, V. Biographie critique (Paris, 1912; Italian transl., Milan, 1913); G. Monaldi, Il Maestro della rivoluzione italiana (Milan, 1913); M. Lottici, Bio-bibliografia di G. V. (Parma, 1913); A. Righetti, G. V.: Vita aneddotica (Rome, 1913); Sir A. Mackenzie, V. (N. Y., 1913); M. Chop, V. (Leipzig, 1913); G. Roncaglia, G. V. (Naples, 1914); A. Neisser, G. V. (Leipzig, 1914); A. Weissmann, V. (Berlin, 1922); A. Bonaventura, G. V. (Paris, 1923); G. Monaldi, V. aneddotico (Turin, 1926); F. Ridella, V. (Genoa, 1928); E. Gascó Contell, V., su vida y sus obras (Paris, 1927); F. Bonavia, V. (London, 1930; 2nd ed., 1947); L. A. Garibaldi, ed., G. V. nelle lettere di E. Muzio ad A. Barezzi (Milan, 1931); C. Gatti, V. (Milan, 1931; 2nd ed., 1951; English transl., N. Y., 1955); F. Toye, G. V. (London, 1931); A. Baresel, Was weisst du von V. (1931); H. Gerigk, G. V. (Potsdam, 1932); R. de Rensis, Franco Faccio e V. (Milan, 1934); R. Manganella, V. (Milan, 1936); L. d'Ambrà, G. V. (Milan, 1937); D. Hussey, V. (London, 1940); Verdi, studi e memorie, ed. by G. Mulè and G. Nataletti (Rome, 1941; contains precise documentation of ascertainable facts of Verdi's life; very valuable); G. Roncaglia, G. V. (Florence, 1941); F. Botti, G. V. (Rome, 1941); K. Holl, V. (Vienna, 1942); U. Zoppi, Angelo Mariani, G. V. e Teresa Stolz (Milan, 1947); F. H. Törnblom, V. (Stockholm, 1948); D. Humphreys, V., Force of Destiny (N. Y., 1948); A. Oberdorfer, G. V. (Verona, 1949); A. E. A. Cherbuliez, G. V. (Zürich, 1949); G. Cenozato, Itinerari verdiani (Parma, 1949; 2nd ed., Milan, 1955); L. Orsini, G. V. (Turin, 1949); L. Gianoli, V. (Brescia, 1951); F. Abbiati, ed., G. V. (Milan, 1951); G. V. (collection of articles; Siena, 1951); G. Monaldi, V., la vita, le opere (Milan, 1951); E. Radius, V. vivo (Milan, 1951); G. Stefani, V. e Trieste (Trieste, 1951); G. Mondini, Nel cinquantennio della morte di G. V. (Cremona, 1952); F. Botti, V. e l'ospedale di Villanova d'Arda (Parma, 1952); T. R. Ybarra, V., Miracle Man of Opera (N. Y., 1955); V. Sheean, Orpheus at Eighty (N. Y., 1958); also a biographical novel by F. Werfel, V. (Berlin, 1924; English transl., N. Y., 1925). —B. CRITICISM, APPRECIATION: A. Bascvi, Studio sulle opere di G. V. (Florence, 1859); G. Bertrand, Les Nationalités musicales étudiées dans le drame lyrique. Verdisme et Wagnerisme (Paris, 1872); E. Hanslick, V., in Die moderne Oper (Berlin, 1875; 8th ed., 1885); B. Roosevelt, V., Milan and Otello (Milan, 1887); V. Maurel, A propos de la mise-en-scène du drame lyrique 'Otello' (Rome, 1888); E. Destrange, L'Évolution musicale chez V.: Aida, Otello, Falstaff (Paris, 1895); C. Abate, Wagner e V. Studio critico-musicale (Mistretta, 1896); I. Pizzi, Ricordi verdiani inediti (Turin, 1901; contains 11 letters); A. Soffredini, Le Opere di G. V.: Studio critico- analitico (Milan, 1901); G. Tebaldini, Da Rossini a V. (Naples, 1901); P. Bellezza, Manzoni e V., i due grandi (Rome, 1901); J. G. Huncker, Overtures (N. Y., 1904); F. Flamini, Pagine di critica e d'arte (Leghorn, 1905; contains a study on the operas of Verdi); J. C. Hadden, The Operas of V. (London, 1910); K. Regensburger, Über den 'Trovador' des García Gutiérrez, die Quelle von Verdis 'Il Trovatore' (Berlin, 1911); C. Vanbianchi, Saggio di bibliografia verdiana (Milan, 1913); A. St. John-Brenon, G. V., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1916); E. Istel, The 'Othello' of V. and Shakespeare (ib., July, 1916) and A Genetic Study of the Aida Libretto (ib., Jan., 1917); L. Unterholzner, G. V.'s Operntypus (Hanover, 1933); P. Berl, Die Opern V.s in ihrer Instrumentation (diss., Vienna, 1931); A. Maeklenburg, V. and Manzoni, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1931); G. Menghini, G. V. e il melodramma italiano (Rimini, 1931); M. Mila, Il Melodramma di V. (Bari, 1933); A. Parente, Il Problema della critica verdiana (Turin, 1933); R. Gallusser, V.s Frauengestalten (diss., Zürich, 1936); J. Loschelder, Das Todesproblem in V.s Opernschaffen (Cologne, 1938); G. Engler, V.s Anschauung vom Wesen der Oper (diss.; Breslau, 1938); G. Roncaglia, L'Ascensione creatrice di G. V. (Florence, 1940); M. Rinaldi, V. critico (Rome, 1951); C. Gatti, Revisioni e rivalutazioni verdiane (Turin, 1952); also the special V. issue of the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1901). —C. CORRESPONDENCE, ICONOGRAPHY: G. Cesari and A. Luzzio, G. V. I copialelettere pubblicati e illustrati (Leipzig, 1913); G. Monaldi, Saggio di iconografia verdiana (Bergamo, 1913); T. Costantini, Sei lettere inedite (relating to the production of Aida in Cairo; Trieste, 1908); J. G. Prod'homme, Unpublished Letters from V. to Camille Du Locle (1866-76), in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1921); A. Martinelli, G. V. Raggi e Penombre. Le ultime lettere (Trieste, 1926); Briefe (transl. into German by P. Stefan, Vienna, 1926); G. Morazzoni, Lettere inedite di G. V. (Milan, 1929); A. Alberti, V. intimo: carteggio di G. V. con il conte O. Arriabene (Verona, 1931); Sei lettere inedite a G. Bottesini (Trieste, 1934); A. Luzzio, Il Pensiero artistico e politico di G. V. nelle sue lettere inedite al conte O. Arriabene (Milan); C. Gatti, V. nelle immagini (Milan, 1941); C. Graziani, G. V.: Autobiografia dalle lettere (Milan, 1941; new ed., 1951, under Graziani's real name, Aldo Oberdorfer); F. Werfel and P. Stefan, eds., V., The Man in His Letters (N. Y., 1942).

Vere, Clémentine Duchene de (real name Wood de Vere), noted soprano; b. Paris, Dec. 12, 1864; d. Mount Vernon, N. Y., Jan. 19, 1954. Her father was a Belgian nobleman; her mother, an English lady. Her musical education was completed under the instruction of Mme. Albertini-Baucardé in Florence, where she made her début at the age of 16 as Marguerite de Valois in Les Huguenots; after appearances in Europe, she was engaged as Marguerite in a concert performance of Berlioz's Damnation of Faust at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y. (Feb. 2, 1896). Her operatic roles at the Metropolitan Opera were Violetta, Gilda, Marguerite in Gounod's Faust, and Lucia. In 1892 she married the conductor Romualdo Sapio (q. v.); after 1914 she lived mostly in N. Y., as a private teacher. Her voice was a brilliant high soprano; she excelled in coloratura.

Vermans, Renaat, Belgian composer; b. Lierre, March 2, 1894. He studied at the Antwerp Cons.; from 1921 to 1944, was director of the Flemish Opera there. He wrote the Flemish operas Beatrice (1930) and Anna-Marie (Antwerp, Feb. 22, 1938); symph. works; chamber music; choruses; many songs.

Veress, Sándor, Hungarian composer; b. Kolozsvár, Feb. 1, 1907. He studied piano with his mother and composition with Bartók and Kodály. In 1947 he left Hungary and went to Rome; later settled in Switzerland, and was appointed prof. of composition at Bern Univ. —Works: ballet, Terszili Katika (1943; Stockholm, Feb. 16, 1949); violin concerto (1939; Zürich, Jan. 9, 1951); 4 Transylvanian Dances for string orch. (1944); Threnos in memory of Béla Bartók (1945); concerto for piano, strings, and percussion (Baden Baden, Jan. 19, 1954, composer soloist); Sinfonia Minneapolitana (Minneapolis, March 12, 1954); 2 string quartets; trio for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon; sonata for violin and piano; songs. —Cf. C. Mason, Sándor Veress, in the 'Chesterian' (Oct., 1951); E. Doflein, Sándor Veress, in 'Melos' (March, 1954).

Veretti, Antonio, Italian composer; b. Verona, Feb. 20, 1900. He studied composition with Alfano at the Liceo Musicale of Bologna, graduating in 1921. He taught at the Cons. of Rome (until 1943); was director of the Conservatorio G. Rossini in Pesaro (1950-52); director of the Cons. of Cagliari (1953-55). —Works: operas: Il Medico volante (1928; won a prize of the newspaper 'Il Secolo,' but was never performed) and Il Favorito del re (La Scala, Milan, March 17, 1932); ballets: Il galante tiratore (San Remo, Feb. 11, 1933) and Una Favola di Andersen (Venice, Sept. 15, 1934); oratorios: Il Canticum dei Cantici (Bologna, 1922) and Il Figliuolo prodigo (1943); Sinfonia italiana (Liège Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Sept. 4, 1930); Morte e deificazione di Dafni, for voice and 11 instruments (Venice Festival, Sept. 8, 1937); Sinfonia epica (1939); Divertimento, for harpsichord and 6 instruments (1939); Sinfonia sacra, for male voices and orch. (1946); piano concerto (Venice International Festival, Sept. 9, 1950); Duo strumentale, for violin and piano (1925); cello sonata (1926); piano trio (1927); music for films. —Cf. N. Costarelli, Antonio Veretti, in the 'Rassegna Musicale' (Jan.-March, 1955).

Verhulst (fär-hülst'), Johannes (Josephus Herman), Dutch conductor and composer; b. The Hague, March 19, 1816; d. there, Jan. 17, 1891. He studied violin at The Hague and Cologne; in 1838 went to Leipzig, where he became friendly with Mendelssohn; was engaged as conductor of the 'Euterpe' concerts (until 1842); then returned to The Hague, where he became royal music director; organized music festivals in Holland between 1850 and 1883, and wrote cantatas for them. He was conductor of the renowned 'Diligentia' concerts at The Hague from 1860 until 1886; also conducted in Amsterdam and Rotterdam. He wrote a number of symph. works; chamber music, sacred songs, choruses to Dutch words.

Vermeulen, Matthijs, Dutch composer and music critic; b. Helmond, Feb. 8, 1888. He studied with Diepenbrock; then wrote music criticism in Amsterdam (1908-21); in 1921 settled in Paris, where he remained until 1946; returned to Amsterdam and became music editor of 'De Groene Amsterdammer.' He wrote 5 symphonies (1914, 1919, 1922, 1941, 1945); chamber music; songs. Publ. a collection of essays, De twee muzieken (2 vols., Leyden, 1918), and Principelen der Europese muziek (Amsterdam, 1949). —Cf. W. Paap, De Componist Matthijs Vermeulen, in 'Mens en Melodie' (Nov., 1949).

Verne, Mathilde, Alice, and Adela, English pianists, sisters of Marie Wurm (q. v.). Their real name was Wurm, but they adopted the name Verne in 1893. Mathilde

Verne (b. Southampton, May 25, 1865; d. London, June 4, 1936) studied with her parents, and then became a pupil of Clara Schumann in Frankfurt; was very successful in England; from 1907 to 1936 gave concerts of chamber music in London; was a renowned teacher. Alice Verne Bredt (b. Southampton, Aug. 9, 1868; d. London, April 12, 1958) was best known as a piano teacher; also composed pedagogical works. Adela Verne (b. Southampton, Feb. 27, 1877; d. London, Feb. 5, 1952) studied with her sisters, and later took lessons from Paderewski in Switzerland; returning to London, she developed a successful career, and became extremely popular as a concert player in England; also made tours in the U. S. — Cf. Mathilde Verne, Chords of Remembrance (London, 1936).

Verneuil, Raoul de, Peruvian composer; b. Lima, April 9, 1899. He studied in Paris with André Bloch, and lived there for many years; returned to Lima in 1940, after a brief sojourn in N. Y. On Nov. 21, 1940, he gave a concert of his chamber music in Lima. He has written a Danza Peruana for orch.; an Inca Legend for voice and 8 instruments; Ritmos del Sol for 12-part chorus; piano pieces.

Verrall, John, American composer; b. Britt, Iowa, June 17, 1908. He studied composition and piano with Donald Ferguson, and cello with Engelbert Roentgen; attended the Royal College of Music in London (1929-30) and the Liszt Cons. in Budapest, studying with Kodály. Returning to the U. S. in 1932, he entered the Univ. of Minnesota (B. A., 1934); later took courses with Aaron Copland at Tanglewood, Roy Harris at Colorado College, and Frederick Jacobi at the Juilliard School of Music. He received a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1946. He taught at Hamline Univ. (1934-42) and at Mount Holyoke College (1942-46); served as editor for G. Schirmer, Inc. (1947-48). In 1948 he was appointed instructor at the Univ. of Washington. — Works: operas: The Cowherd and the Sky Maiden, after a Chinese legend (Seattle, Jan. 17, 1952), The Wedding Knell, after Hawthorne (Seattle, Dec. 5, 1952), Three Blind Mice (Seattle, May 22, 1955); for orch.: Symph. No. 1 (Minneapolis, Jan. 16, 1940), Portrait of Man, symph. suite (1940), Symph. No. 2 (1943), violin concerto (1946), Symph. for Young Orchestras (1948), Dark Night of Saint John (1949), Variations on an Ancient Tune (1955), Portrait of Saint Christopher, symph. poem (1956); for band: A Northern Overture for band (1946), Sinfonia Festiva for band (1954); chamber music: cello sonata (1932), Divertimento for clarinet, horn, and bassoon (1939), trio for 2 violins and viola (1940), 6 string quartets (1940, 1943, 1948, 1949, 1952, 1956), Concert Piece for strings and horn (1940), sonata for horn and piano (1942), sonata for viola and piano (1942), Serenade No. 1 for wind quintet (1944), a violin sonata (1949), Appalachian Folk Song, for cello and piano (1953), piano quintet (1953), Serenade No. 2 for wind quintet (1954), sonata for oboe and piano (1956), Serenade and Pastorale for flute and organ (1956), Suite for brass sextet (1956), Suite for 3 clarinets (1957), Sonatina for cello and piano (1957), Nocturne for bass clarinet and piano (1958); a piano sonata (1951) and Sketches and Miniatures for piano (1954); several choruses; publ. Elements of Harmony (1937) and Form and Meaning in the Arts (1958). — Cf. James Beale, The Music of John Verrall, in the 'Bulletin of American Composers Alliance' (1958, vol. 7; also contains a full list of works).

Verstovsky, Alexey Nikolayevitch, Russian composer; b. on the family estate in the district of Tambov, March 1, 1799; d. Moscow, Nov. 17, 1862. He was sent to St. Petersburg at the age of 10; there he studied with the resident German teacher, Johann Heinrich Miller, and with John Field (piano); his other teachers were Maurer (violin), Steibelt (piano), and Tarquini (voice). His first theatrical piece was an intermezzo, Sentimental Landlord in a Village (1818); he then produced a number of light operas in St. Petersburg: Grandmother's Parrot (Aug. 10, 1819); Quarantine (Aug. 7, 1820); New Mischief (Feb. 24, 1822); The Madhouse (Oct. 28, 1822); and A Charade in Action (Jan. 15, 1823; with Maurer). In 1823 he moved to Moscow, where he was engaged as inspector of the imperial theaters. There he produced a long series of vaudevilles: Who is Brother, Who is Sister? (Feb. 5, 1824); Teacher and Pupil (May 6, 1824); The Petitioner (June 10, 1824); 30,000 Men (Feb. 10, 1825); The Caliph's Amusements (April 21, 1825); The Miraculous Nose (Oct. 20, 1825); Itinerant Doctors (Feb. 16, 1827); 5 Years in 2 Hours (Feb. 1, 1828); 15 Years in Paris (Feb. 8, 1828); Man and Wife (June 4, 1830); The Old Hussar (June 17, 1831); wrote couplets and songs for various plays (mostly translations from the French) produced in Moscow. He turned to the composition of serious operatic works in 1828; wrote the following operas, all produced in Moscow: Pan Tvardovsky (June 5, 1828); Vadim, or 12 Sleeping Maidens (Dec. 7, 1832); Askold's Grave (Sept. 27, 1835; his most important work; still in the repertory of Russian opera houses); Homesickness (Sept. 2, 1839); Gromoboy (Feb. 5, 1858). A contemporary of Glinka, he contributed much to the progress of operatic art in Russia; he possessed a gift of facile invention, even though he lacked originality. — Cf. V. Tcheshikhin, History of Russian Opera (St. Petersburg, 1905, pp. 98-108); see also the biographical sketch on Verstovsky in the modern edition of his opera-vaudeville, Who is Brother, Who is Sister? (Moscow, 1949).

Vesque von Püttlingen, Johann, Austrian composer; b. Opole, Poland, July 23, 1803; d. Vienna, Oct. 30, 1883. He studied law in Vienna and became a councillor of state; at the same time he studied music with Moscheles (piano) and Sechter (theory), and made his mark as a composer of operas, under the pseudonym J. Hoven. The following operas by him were produced in Vienna: Turandot (Oct. 3, 1838), Johanna d'Arc (Dec. 30, 1840), and Abenteuer Carls des Zweiten (Jan. 12, 1850). His opera Der lustige Rat was produced in Weimar on April 12, 1852. He publ. a useful book, Das musikalische Autorrecht (1865). — Cf. E. Hanslick, Vesque von Püttlingen, in 'Musikalisches Skizzenbuch' (Berlin, 1888); H. Schultz, Johann Vesque von Püttlingen (Regensburg, 1930).

Vetter (fēt'-tēr), Walther, German musicologist; b. Berlin, May 10, 1891. He studied with Hermann Abert in Halle and Leipzig; then wrote music criticism in Halle; taught at Danzig (1921-27), Breslau (1927), Halle (1928), at the Univ. of Hamburg (1929-34), Univ. of Breslau (1934-36), Univ. of Greifswald (1936-41), Univ. of Poznan during German occupation (1941-43); in 1946 appointed prof. of musicology at Humboldt Univ., Berlin, as successor to Arnold Schering; from 1957 ed. of 'Deutsches Jahrbuch der Musikwissenschaft.' — Books: Das frühdeutsche Lied (2 vols., Münster, 1928); Franz Schubert (Potsdam, 1934); Antike Musik (Munich, 1935); J. S. Bach (Leipzig, 1938); Beethoven und die militärisch-politischen Ereignisse seiner Zeit (Poznan, 1943); Der Kapellmeister Bach (Potsdam, 1950); Der Klassiker Schubert (2 vols., Leipzig, 1953); Mythos-Melos-Musica (Leipzig, 1957).

Viadana, Lodovico (da), Italian composer; b. Viadana, near Mantua, 1564; d. Gualtieri, May 2, 1645. His family was Grossi, but he is generally known by the name of his birthplace; pupil of Ercole Porta; became a Franciscan monk in 1596; from 1594 till 1609, was maestro di cappella at the Mantua Cathedral; from 1610 to 1612, choromaster at Fano (Papal States), then in Venice, and finally in Mantua again. He was formerly accredited with the invention of the basso continuo (thorough-bass); but Peri's Euridice (publ. 1600) has a figured bass in certain numbers, as does Banchieri's Concerti ecclesiastici (publ. 1595); whereas Viadana's Cento concerti . . . con il basso continuo did not appear till 1602 (Venice). However, he was the first to write church concertos with so few parts that the organ continuo was employed as a necessary harmonic support. A very prolific composer, he publ. numerous Masses, psalms, Magnificats, Lamentations, motets, etc. — Cf. A. Parazzi, Della Vita e delle opere musicali di L. Grossi-Viadana (Milan, 1876); F. X. Haberl, in 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (1881) and 'Musica Sacra' (1897); M. Schneider, Die Anfänge des Basso Continuo (with 11 numbers from the Cento concerti of 1602; 1918); F. T. Arnold, The Art of Accompaniment from a Thorough Bass (London, 1931); F. B. Pratella, Viadana e la sinfonia, in 'Il Pensiero Musicale' (Sept.-Nov., 1922). See also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 488-89).

Vianesi, Auguste-Charles-Léonard-François, conductor; b. Leghorn, Nov. 2, 1837; d. New York, Nov. 4, 1908. After studying in Italy, he went to Paris in 1857; in 1859 became conductor at Drury Lane, London; later conducted Italian Opera at Covent Garden; in 1887 became principal conductor at the Grand Opéra, Paris. He conducted the performance of Faust at the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera House (N. Y., Oct. 22, 1883), and was on its staff throughout its first season; also conducted during the season of 1891-92; then remained in N. Y. as a vocal teacher.

Vianna, Fructuoso, Brazilian composer; b. Itajubá, Oct. 6, 1896. He studied in Rio de Janeiro with Henrique Oswald, and later in Paris (1923). Upon his return to Brazil, he was appointed to the faculty of the Cons. of S. Paulo. He wrote a number of piano pieces based on Brazilian melodic and rhythmic modes: Dança de Negros, Tamborzinho, Tanguinho, Corta-Jaca, 7 Minia- turas sobre temas brasileiros, Seresta, 5 'valsas,' 6 'toadas,' etc.; several choral works and songs; a few violin pieces.

Vianna da Motta, José. See Da Motta.

Viardot-García (v'yähr-doh'-gähr-thē'ah), Pauline, celebrated singer; daughter of Manuel del Popolo García; b. Paris, July 18, 1821; d. there, May 18, 1910. She was taken by her parents to England and America; had piano lessons from Vega, organist at Mexico Cathedral; also (on returning to Paris in 1828) from Meysenberg and Liszt. Her father and mother both gave her vocal instruction; Reicha was her teacher in harmony. Her concert début was at Brussels in 1837; after singing in Germany and Paris, she came out in opera at London, 1839, as Desdemona in Rossini's Otello, and was engaged by Viardot, the director of the Théâtre Italien, Paris. She sang there until her marriage to Viardot in 1841; he then accompanied her on long tours throughout Europe. She created the role of Fides in Meyerbeer's Le Prophète at the Paris Opéra in 1849, and that of Sapho in Gounod's opera, 1851; after another succession of tours, she took the role of Orphée in Berlioz's revival of Gluck's opera at the Théâtre Lyrique (1859), singing the part 150 nights to crowded houses. She retired to Baden-Baden in 1863; from 1871 she lived in Paris and Bougival. Her voice was a mezzo-soprano of extraordinary compass (from c to f). For some years she taught at the Paris Cons.; among her pupils were Désirée Artôt and Antoinette Sterling. A thoroughly trained musician, she also composed operas, one of which, Le dernier sorcier, was performed (in a German version) at Weimar (1869), Karlsruhe, and Riga. About 60 vocal melodies were published, and won wide popularity; also 6 pieces for piano and violin and an École classique de chant. She owned the holograph of Mozart's Don Giovanni, which she left to the Library of the Cons. in Paris. She was for many years a companion of the Russian novelist Turgenev, in Paris. —Cf. La Mara, P. Viardot-García (Leipzig, 1882); L. H. Torrigni, P. Viardot-García. Sa biographie, ses compositions, son enseignement (Geneva, 1901); G. H. Kaminski, Lettres à Mlle. Viardot d'Ivan Tourguéneff (Paris, 1907); P. Viardot-García to J. Rietz, Letters of Friendship, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1915-Jan., 1916); T. Marix-Spire, Gounod and His Interpreter, Pauline Viardot, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, July, 1945); A. Rachmanowa (pseud.), Die Liebe eines Lebens: Iwan Turgenjew und Pauline Viardot (Frauenfeld, 1952); also the memoirs of her daughter, Louise Héritte-Viardot, Memories and Adventures (London, 1913; transl. from original German MS; also in French, Paris, 1923).

Vicentino (vē-chēhn-tē'-noh), Nicola, Italian music theorist; b. Vicenza, 1511; d. Rome, 1572. Pupil of Willaert at Venice; then became maestro and music master to Cardinal Ippolito d'Este in Ferrara and in Rome. There his book of madrigals for 5 voices, an attempt to revive the chromatic and enharmonic genera of the Greeks, led to an academic controversy with the learned Portuguese musician Lusitano; defeated, Vicentino publ. a theoretical treatise, L'antica musica ridotta alla moderna prattica (1555), which contains a description of his invention, an instrument called the archicembalo (having 6 keyboards, with separate strings and keys for distinguishing the ancient genera—diatonic, chromatic, and enharmonic). He also invented and described (1561) an 'archiorgano.' In chromatic composition he was followed by Cipriano de Rore and Gesualdo. His work paved the way for the monodic style, and the eventual disuse of the church modes. —Cf. H. Riemann, Geschichte der Musiktheorie (Leipzig, 1898); Th. Kroyer, Die Anfänge der Chromatik im italienischen Madrigal des XVI. Jahrhunderts ('Beihefte der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft,' IV). See also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 328-29).

Victoria, Tomás Luis de (Italianized form, Tommaso Luigi da Vittoria), the greatest of Spanish composers; b. Avila, c. 1549; d. Madrid, Aug. 27, 1611. There is no record of Victoria's early years in Avila, but in all probability he received his first musical training as a choir-boy at the Cathedral there. In 1565 he went to Rome, and to prepare himself for the priesthood entered the Collegium Germanicum, a seminary founded by St. Ignatius Loyola in 1552. In Rome his teacher may have been Palestrina, who from 1566 to 1571 was music master at the Roman Seminary, at this time amalgamated with the Collegium Germanicum. Victoria was about the same age as Palestrina's two sons, Rodolfo and Angelo, who were students at the Roman Seminary; the Italian master is known to have befriended his young Spanish colleague, and when Palestrina left the Roman Seminary in 1571, it was Victoria who succeeded him as maestro there. In 1569, Victoria had left the Collegium Germanicum to become choir-master and organist in the Church of Sta. Maria di Montserrat; from this time on he also officiated frequently at musical ceremonies in the Church of S. Giacomo degli Spagnuoli. In June, 1573, he returned to the Collegium Germanicum as maestro di cappella; 2 years later the Collegium moved to new quarters in the Palazzo S. Apollinare, and Victoria thereby became choirmaster of the adjoining Church of S. Apollinare. In Aug., 1575, he was ordained a priest; in Jan. of that year he had received a benefice at León from the Pope, and in 1579 he was granted another benefice at Zamora, neither requiring residence. In 1587 he resigned his post at the Collegium Germanicum and was admitted as a priest to the Church of S. Girolamo della Carità, where he lived until 1585; this was the church where St. Philip Neri held his famous religious meetings, which led to the founding of the Congregation of the Oratory in 1575. Though Victoria was not a member of the Oratory, he must have taken some part in its important musical activities, living as he did for 5 years under the same roof with its founder (St. Philip left S. Girolamo in 1583); he is known to have been on terms of the closest friendship with Juvenal Ancina, a priest of the Oratory who wrote texts for many of the 'Laudi spirituali' sung at the meetings of the Congregation. In 1583, dedicating a volume of Masses to Philip II, Victoria expressed a desire to return to his native land; but this wish does not appear to have been fulfilled until some 12 years later. He probably returned to Spain in 1594; in the dedication of his 2nd book of Masses (1592) he mentions for the first time his appointment as chaplain to the widowed Empress-Mother Maria, sister of Philip II, who in 1582 had taken up her residence in the Convent of the Descalzas Reales in Madrid. After his return to Spain, Victoria became organist and choirmaster at this convent, and when the Empress Maria died in 1603, he continued to act as chaplain to her daughter, the Princess Margaret, who was a nun in the Descalzas Reales. His last work, a Requiem Mass for the Empress Maria, regarded as his masterpiece, was publ. in 1605. — Beginning with a vol. of motets in 1572, dedicated to his chief patron, Cardinal Otto Truchsess, Bishop of Augsburg, most of Victoria's works were printed in Italy, in sumptuous editions, showing that he had the backing of wealthy patrons. A vol. of Masses, Magnificats, motets, and other church music publ. at Madrid in 1600 is of special interest because it makes provision for an organ accompaniment.—A man of deep religious sentiment, Victoria expresses in his music all the ardor and exaltation of Spanish mysticism. He is generally regarded as a leading representative of the Roman School, but it should be remembered that, before the appearance of Palestrina, this school was already profoundly marked by Hispanic influences through the work of Morales, Guerrero, Escobedo, and other Spanish composers resident in Rome. Thus Victoria inherited at least as much from his own countrymen as from Palestrina, and in its dramatic intensity, its rhythmic variety, its tragic grandeur and spiritual fervor, his music is thoroughly personal and thoroughly Spanish. — Works publ. in Victoria's lifetime: motets for 4, 5, 6, and 8 voices (Venice, 1572; contains the well-known motets O quam gloriosum and O vos omnes); Liber primus qui Missas, Psalmos, Magnificat, ad Virginem Dei Matrem Salutationes, aliaque complectitur (Venice, 1576); Cantica B. Virginis per annum (Rome, 1581); Hymni totius anni (Rome, 1581; new ed., Venice, 1600); motets for 4, 5, 6, 8, and 12 voices (Rome, 1583); Missarum libri duo, 4-6 voices (Rome, 1583); Officium Hebdomadae Sanctae (Rome, 1585); Motecta Festorum totius anni, 4, 5, 6, and 8 voices (Rome, 1585; new eds. printed at Milan and Dillingen in 1589); Missae Liber secundus, 4-8 voices (Rome, 1592); Missae, Magnificat, Motecta, Psalmi . . . for 8, 9, and 12 voices (Madrid, 1600; contains both old and new works); Officium Defunctorum, 6 voices (Madrid, 1605). — Pedrell brought out a complete modern ed. of Victoria's works in 8 vols. (Breitkopf & Härtel, 1902-13). Many selections are in Proske's 'Musica divina'; Esclava's 'Lira Sacro-Hispana' contains the Requiem and other works; the Officium Hebdomadae Sanctae is in Pustet's 'Repertorium musicae sacrae' vol. 2 (Regensburg, 1898); other reprints in Casimiri's 'Societas polyphonica Romana' (Rome, 1925-34), Wüllner's 'Chor-übungen' (new ed. by E. Schwickerath; Munich, 1931), Schering's 'Beispielen' (No. 128), H. Bäuerle's 'Hymnen und Motetten alter Meister' (Augsburg, 1936), Davison and Apel's 'Historical Anthology of Music' (vol. 1, No. 149), etc. — BIBLIOGRAPHY: L. Celler, La Semaine Sainte au Vatican (Paris, 1867); H. Collet, Le Mysticisme musical espagnol au XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1913) and T. L. de Victoria (Paris, 1914); G. Radiciotti, Due musicisti spagnuoli, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' XIV; F. Pedrell, T. L. de Victoria (Valencia, 1918); R. Mitjana, Estudi-

VICTORIA

VICTORY — VIERLING

os sobre algunos músicos españoles del siglo XVI (Madrid, 1918) and La Musique en Espagne, in 'Encyclopédie du Conservatoire,' part I, vol. IV (Paris, 1920); J. B. Trend, T. L. de Victoria, in the 'Mus. Times' (April, 1925); R. Casimiri, 'Il Vittoria' (Rome, 1934); Hans von May, Die Kompositionstechnik T. L. de Victorias (Bern, 1943); also P. Wagner, Geschichte der Messe I, p. 421 ff., Hugo Leichtentritt, Geschichte der Motette, p. 373 ff., and G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance, p. 599 ff.

Victory, Gerard, Irish composer; b. Dublin, Dec. 24, 1921. He studied at the National Univ. of Ireland; became active as conductor of operettas and musical comedies and musical director at the Abbey Theatre in Dublin. —Works: 2 operettas, Nita (1944) and Once Upon a Moon (1949); ballet The Enchanted Garden (1950); Marche Pittoresque for orch. (1951); a piano concerto and numerous choral and instrumental pieces for the Dublin Radio. His opera in Gaelic, An Fear a Phós Balbhín (The Silent Wife), was produced with considerable success at the Abbey Theatre in Dublin, on April 6, 1953, under the composer's direction.

Vidal, Louis-Antoine, French writer on music; b. Rouen, July 10, 1820; d. Paris, Jan. 7, 1891. He studied cello with Franchomme; made a specialty of string-instrument research; publ. a valuable survey, Les Instruments à archet, les faiseurs, les joueurs d'instruments, leur histoire sur le continent européen, suivie d'un catalogue général de la musique de chambre (3 vols.; Paris, 1876-78; with 120 illustrative plates); sections of this work were publ. separately as Les vieilles corporations de Paris (1878) and La Lutherie et les luthiers (1889).

Vidal (vê-dahl'), Paul, noted French composer and pedagogue; b. Toulouse, June 16, 1863; d. Paris, April 9, 1931. He studied at the Paris Cons. and in 1883 won the Prix de Rome with his cantata Le Gladiateur; in 1889 he joined the staff of the Paris Opéra, as choral director; later became conductor there (until 1906). He taught elementary courses at the Paris Cons. from 1894 until 1910, when he was appointed prof. of composition; his class was one of the most important there. —Stage works: ballet, La Maladetta (Paris Opéra, Feb. 24, 1893); opera, Guernica (Opéra-Comique, June 7, 1895); a mystery play, Noël, ou Le Mystère de la Nativité (Galerie Vivienne, Paris, Nov. 25, 1890); operetta, Éros (Bouffes-Parisiens, April 22, 1892); in collaboration with André Messager, he orchestrated a dance suite from music by Chopin (1913); also arranged an orchestral suite from his mystery play Les Mystères d'Eleusis; composed piano pieces and songs. He publ. several instructive manuals, much used in France: Manuel pratique d'harmonie; Notes et observations sur la composition et exécution; compiled 52 Leçons d'harmonie de Luigi Cherubini (3 vols.); Solfège (2 vols., Paris, 1922).

Vieira, Ernesto, Portuguese music historian; b. Lisbon, May 24, 1848; d. there, April 26, 1915. His main achievement was the publication of the Diccionario biográfico de músicos portugueses (Lisbon, 1900), which supplemented the earlier dictionary by Vasconcellos (1870).

Vierdanck (fēr'-dank), Johann, German organist and composer; b. c. 1610; date of death unknown. He was a chorister in Dresden, where he was a pupil of Schütz; was sent to Vienna in 1628 for further study; was church organist at the Marienkirche, Stralsund (1641-56). He publ. Ballette und Corrente for violin with continuo (1637; 1641); spiritual 'concertos' for 2-9 voices; of these, several were brought out in modern eds. by Hans Engel (Kassel, 1932 and 1934) and Hans Erdmann (Kassel, 1950).

Vierling (fēr'-ling), Georg, German organist and composer; b. Frankenthal, Bavaria, Sept. 5, 1820; d. Wiesbaden, May 1, 1901. He was a pupil of his father, the organist Jacob Vierling (1796-1867); then studied organ with Rinck in Darmstadt and composition with A. B. Marx in Berlin. He occupied various posts as organist and choral conductor in the German provinces; then settled in Berlin, where he founded and conducted the 'Bach-Verein'; became a member of the Berlin Academy in 1882. A catalogue of his works was issued in 1897; they include the secular cantatas Der Raub der Sabinerinnen, Alarichs Tod, and Constantin; the choral works (with orch.) Hero und Laander and Zur Weinlese; a symph.; several overtures (Maria Stuart, Die Hexe, Im Frühling, etc.); Capriccio for piano and orch.; Phantasiestück for cello and piano; 2 string quartets; a piano trio; a number of piano pieces (Valse-Caprice, 2 Impromptus, etc.); songs.

Vierling (fēr'-ling), Johann Gottfried, German organist and composer; b. Metzels, near Meiningen, Jan. 25, 1750; d. Schmal-kalden, Nov. 22, 1813. His teachers were K. P. E. Bach in Hamburg and Kirnberger in Berlin, from whom he acquired contrapuntal skill in composition in the Bach style. He publ. several collections of organ pieces; a piano quartet; 2 piano trios; 8 piano sonatas; in MS there are 2 sets of church cantatas for the entire year. His theoretical manuals, Versuch einer Anleitung zum Präludieren (1794) and Allgemein fasslicher Unterricht im Generalbass (1805), are of value. —Cf. K. Paulke, J. G. Vierling, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (1922).

Vierne (vyärn'), Louis, blind French organist and composer; b. Poitiers, Oct. 8, 1870; d. Paris, June 2, 1937. He was a pupil of César Franck and Widor at the Paris Cons., winning 1st prize for organ playing; in 1892 he became Widor's assistant at St. Sulpice, and in 1900 was appointed organist at Notre Dame, holding this position until his death (he died suddenly while playing the organ at a service there). From 1912 he taught organ at the Schola Cantorum; gave many concerts in Europe; in 1927 played in the U. S. His organ works include 5 'symphonies' and many smaller pieces. Among his pupils were Nadia Boulanger, Marcel Dupré, and Joseph Bonnet. —Cf. In Memoriam Louis Vierne (Paris, 1939); B. Gavoty, Louis Vierne, la vie et l'œuvre (Paris, 1943).

Vietinghoff-Scheel (fē'-tēn-gof shāl), Boris Alexandrovitch, Baron, Russian composer; b. in Latvia, 1829; d. St. Petersburg, Sept. 25, 1901. He was a student of Henselt and Dargomyzhsky in St. Petersburg. Three of his operas were produced in St. Petersburg: Mazeppa (May 17, 1859), Tamara (May 2, 1886), and Don Juan de Tenorio (Nov. 2, 1888); 2 other operas, Mary Stuart and Heliodora, were not produced. He also wrote a Fantastic Overture (1859); Liszt commented with interest on the use of the whole-tone scale in the finale; see Letters of Franz Liszt, London, 1894; vol. 1). Vietinghoff published a book of memoirs, World Celebrities (St. Petersburg, 1899).

Vieuille, Felix, French bass singer; b. Saugeon, Oct. 15, 1872; d. there, Feb. 28, 1953. He was a member of the Opéra-Comique from 1898; created the role of Arkel at the première of Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande (1902).

Vieuxtemps (vyō-tahn'), Henri, celebrated Belgian violinist and composer; b.

Verviers, Feb. 17, 1820; d. Mustapha, Algiers, June 6, 1881. His first teacher was his father, a piano tuner, who soon turned him over to Lecloux, with whom he made a concert tour at the age of 8. He then continued his studies with Bériot in Brussels (1829-30); took harmony lessons from Sechter in Vienna (1833) and Reicha in Paris (1835). In 1834 he visited London, where he appeared with the Philharmonic (June 2, 1834). In 1837 he revisited Vienna; in 1838-39 gave concerts in Russia. During his constant travels, he composed violin concertos and other violin works which became part of the standard repertory, and which he performed in Europe to the greatest acclaim. He made his first American tour in 1844-45. In 1846 he was engaged as prof. at the St. Petersburg Cons., and remained in Russia for 5 seasons; his influence on Russian concert life and violin composition was considerable. In 1853 he recommenced his concert tours in Europe; paid 2 more visits to America, in 1857 (with Thalberg) and in 1870 (with Christine Nilsson). He was prof. of violin playing at the Brussels Cons. (1871-73); a stroke of paralysis, affecting his left side, forced him to end all concert activities, but he continued to teach privately. He went to Algiers for rest, and died there; one of his most prominent pupils, Jenő Hubay, was with him at his death. In 1844, Vieuxtemps married the pianist Josephine Eder (b. Vienna, Dec. 15, 1815; d. Celle-St. Cloud, June 29, 1868).—With Bériot, Vieuxtemps stood at the head of the modern French school of violin playing; contemporary accounts speak of the extraordinary precision of his technique and of his perfect ability to sustain a flowing melody; the expression 'le roi de violon' was often applied to him in the press. Besides his 7 violin concertos (the last one being posthumous), he wrote for violin and orch.: Fantaisie-Caprice, Souvenirs de Russie, Fantasia appassionata, Ballade et polonaise, and Old England, a caprice on English airs of the 16th and 17th centuries. For violin and piano he composed Hommage à Paganini; Grosse Fantasie über slavische Volksmelodien; Andante und Rondo; Suite in B minor; Marche funèbre; etc.; numerous brilliant transcriptions of operatic airs. Also wrote 3 cadenzas to Beethoven's violin concerto; a sonata for viola (or cello) and piano. —Cf. L. Escudier, Mes Souvenirs: Les Virtuoses (Paris, 1868); M. Kufferath, Henri Vieuxtemps (Brussels, 1882); J. T. Radoux, Vieuxtemps, sa vie, ses œuvres (Liège, 1891); P. Bergmans, Henri Vieuxtemps (Turnhout, 1920).

Viganò, Salvatore, Italian composer and choreographer; b. Naples, March 25, 1769; d. Milan, Aug. 10, 1821. He was the son and pupil of a dancer; studied music with Luigi Boccherini, who was his uncle; began his career as dancer at Rome in 1786 and also produced there an opera buffa, La Vedova scoperta; then went to Madrid, where he married the celebrated ballerina María Medina; in 1790 returned to Italy; in 1793 was at Vienna; then made a tour of the principal European cities. He is remembered chiefly because Beethoven wrote the music for Viganò's 'heroic ballet' Die Geschöpfe des Prometheus (Vienna, March 28, 1801), in which Viganò danced the leading male role. —Cf. C. Ritorni, Commentarii della vita e delle opere coreodrammatiche di Salvatore Viganò (Milan, 1838); H. Prunières, Salvatore Viganò, in 'Revue Musicale' (1921); also Thayer's Life of Beethoven.

Vila, Pedro Alberto, Spanish composer; b. 1517; d. Barcelona, Nov. 16, 1582. He was organist and canon of the Cathedral at Barcelona; was one of the few Spanish composers who cultivated the madrigal; publ. Odarum quas vulgo Madrigales appellamus . . . (Barcelona, 1561) with texts in Spanish, Catalan, Italian, and French; some of his organ works are found in the tablature book of Venegas de Henestrosa (q. v.). His nephew, Luis Ferrán Vila, succeeded him as organist at the Barcelona Cathedral. —Cf. F. Pedrell, Catálogo de la Biblioteca Musical de la Diputación de Barcelona (1908-09); H. Anglès, Orgelmusik der Schola Hispanica vom XV.-XVII. Jahrhundert, in the 'Peter Wagner-Festschrift' (Leipzig, 1926; pp. 11-26); S. Kastner, Contribución al estudio de la música española y portuguesa (Lisbon, 1941).

Villback, Renaud de, French organist and composer; b. Montpellier, June 3, 1829; d. Paris, March 19, 1884. He studied piano, organ, and composition at the Paris Cons. under Lemoine and Halévy, winning the Grand Prix de Rome at the age of 15. In 1856, became organist at St.-Eugène, Paris. He wrote 2 operas, Au clair de lune (1857) and Almanzor (1858); publ. a method for piano, and numerous well-written piano pieces (3 Morceaux de salon, Les Amazones, etc.) besides transcriptions from operas.

Vilboa (Villebois), Konstantin Petrovitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, May 29, 1817; d. Warsaw, July 12, 1882. He studied in a military school, and was sent by the government to collect folksongs in the country; also directed various choirs in military establishments. In 1876 he went to Warsaw as a functionary in the ministry of war, and remained there until his death. His opera Natasha, or the Volga Brigands was produced in Moscow on Nov. 12, 1861, and in St. Petersburg in 1863, but was not retained in the repertory, although some of its choruses were sung separately by various choral societies in Russia. Two other operas, Taras Bulba (after Gogol) and Tziganka (The Gypsy), remained unperformed. Vilboa made piano arrangements of Glinka's operas.

Vilhar (vêl'-hahr), Franz, Croatian composer; b. Senožec, Jan. 5, 1852; d. Zagreb, March 4, 1928. He studied music with Skuherský in Prague; after serving as organist in various churches, he settled in Zagreb in 1891, as choirmaster at St. Mark's. He composed a Croatian opera, Smiljana (Zagreb, Jan. 31, 1897), Croatian Dances, for orch., and a number of choruses that were popular for a time.

Villa (vêya), Ricardo, Spanish composer and conductor; b. Madrid, Oct. 23, 1873; d. there, April 10, 1935. He studied at the Cons. of Madrid, and conducted the municipal band there, which he organized in 1909; wrote the operas El Cristo de la Vega and Raimundo Lulio; and a number of pieces for band in the Spanish vein: La Visión de Fray Martín, Impresiones sinfónicas, Cantos regionales asturianos; Rapsodia asturiana, for violin and orch. (played by Sarasate); Fantasia española for piano and orch.; also light music. —Cf. M. F. Fernández Núñez, La Vida de los músicos españoles (Madrid, 1925).

Villalba Muñoz, Alberto, Spanish composer; b. Valladolid, Nov. 10, 1879. At the age of 15 he entered the Augustinian Order; went to Lima, Peru, in 1906, and became interested in the study of Inca music; after a few years he left the Order and married his piano pupil Rosa Munar; subsequently went to Argentina, where he established with his wife the Cons. Clementi in Jujuy. His symph. poem Los Andes (1921-23) is based on Inca themes; he also wrote several other works derived from Inca sources; composed a piano sonata subtitled Libertas, and a number of other piano pieces. His brothers, Enrique (b. Valladolid, Feb. 10, 1878), Marcelino (1890-1925), and Padre Luis Villalba Muñoz (q.v.), were also musicians.

Villalba Muñoz, Padre Luis, Spanish musicologist and composer; b. Valladolid, Sept. 22, 1873; d. Madrid, Jan. 9, 1921. He entered the Augustinian Order at the age of 14; was choromaster at the monastery of the Escorial (1898-1917); also taught history and other subjects; later lived in Madrid; edited the review 'La Ciudad de Dios,' to which he contributed valuable essays on Spanish music; also edited the 'Biblioteca Sacro-Musical.' He publ. a valuable 'Antología de organistas clásicos españoles,' 10 'Canciones españolas de los siglos XV y XVI'; wrote monographs on Pedrell, Granados, and Usandizaga, and Ultimos músicos españoles del siglo XIX (Madrid, 1914); composed organ works; sacred choruses; chamber music.

Villa-Lobos, Heitor, foremost Brazilian composer; b. Rio de Janeiro, March 5, 1887. He studied music with his father, a writer and amateur cello player; after his father's death in 1899, he earned a living by playing the cello in cafés and restaurants. In 1905 he traveled in the northern states of Brazil, collecting popular songs; in 1907 he entered the National Institute of Music, and took lessons with Frederico Nascimento, Agnelo França, and Francisco Braga. In 1912 he undertook his fourth and longest expedition into the interior of Brazil, in the company of a musician named Donizetti; gathered a rich collection of Brazilian songs. Returning to Rio de Janeiro after 3 years of travel, he presented a concert of music there, on Nov. 13, 1915, creating a sensation by the exuberance of his melodies and rhythms and the radical character of his idiom. He met the pianist Artur Schnabel, who became his ardent admirer, and subsequently performed his music at concerts in Europe and America, including the transcendently difficult Rudepoema (dedicated to Rubinstein). In 1923 Villa-Lobos sailed for France on a stipend given by the Brazilian government; made short visits to London, Vienna, Berlin, Lisbon, but resided mainly in Paris. In 1930 he was engaged as director of musical education in S. Paulo, Brazil, and in 1932 assumed the important post of superintendent of musical and artistic education in Rio de Janeiro. He introduced bold innovations into the program of musical education, putting the main emphasis on the cultivation of Brazilian songs and dances in public schools; compiled a Guia pratico containing choral arrangements of Brazilian folk songs; organized 'orpheonic concentrations'—huge choruses of school children, which he conducted; in 1942 established the National Cons. of Orpheonic Song; devised a chironomic method of solfeggio. In 1944 he made his 1st tour of the U. S., conducting his works in Los Angeles, Boston, and New York. In 1945 he established in Rio de Janeiro a Brazilian Academy of Music; in 1947 he made his 2nd visit to the U. S.; in 1949 he was in Europe; subsequently continued to travel widely, while retaining Rio de Janeiro as his permanent home.—Villa-Lobos is one of the most original composers of the 20th century. His lack of formal academic training, far from hampering his development, compelled him to create a technique all his own, curiously eclectic, and yet admirably suited to his musical ideas. An ardent patriot, he resolved from his earliest steps in composition to use Brazilian song materials as the exclusive source of thematic inspiration. Occasionally he uses actual quotations from folksongs; much more often he writes melodies in an authentic Brazilian style, but of his own invention. In his desire to relate Brazilian folk resources to universal values, he has written a series of unique works, Bachianas Brasileiras, in which Brazilian melorhythms are treated with Bachian counterpoint. A purely Brazilian form, which Villa-Lobos has successfully cultivated, is the chôros, a popular dance marked by incisive rhythm and songful ballad-like melody. Villa-Lobos expanded the chôros to embrace a wide variety of forms, from an instrumental solo to a large orchestral work with chorus. An experimenter by nature, Villa-Lobos has devised a graphic method of composition, using as material geometrical contours of drawings and photographs; composed The New York Skyline for the N. Y. World's Fair from a photograph (1940). An exceptionally prolific composer, he has written operas, ballets, symphonies, chamber music, choruses, piano pieces, songs; the total number of his individual compositions exceeds 2,000. —Works: Operas: Izaht (1914; revised, 1932; 1st performance, in concert form, Rio de Janeiro, April 6, 1940), Zôé (1919), Malazarte (1921), Magdalena, light opera (Los Angeles, July 26, 1948); ballets: Uirapurú (Buenos Aires, May 25, 1935) and Dança da terra (Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 7, 1943); oratorio, Vida-pura (Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 28, 1934). For orch.: 12 symphonies: No. 1, Imprevisto (Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 30, 1920), No. 2, Ascensão (1917), No. 3, Guerra (Rio de Janeiro, July 30, 1919), No. 4, Vitória (1920), No. 5, Paz (1921); No. 6, Montanhas do Brasil (1944), No. 7, América (1945), No. 8 (1950; Philadelphia, Jan.

VILLA-LOBOS

14, 1955), No. 9 (1952), No. 10, with chorus (1954), No. 11 (Boston, March 2, 1956, composer conducting), No. 12 (Inter-American Music Festival, Washington, D. C., April 20, 1958). Chôros: No. 1, for guitar (1920), No. 2, for flute and clarinet (1921), No. 3, for male chorus and 7 wind instruments (1925), No. 4, for 3 horns and trombone (1926), No. 5, Alma Brasileira, for piano solo (1926), No. 6, for orch. (1926); Rio de Janeiro, July 15, 1942), No. 7, for flute, oboe, clarinet, saxophone, bassoon, violin, and cello (1924), No. 8, for large orch. and 2 pianos (Paris, Oct. 24, 1927), No. 9, for orch. (1929; Rio de Janeiro, July 15, 1942, composer conducting), No. 10, Rasga o Coração, for chorus and orch. (Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 15, 1926; also performed in Paris as a ballet, under the title Jurupary); No. 11, for piano and orch. (Rio de Janeiro, July 15, 1942), No. 12 for orch. (Boston, Feb. 23, 1945, composer conducting), No. 13, for 2 orchestras and band (1929), No. 14, for orch., band, and chorus (1928); also a supernumerary Chôros bis for violin and cello (1928). Bachianas Brasileiras: No. 1, for 8 cellos (Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 22, 1932, composer conducting), No. 2, for 8 cellos and soprano (1933), No. 3, for piano and orch. (1934), No. 4, for orch. (N. Y., June 6, 1942), No. 5, for voice and 8 cellos (Rio de Janeiro, March 25, 1939), No. 6, for flute and bassoon (1938), No. 7, for orch. (Rio de Janeiro, March 13, 1944), No. 8, for orch. (Rome, Aug. 6, 1947). Other orchestral works: Danças Africanas (1914; Paris, April 5, 1928), Amazonas (1917; Paris, May 30, 1929), Fantasy of Mixed Movements, for violin and orch. (Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 15, 1922), Suite Suggestiva for orch. and voice (1929), Momo Precoco (Paris, Feb. 23, 1930), Caixinha de Boas Festas (Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 8, 1932), Descobrimento do Brasil (4 suites; 1937), The New York Skyline (1940), Rudepoema (orchestral version of the piano work of that name; Rio de Janeiro, July 15, 1942, composer conducting), Madonna, tone poem (Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 8, 1946, composer conducting), piano concerto (Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 11, 1946), Mandú-Garará, symph. poem with chorus (N. Y., Jan. 23, 1948), guitar concerto (1952), Odyssey of a Race, symph. poem written for Israel (Mount Carmel Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Haifa, May 30, 1954), 2 works commissioned by the Louisville Orch.: Erosion, or The Origin of the Amazon River (Louisville, Nov. 7, 1951) and Dawn in a Tropical Forest (Louisville, Jan.

23, 1954), harp concerto (Philadelphia, Jan. 14, 1955), Grand Concerto, for cello and orch. (1915), cello concerto No. 2 (N. Y., Feb. 5, 1955). Chamber music: 15 string quartets (1915, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1931, 1938, 1942, 1944, 1945, 1946, 1948, 1950, 1952, 1955, 1958), quartet for harp, celesta, flute, and saxophone, with female voices (1921), piano quartet (1912), piano quintet (1916), woodwind quintet (1928), Mystic Sextet, for flute, clarinet, saxophone, celesta, harp, and guitar (1917), nonet (1923), 3 piano trios (1911, 1916, 1918), trio for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1921), trio for violin, viola, and cello (1945), 4 Sonatas-Fantasias for violin and piano (1912, 1914, 1915, 1918), 2 cello sonatas (1915, 1916). For chorus: Crianças (1908), Na Bahia tem (1925), Canção da Terra (1925), As Costureiras (1932), etc. Songs: Confidência (1908), Noite de Luar (1912), Mal Secreto (1913), Fleur fanée (1913), Il Nome di Maria (1915), Sertão no Estio (1919), Canções típicas brasileiras (10 numbers; 1919), Historiettes (6 numbers; 1920), Epigrammes ironiques et sentimentales (8 numbers; 1921), Suite for voice and violin (1923), Poème de l'Enfant et de sa Mère, for voice, flute, clarinet, and cello (1923), Serestas (suite of 14 numbers; one of his best song cycles; 1925), 3 Poemas indígenas (1926), Modinhas e Canções (2 albums, 1933, 1943). For piano: Valsa Romantica (1908), Brinquedo de Roda (6 pieces; 1912), Primeira Suite Infantil (1912), Segunda Suite Infantil (1913), Danças Africanas (1915), Prole do Bebê, suite No. 1 (8 pieces, including the popular Polichinello; 1918), Fábulas Características (3 pieces; 1914-18), Historia da Carochinha (4 pieces; 1919), Carnaval das Crianças Brasileiras (8 pieces; 1919), Lenda do Caboclo (1920), Dança Infernal (1920), Prole do Bebê, suite No. 2 (9 pieces; 1921), Sul América (1925), Cirandinhas (12 pieces; 1925), Rudepoema (1921-26), Cirandas (16 pieces; 1926), Alma Brasileira (chôros No. 5; 1926), Prole do Bebê, suite No. 3 (9 pieces; 1926), Saudades das Selvas Brasileiras (1927), Francette et Piá (9 pieces; 1929), Lembrança do Sertão (1930), Caixinha de Música Quebrada (1931), Ciclo Brasileiro (4 pieces; 1936), As Três Marias (1939; very popular), Poema Singelo (1942). —Publ. Guia pratico, containing arrangements of European works and Brazilian folksongs; also various instructive pamphlets. —Cf. F. C. Lange, Villa-Lobos, Pedagogico Criador, in the 'Boletín Latino-Americano de Música' (Montevideo, 1935; p. 189 ff.); Burle Marx, Brazilian Portrait, in 'Modern Music' (Oct.-Nov., 1939); special issue of 'Musica Viva' (Rio de Janeiro, 1941); N. Slonimsky, Musica of Latin America (N. Y., 1945; pp. 142-50); O. L. Fernandez, A Contribuição Harmonica de Villa-Lobos para a Música Brasileira, in the 'Boletín Latino-Americano de Música' (Rio de Janeiro, 1946, pp. 183-300); O. Meyer-Serra, Música y Músicos de Latino-América (Mexico, 1947; vol. 2, pp. 1059-85); L. M. Peppercorn, The History of Villa-Lobos' Birth-Date, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (July-Aug., 1948); Vasco Mariz, Heitor Villa-Lobos (full-fledged biography; contains a detailed list of works; Rio de Janeiro, 1948); C. M. de Paula Barros, O Romance de Villa-Lobos (Rio de Janeiro, 1951).

Villanis, Luigi Alberto, Italian writer on music; b. San Mauro, near Turin, June 20, 1863; d. Pesaro, Sept. 27, 1906. After taking the degree of LL.D. at Turin Univ. (1887), he gave up law for music; was appointed prof. of music history at Turin Univ. (1890); in 1905 received a similar post at the Liceo Musicale Rossini in Pesaro; contributed articles to various journals, notably to the 'Gazzetta Musicale' of Milan. —Publ. Il Contenuto nella musica (1891); Il Leitmotiv nella musica moderna (1891); Estetica del libretto nella musica (1892); L'Estetica e la psiche moderna nella musica contemporanea (1895); Come si sente e come si dovrebbe sentire la musica (1896); L'Arte del clavicembalo (1901); Lo Spirito moderno nella musica (1902); Un Compositore ignoto alla corte dei duchi di Savoia (1903); Saggio di psicologia musicale (1904); La Psicologia della campagna (1905); Piccola guida alla bibliografia musicale (1906); L'Arte del pianoforte in Italia (da Clementi a Sgambati) (1907).

Villar (vē-yahr'), Rogelio, Spanish composer and music critic; b. León, Nov. 13, 1875; d. Madrid, Nov. 4, 1937. He studied at the Madrid Cons. and later taught ensemble there; was editor of the 'Revista Musical Hispano-Americana' (ceased publ. in 1917). He composed some symph. pieces, 2 string quartets, violin sonatas, piano sonatas, other piano works. Author of Músicos españoles, 2 series (biographical sketches of contemporary Spanish musicians); La Armonía en la música contemporánea (Madrid, 1927); Soliloquios de un músico español (Madrid, 1928), etc.

Villoing (vēl-wăn'), Alexander Ivanovitch, notable Russian pianist; b. Moscow, March 12, 1804; d. there, Sept. 2, 1878. His name is known to posterity mainly because he was the piano teacher of Anton and Nicholas Rubinstein. He traveled with them in Europe, when they gave concerts as child prodigies. His École pratique du piano embodies his system of instruction. He composed a piano concerto and various salon pieces.

Villoteau (vē-loh-toh'), Guillaume-André, French music scholar; b. Bellême, Orne, Sept. 6, 1759; d. Tours, April 23, 1839. He was a chorister at the Cathedral of Le Mans, and later at Notre-Dame in Paris. Having studied philosophy at the Sorbonne, he was qualified for election as a member of the scientific commission that accompanied Napoleon to Egypt, and made a special study of Oriental music. He contributed 4 essays to the 20-vol. edition, 'La Description de l'Égypte' (Paris, 1809-26), entitled Mémoire sur la musique de l'antique Égypte; Dissertation sur les diverses espèces d'instruments de musique que l'on remarque parmi les sculptures qui décorent les antiques monuments de l'Égypte; De l'état actuel de l'art musical en Égypte; and Description historique, technique et littéraire des instruments de musique des Orientaux; also publ. Mémoire sur la possibilité et l'utilité d'une théorie exacte des principes naturels de la musique (1807), being an introduction to his Recherches sur l'analogie de la musique avec les arts qui ont pour objet l'imitation du langage (1807; 2 vols.).

Viña (Manteola), Facundo de la, Spanish composer; b. Gijón, Feb. 22, 1876; d. Madrid, Nov. 19, 1952. He studied at the Madrid Cons. and later in Paris; his music reflects the character of Asturian regional folklore. —Works: operas: Almas muertas, La Princesa flor de roble, La Espigadora (Barcelona, 1927); symph. poems: Canto de trilla, Sierra de Grados, Covadonga, Por tierras de Castilla. —Cf. H. Collet, L'Essor de la musique espagnole au XX<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1929).

Vincent (văn-sähn'), Alexandre-Joseph-Hydulphe, French music theorist; b. Hesdin, Pas-de-Calais, Nov. 20, 1797; d. Paris, Nov. 26, 1868. Prof. of mathematics at the Collège St.-Louis, Paris; member of the Académie; custodian of the library of learned societies at the Ministry of Public Instruction. An investigator of ancient Greek and Latin music, he advanced the idea that the Greeks used chords (harmony); he likewise sought to revive the employment of the intervals smaller than a half tone that were described in Greek theory. On these subjects he publ. a great number of essays, some of which were reprinted in pamphlet form. Especially important is his Notice sur divers manuscrits grecs relatifs à la musique (1847).

VINCENT — VINCI

Vincent, Charles John, English organist; b. Houghton-le-Spring, Durham, Sept. 19, 1852; d. Monte Carlo, Feb. 28, 1934. He was a chorister at the Cathedral of Durham; studied at the Leipzig Cons. (1876-78); then was church organist in England; Mus. Bac., Oxford, 1878; Mus. Doc., 1885. He was co-editor of the 'Organist and Choirmaster.' He publ. a number of widely used textbooks: A Year's Study at the Piano, First Principles of Music, Choral Instructor for Treble Voices, etc.; composed an oratorio, Ruth; several church cantatas; a choral fugue in 8 parts, Honour and Praise to Music; operettas; vocal duets; more than 100 songs; chamber music; organ pieces.

Vincent, Heinrich Joseph (real name, Winzenhörlein), German singer, composer, and theorist; b. Teilheim, near Würzburg, Feb. 23, 1819; d. Vienna, May 19, 1901. He studied law, and also sang tenor parts in theaters in Vienna (1847), Halle, and Würzburg; eventually settled in Vienna as a singing teacher. He composed 2 operas, Die Bettlerin (Halle, 1864) and König Murat (Würzburg, 1870); also operettas and popular songs. As a writer, he followed the tenets of the 'Chroma' Society in championing the harmonic system based on the functional equality of the 12 notes of the chromatic scale; publ. the studies Kein Generalbass mehr (1860), Die Einheit in der Tonwelt (1862), Die Neuklavatur (1874), Die Zwölfszahl in der Tonwelt (1885), Ist unsere Harmonielehre wirklich eine Theorie? (1894), Eine neue Tonschrift (1900), and articles on the chromatic keyboard and notation.

Vincent, Henry Bethuel, American organist and composer; b. Denver, Dec. 28, 1872; d. Erie, Pa., Jan. 7, 1941. He studied organ with W. H. Sherwood in Oberlin and Widor in Paris; settled in Erie as organist and choirmaster. He wrote an oratorio, The Prodigal Son (Erie, 1901), an opera, Esperanza (Washington, 1906), an operetta, Indian Days; anthems; organ pieces; songs including a cycle, The Garden of Kama.

Vincent, John, American composer and teacher; b. Birmingham, Ala., May 17, 1902. He studied at the New England Cons.

(1922-27); at the George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn. (B.A. and M.A., 1933); Harvard Univ., with Piston (1933-35); École Normale de Musique, Paris (1935-37); also privately with Nadia Boulanger; Ph.D. at Cornell Univ. (1942). He taught in El Paso, Texas, public schools (1927-30); George Peabody College (1930-33); Western Kentucky Teachers College (1937-46). In 1946 he was appointed to the faculty of the music dept. at the Univ. of California, Los Angeles. —Works: Symph. in D (Louisville, Feb. 5, 1955); ballet, Three Jacks; Songs of the Chattahoochee, symph. poem; Miracle of the Cherry Tree, for voice and orch.; I Wonder as I Wander, for baritone, chorus, and orch.; 2 string quartets; Prelude, Canon and Fugue, for flute, oboe, and bassoon; choruses; songs. He is the author of the valuable book, The Diatonic Modes in Modern Music (Los Angeles, 1951).

Vinci (vin'-chē), Leonardo, Italian composer; b. Strongoli, 1690; d. Naples, May 27, 1730. He studied at the Cons. dei Poveri di Gesù Cristo in Naples, where he was a pupil of Gactano Greco. In 1725 he received the post of vice-maestro at the Royal Chapel in Naples, and remained there until his death 5 years later. He produced about 40 operas for various Italian cities (25 for Naples, 11 for Rome), of which the most important are: Silla Dittatore (Naples, Oct. 1, 1723); Asianatte (Naples, Dec. 2, 1725); La Caduta dei Decemviri (Naples, Oct. 1, 1727); Artaserse (libretto by Metastasio; Rome, Feb. 4, 1730). —Cf. E. J. Dent, Notes on Leonardo Vinci in the 'Mus. Antiquary' (July, 1913); A. Della Corte, L'Opera comica italiana nel 1700, vol. I (Bari, 1923); A. Cametti, Leonardo Vinci e i suoi drammi in musica al Teatro delle Dame, in 'Musica d'oggi' (Oct., 1924); U. Prota-Giurleo, Nicola Logroscino (Naples, 1927; appendix, La Morte di Vinci, pp. 61-63); K. Geiringer, Ein Geburtstagskantate von F. Metastasio und L. Vinci, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 9, 1926); G. Silvestri Silva, Illustri musici calabresi: Leonardo Vinci (Genoa, 1935).

Vinci, Pietro, Italian composer; b. Nicosia, Sicily, 1535; d. there, 1584. He was maestro di cappella at Santa Maria Maggiore, Bergamo (1568-80); returned to Nicosia in 1580. He publ. 10 books of madrigals, motets, Sonetti spirituali, etc. —Cf. F. Mompellio, Pietro Vinci, madrigalista siciliano (Milan, 1937).

Viñes (vē-nēs'), Ricardo, Spanish pianist; b. Lérida, Feb. 5, 1875; d. Barcelona, April 29, 1943. He studied in Barcelona with Juan Pujol, and with Godard at the Paris Cons., winning the 1st prize for piano in 1894. In 1895 he gave his first concert in Paris, and established himself in later years as an ardent propagandist of new French and Spanish music; he possessed particular affinity with the Impressionists, and performed their works in a colorful and imaginative manner. He gave concerts in London, Berlin, and other musical centers, but lived most of his life in Paris; contributed articles on Spanish music to publications in France and Spain.

Vinogradsky, Alexander Nikolayevitch, Russian conductor; b. Kiev, Aug. 3, 1854; d. there, Oct. 17, 1912. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons.; in 1888 became conductor of the symph. concerts of the Imperial Russian Music Society in Kiev; also conducted in Paris, Vienna, and Berlin. He wrote 2 symphonies; a symph. fantasy, En Bourgogne; a symph. poem, La Nonne; a number of minor pieces.

Viola, Alfonso della, Italian composer; b. Ferrara, 1508; d. there, 1570; was maestro di cappella to Duke Ercole II d'Este at Ferrara. He is noteworthy as an early composer of pastorals and incidental music for the court of Ferrara: L'Orbecche (1541), Il Sacrificio (1554), Lo Sfortunato (1557), and Aretusa (1563), all in madrigal style, the dialogue sung by a chorus. Publ. 2 books of madrigals a 4 (1539, 1540). He died after 1567.

Viola, Francesco, Italian 16th-century madrigalist, pupil of Adrian Willaert; was for some time in the service of Alfonso d'Este, Duke of Ferrara, whom he accompanied to Venice in 1562; publ. a book of madrigals a 4 at Venice in 1550; other madrigals in various collections; also edited the collection 'Musica nova,' containing motets and madrigals by Willaert.

Viole, Rudolf, German pianist and composer; b. Schochwitz, Mansfeld, May 10, 1825; d. Berlin, Dec. 7, 1867. He was a pupil of Liszt, who recommended his compositions and edited his 100 études; Viole wrote mostly for piano, including 11 sonatas, a Caprice heroïque, a ballade, a polonaise, etc.

Viotta, Henri (Henricus Anastasius), Dutch conductor and music scholar; son of Johannes Josephus Viotta; b. Amsterdam, July 16, 1848; d. Montreux, Feb. 17, 1933. He studied with his father and with R. Hol in Amsterdam; was a student of jurisprudence at the Univ. of Leyden; Dr. juris (1877) with the dissertation Het Auteursrecht van den Componist, but gave up legal practice; became conductor of various musical groups in Amsterdam, including the Wagner Society; edited the musical periodical 'Maandblad voor Muziek' (1888-94). In 1896 he was appointed director of the Cons. at The Hague, retaining this position until 1917; founded the Residentie Orch. there (1903); and conducted it for a number of seasons, retiring in 1917. He publ. a valuable Lexicon der Toonkunst (3 vols., 1881-85); Richard Wagner (1883); Onze hedendaagsche Toonkunstenaars (1893-96); and Handboek der Muziekgeschiedenis (1916). In 1920 he went to live in Switzerland.

Viotta, Johannes Josephus, Dutch composer; b. Amsterdam, Jan. 14, 1814; d. there, Feb. 6, 1859. He was of Italian descent; studied medicine; music was his avocation. He wrote mainly for the voice, and some of his songs in the popular vein (De zilveren vloot, Een scheepje in de haven lag, etc.) became exceedingly well known. In Holland he played a very important role, especially in spreading the cult of Mendelssohn and other German composers.

Viotti, Giovanni Battista, famous Italian violinist and composer; b. Fontanetto da Po, May 12, 1755; d. London, March 3, 1824. His father, a blacksmith, was an amateur musician; taught him music, and bought a small violin for him to practice on. At the age of 13 he was sent to Turin, where he gained the favor of Alfonso del Pozzo, Prince della Cisterna, who paid for his lessons with Pugnani. Viotti soon acquired a virtuoso technique, and also began to compose violin music. In 1780 he made a grand tour of Germany, Poland, and Russia with Pugnani, and was welcomed at the court of Catherine the Great. On March 15, 1782, he made his first appearance in Paris at the Concert Spirituel. He became a court musician to Marie Antoinette, and in 1788 was appointed manager of the Théâtre de Monsieur, jointly with the Queen's hairdresser Léonard; he reorganized the enterprise, and invited famous singers to participate in operatic productions. He was also successful as a teacher; among his pupils were Baillot and Rodé. He was intimate with Cherubini, and lodged with him in 1785; often played in private, but shunned public appearances, being satisfied with the generous emolument from the court. He remained in Paris for 3 years after the revolution, but in 1792, when the situation became extremely dangerous for friends of the Queen, he went to London, where he was employed as conductor of Italian operas; also was soloist in his own concertos at the celebrated Salomon concerts (1794-95). In 1798 he was obliged to leave England on suspicion of political intrigue; lived for some years at Schönfeld, near Hamburg, devoting himself to composition. In 1801 he returned to London and engaged in a wine business, but sustained financial losses. After the restoration of the French monarchy, he returned to Paris; was appointed director of the Italian Opera (1819-22), but suffered repeated reverses, and in 1822 returned to London, broken in spirit and health, and heavily in debt. He died 2 years later. — Viotti's role in the history of instrumental music, both in performance and composition, was very important. He elevated performing standards from mere entertainment to artistic presentation, and may be regarded as one of the chief creators of modern violin playing. He was the first to write violin concertos in a consciously formulated sonata form, with the solo part and the orchestral accompaniment utilizing the full resources of instrumental sonority more abundantly than ever before in violin concertos. He publ. 29 violin concertos (of which No. 22, in A minor, is a great favorite); 10 piano concertos (some of which are transcriptions of violin concertos); 2 Symphonies concertantes, for 2 violins, strings, oboes, and horns; 21 string quartets; 36 string trios; 54 duets for 2 violins; 6 serenades for 2 violins; several duos for 2 cellos; 3 Diversissements for violin unaccompanied; 12 sonatas for violin and piano; 9 piano sonatas. His song known as 'La Polacca de Viotti' (used in Paisiello's La Serva padrona, 1794) acquired great popularity. — Bibliography: A. M. d'Eymar, Anecdotes sur Viotti, précédées de quelques réflexions sur l'expression en musique (Paris, 1792); F. Fayolle, Notices sur Corelli . . . et Viotti (Paris, 1810); P. M. Baillot, Notice sur J. B. Viotti (Paris, 1825); E. F. Miel, Notice historique sur J. B. Viotti (Paris, 1827); A. Pougin, Viotti et l'école moderne de violon (Paris, 1888); H. de Curzon, Quelques souvenirs de Viotti, in the 'Ménestrel' (April, 1924); L. de La Laurencie, Les Débuts de Viotti comme directeur de l'Opéra en 1819, in 'Revue de musicologie' (Aug., 1924); L. de La Laurencie, L'École française de violon de Lully à Viotti (Paris, 1922-25); M. Pincherle, Les Violonistes compositeurs et virtuoses (Paris, 1922); W. H. Rieh, Viotti und das Geigenduett, in Musikalische Charakterköpfe (vol. II); A. Moser, Geschichte des Violinspiels, p. 387 ff. (Berlin, 1923); A. Della Corte, L'Interpretazione musicale e gli interpreti (Turin, 1951); R. Giazotto, G. B. Viotti (Milan, 1956). For the rectification of Viotti's birth date (heretofore given as May 23, 1753), see 'Stampa di Torino' of Sept. 29, 1935, which publ. for the first time the text of his birth certificate; an infant brother of Viotti was born in 1753; their Christian names were identical, which led to confusion; the bicentennial of Viotti was widely celebrated in the wrong year (1953).

Virdung (fēr'döōng), Sebastian, noted German theorist, a native of Amberg (Oberpfalz); was at first a priest in Eichstätt, and from 1500 a member of the court chapel in Heidelberg; wrote a work of importance for the history of musical instruments: Musica getutscht und ausgezogen durch Sebastianum Virdung, Priesters von Amberg, und alles Gesang ausz den Noten in die Tabulaturen diser benannten dryer Instrumenten, der Orgeln, der Lauten und der Flöten transferieren zu lernen kurtzlich gemacht (Basel, 1511; facsimile reprint in Eitner's 'Publikationen älterer praktischer und theoretischer Musikwerke,' vol. 11, 1882; also by L. Schrade, Kassel, 1931). Virdung's method was violently attacked by Arnolt Schlick in his Tabulatur etlicher Lobgesänge (1512). Four of Virdung's songs are in Schöffer's 'Teutsche Lieder mit 4 Stimmen' (1513). — Cf. B. A. Wallner, Sebastian Virdung von Amberg, in the 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (1911); H. H. Lenneberg, The Critic Criticized: Sebastian Virdung and his Controversy with Arnold Schlick, in the 'Journal of the American Musicological Society' (Spring, 1957). See also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954, pp. 656-57).

Virovaj, Robert, violinist; b. Daruvar, Yugoslavia, March 10, 1921. He studied with Peter Stojanovits at the Belgrade Cons.; then continued his studies with Hubay at the Budapest Cons.; in 1937 he won the international violin contest in Vienna, and was launched on an auspicious career; made his American début on Nov. 3, 1938, as soloist with the N. Y. Philharmonic; thereafter toured the U. S. and Europe.

Viscarra Monje, Humberto, Bolivian composer; b. Sorata, March 30, 1898. He studied at the National Cons., La Paz, and in Italy and France (1927-29); then taught at the Cons. of La Paz. In 1940 he was appointed director of the Academia de Bellas Artes in Cochabamba. He publ. piano pieces and songs on native Bolivian themes.

Visée, Robert de, French guitar player, lutenist, and composer; b. c. 1650; d. c. 1725. He was court musician from about 1686 to 1721; publ. 2 books of guitar pieces (1682; 1686) and Pièces de théorbe et de luth, mises en partition (1716).

Visetti, Alberto Antonio, Italian singing teacher; b. Salona, May 13, 1846; d. London, July 10, 1928. He studied at the Milan Cons.; first appeared as pianist; went to Paris, where he was appointed chamber musician to Empress Eugénie. After the fall of the empire in France, he settled in London, where he taught singing; also conducted the Bath Philharmonic Society (1878-90). He publ. a History of the Art of Singing and Verdi (1905); the score of his opera Les trois mousquetaires was lost during the siege of Paris (1871). He also wrote a cantata, The Desert and the Praise of Song; and a waltz-song for Adelina Patti, La Diva.

Vitali, Filippo, Italian composer; b. Florence, c. 1600; d. 1653. In 1631 he became a singer in the Pontifical Choir in Rome; also chamber virtuoso to Cardinal Barberini; in 1642 returned to Florence and succeeded Gagliano as maestro of the ducal chapel and of the Cathedral of S. Lorenzo; in 1648-49, maestro at Sta. Maria Maggiore in Bergamo. His 'favola in musica' L'Aretusa, performed on Feb. 8, 1620, at the home of Monsignor Corsini, is regarded as the first attempt at opera in Rome (publ. there in 1620). In 1622 he composed 6 intermedi for the comedy La Finta Mora by J. Cicognini, performed at the palace of Cardinal de' Medici in Florence (publ. there, 1623). Also publ. several books of madrigals, arias with instrumental accompaniment, psalms, motets, and hymns. Vitali was outstanding among early composers in the monodic style.

Vitali, Giovanni Battista, Italian composer; b. Cremona, c. 1644; d. Modena, Oct. 12, 1692. Pupil of M. Cazzati in Bologna; from about 1667 he played the 'viola da braccio' in the Church of S. Petronio there; from 1674 he was 2nd, and from 1684 1st, macstro di cappella at the ducal court of Modena. He was an important composer of instrumental music. Publ. Correnti e Balletti da camera for 2 violins and continuo (1666 and other eds.); Sonate a 2 violini col basso cont. per l'organo (1667, etc.); Balletti, Correnti e Sinfonie da camera a 4 stromenti (1667, etc.); Balletti, Correnti, etc., a violino e violone o spinetta, con il secondo violino a beneplacito (1668, etc.); Sonate da chiesa a 2, 3, 4 e 5 stromenti (1669); Salmi concertati da 2 a 5 voci con stromenti (1677); Sonate a 2 violini e basso cont.; Varie sonate alla francese ed all'italiana a 6 stromenti (1684); Balli in stile francese a 5 stromenti (1690); Sonate da camera a 3 stromenti (1692); etc.—18 pieces are in Torchi's 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. 7).

Vitalis, George, Greek composer and conductor; b. Athens, Jan. 9, 1895. He studied with Armani in Milan; conducted light opera in Athens (1923-36) and subsequently was conductor of the Athens Radio Orch. He came to the U. S. in 1945; was guest conductor of several American orchestras; settled in N. Y. —Works: the operas Perseus and Andromeda, The Return of the Gods, and Golfo (N. Y., Jan. 1, 1949, in concert form, composer conducting); Greek Fantasy, for orch. (Athens, Nov. 11, 1945; his best-known work; several performances in the U. S.). He also wrote many light orchestra pieces under the pseudonym Giorgio Valente.

Vitry (vê-trê'), Philippe de (Philippus de Vitriaco), churchman and musician; b. Vitry, Champagne, Oct. 31, 1291; d. Meaux, June 9, 1361. There are 6 towns in Champagne named Vitry, and it is not known in which of these Vitry was born; he was ordained a deacon early in life and from 1323 held several benefices; he was canon of Soissons and archbishop of Brie. He became a clerk of the royal household in Paris, and about 1346 was made counselor of the court of requests ('maître des requêtes'); from 1346-50 he was also in the service of Duke Jean of Normandy (heir to the throne), with whom he took part in the siege of Aiguillon (1346); when Duke Jean became king in 1350, he sent Vitry to Avignon on a mission to Pope Clement VI, who on Jan. 3, 1351 appointed him bishop of Meaux.—Vitry was known as a poet and a composer, but his enduring fame rests on his Ars Nova, a treatise expounding a new theory of mensural notation, particularly important for its development of the principle of binary rhythm; it also gives the most complete account of the various uses to which colored notes were put. Of the 4 treatises attributed to Vitry in Coussemaker's 'Scriptores' III, only the Ars Nova (also publ., with corrections, in 'Musica Disciplina,' 1956) is now considered authentic. Most of Vitry's works are lost; the extant pieces were publ. by L. Schrade in vol. I of his 'Polyphonic Music of the 14th Century' (Monaco, 1956). Separate pieces were brought out in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' vol. 40, by H. Besseler in his Studien zur Musik des Mittelalters in the 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (1925), etc. — Bibliography: Hugo Riemann, Geschichte der Musiktheorie im 9.-19. Jahrhundert (1898); Joh. Wolf, Geschichte der Mensuralnotation (1904); J. Combarieu, Histoire de la musique, vol. I (1913); A. Coville, Philippe de Vitry, Notes biographiques, in 'Romania' (Oct., 1933); G. Reese, Music in the Middle Ages (N. Y., 1940; p. 336 ff.) L. Schrade, Philippe de Vitry: Some New Discoveries, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1956); see also H. Besseler's article on 'Ars Nova' in vol. I of 'Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart.'

• Vittadini, Franco, Italian composer; b. Pavia, April 9, 1884; d. there, Nov. 30, 1948. He studied at the Milan Cons.; settled in Pavia, where he headed a music school. He wrote the operas Anima allegra (Rome, April 15, 1921; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Feb. 14, 1923), Nazareth (Pavia, May 28, 1925), La Sagredo (Milan, La Scala, April 26, 1930), Caracciolo (Rome, Feb. 7, 1938); a 'pastoral triptych' Il Natale di Gesù (Bari, Dec. 20, 1933); Fiordisole, ballet (Milan, Feb. 14, 1935); Le sette parole di Cristo, oratorio; 10 Masses; symph. poem, Armonie della notte (1925); organ pieces. — Cf. A. Baratti, Vita del musicista F. Vittadini (Milan, 1955).

Vittoria. See Victoria.

Vivaldi, Antonio, celebrated Italian violinist and composer; b. Venice, possibly on June 11, 1669 (but an uncertain date between 1675 and 1678 is usually given); d. Vienna, July (buried July 28), 1741. He was the son and pupil of Giovanni Battista Vivaldi, a violinist at San Marco in Venice; also studied with Giovanni Legrenzi. He entered the priesthood, taking the tonsure in 1693, and holy orders before 1703; because of his red hair he was called 'il prete rosso' (the Red Priest). In 1703 he was engaged as teacher at the Seminario musicale dell' Ospitale della Pietà, in Venice; from 1709 was made 'maestro de' concerti' there; held this position nominally until 1740, but traveled much in the interim; was for four years (perhaps from 1718 to 1722) maestro di cappella to Prince Philip, Landgrave of Hesse-Darmstadt, in Mantua (where the Prince was governor); in later years visited Germany and possibly France; in 1735, he resumed his position at the Pietà in Venice. Although he was a priest, he did not say Mass after the first year of service, owing to an asthmatic condition. In 1740 he went to Vienna, attracted by the opportunities presented to performers and composers at the court of Charles VI; however, he failed to prosper there, and died destitute. — Vivaldi composed about 40 operas (including pasticcios and pieces written in collaboration with others); the following were produced in Venice: Orlando finto pazzo (1714), Nerone fatto Cesare (1715), L'Incoronazione di Dario (1716), L'Inganno trionfante in amore (1725), Farnace (1726), Cunegonda (1726), Rosilena ed Oronta (Jan. 17, 1728), L'Olimpiade (1734), Griselda (1735), L'Oracolo in Messenia (1738), Feraspe (1739); operas produced in Florence: Scanderbeg (June 22, 1718), Ipernestra (1727), L'Atenide (Dec. 29, 1728), Ginevra principessa di Scozia (1736); other operas were produced in Rome, Verona, Milan, etc. He also wrote 2 oratorios, Moses Deus Pharaonis (Venice, 1714) and Juditha triumphans devicta Holofernis barbarie (Venice, 1716), 24 secular cantatas, serenades, miscellaneous arias, 14 Vespers, a Kyrie for 8 voices, and other church music. However, Vivaldi's greatness lies not in his theater or church music, but in his superb instrumental works, particularly the concerti grossi and the solo concertos. Vivaldi's concertos served J. S. Bach as a model for his concertos for clavier and orch. (but of the 16 'Concertos after Vivaldi' for clavier publ. in vol. 42 of the 'Bach Gesellschaft' ed., only 6 are transcriptions of Vivaldi). — Publ. works: 12 Sonate da camera for 2 violins and bass or harpsichord, op. 1; 18 violin sonatas with continuo, op. 2 and 5; L'Estro armonico, 12 concertos for 1, 2, or 4 solo violins, solo cello, strings, and continuo, op. 3; La Stravaganza, 12 concertos for solo violin, strings, and continuo, op. 4; 18 concertos for 3 violins, viola, and continuo, op. 6 and 7; Il Cimento dell'Armonia e dell'Invenzione, including Le quattro stagioni (The Four Seasons), 12 concertos for solo violin, strings, and continuo, op. 8; La Cetra, 12 concertos for solo violin, strings, and continuo, op. 9; 6 concertos for flute, strings, and organ, op. 10; 12

concertos for solo violin, strings, and organ, op. 11 and 12. Many other works remain in MS. According to Pincherle, there are all together 454 concertos, 23 sinfonie, 75 sonatas or trios, and 2 organ pieces. Modern reprints and arrangements of Vivaldi's works are very numerous; several concertos were edited by A. Einstein (1927-28). A complete edition of Vivaldi's works, under the general editorship of G. F. Malipiero, was begun in 1947; by 1958, 275 of the promised 550 works had appeared. — Cf. A. Schering, Geschichte des Instrumental-Konzerts (Leipzig, 1905); A. Gentili, Vivaldi, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1917); W. Altmann, Thematischer Katalog der gedruckten Werke Antonio Vivaldis, in the 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (1922); S. A. Luciani, Antonio Vivaldi, in the 'Bollettino Bibliografico Musicale' (Jan., 1928); A. Salvatori, Antonio Vivaldi, in the 'Rivista Mensile della Città di Venezia' (Aug., 1928); M. Pincherle, Vivaldi and the Ospitali of Venice, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1938); R. Gallo, Antonio Vivaldi, in 'Ateneo Veneto' (Dec., 1938); A. Casella, V. Mortari, S. A. Luciani, etc., Antonio Vivaldi: note e documenti (Siena, 1939); M. Rinaldi, Antonio Vivaldi (Milan, 1943); Olga Rudge, Lettere e dediche di Antonio Vivaldi (Milan, 1943); M. Rinaldi, Catalogo numerico tematico delle composizioni di Antonio Vivaldi (Rome, 1945); S. A. Luciani, Vivaldi, Concerti e Sonate (Milan, 1946); M. Pincherle, Antonio Vivaldi et la musique instrumentale (2 vols., Paris, 1948); G. Guerrini, Antonio Vivaldi, la vita e l'opera (Florence, 1951); M. Rinaldi, La Data di nascita di Antonio Vivaldi (Siena, 1953); M. Pincherle, Vivaldi (Paris, 1955; English transl., N. Y., 1957); W. Kolneder, Aufführungspraxis bei Vivaldi (Leipzig, 1955). See also L. S. Salter, An Index to Ricordi's Edition of Vivaldi, in 'Notes' (June, 1954; pp. 366-74). See also F. Torrefranca, Modernità di Antonio Vivaldi, in 'Nueva Antologia' (Aug. 1, 1942), suggesting that Vivaldi was born June 11, 1669.

Vivell, Cölestin, German ecclesiastic; writer on Gregorian Chant; b. Wolfach, Oct. 21, 1846; d. Seckau, March 10, 1923. Having completed his university studies, he joined the order of Benedictines at Beuron; from 1883 lived in the monastery at Seckau, Styria. Author of Der gregorianische Gesang. Eine Studie über die Echtheit seiner Tradition (1904); Die liturgisch gesungliche Reform Gregors des Grossen (1904); Erklärung der vatikanischen Choralchrift (1906); Vom Musiktraktate Gregors des Grossen (1911); Initia Tractatum musices ex codicibus . . . (1912; alphabetical list of beginnings of treatises in Gerbert's and Coussemaker's Scriptores); Index rerum et verborum tractatum de musica editorum (1915); Fritolfi Breviarum de musica (1919).

Vives (vê-vès), Amadeo, Spanish composer; b. Collbató, near Barcelona, Nov. 18, 1871; d. Madrid, Dec. 1, 1932. He was a pupil of Felipe Pedrell in Barcelona; with L. Millet, founded the famous choral society 'Orfeo Català' (1891). In his first opera, Artus (Barcelona, 1895), he made use of Catalan folk songs. Subsequently he moved to Madrid, where he produced his comic opera Don Lucas del Cigarral (Feb. 18, 1899); his opera Euda d'Uriach, originally to a Catalan libretto, was brought out in Italian at Barcelona (Oct. 24, 1900). Then followed his most popular opera, Maruxa (Madrid, May 28, 1914); other operas were Balada de Carnaval (Madrid, July 5, 1919) and Doña Francisquita (Madrid, Oct. 17, 1923). The style of his stage productions shared qualities of the French light opera and the Spanish 'zarzuela'; he wrote nearly 100 of these; also composed songs and piano pieces; publ. a book of essays, Sofia (Madrid, 1923).

Vivier (vê-vyâ'), Albert-Joseph, Belgian music theorist; b. Huy, Dec. 15, 1816; d. Brussels, Jan. 3, 1903. He studied with Fétis at the Brussels Cons.; wrote an interesting Traité complet d'harmonie (1862, and many later eds.) in which he explained secondary chords as accidental formations through incorporation of auxiliary notes; also wrote essays on acoustics (Des vrais rapports des sons musicaux, Éléments d'acoustique musicale, etc.). His opera Spadillo le tavernier was produced in Brussels on May 22, 1857.

Vivier, Eugène-Léon, French horn virtuoso; b. Brioude, Haute-Loire, Dec. 4, 1817; d. Nice, Feb. 24, 1900. He learned to play violin, then took up the French horn. He moved to Paris, where he became successful through his connections at the French court. An eccentric, he prided himself on his ability to play 2 notes simultaneously on his instrument, through clever overblowing. He publ. a number of pamphlets on music and the theater, and also an autobiography (largely fictitious), La Vie et les aventures d'un corniste (Paris, 1900).

Vix, Geneviève, French soprano; b. Nantes, Dec. 31, 1879; d. Paris, Aug. 25, 1939. She studied at the Paris Cons.; won 1st prize for opera (1908); sang at the Paris Opéra, in Madrid, and in Buenos Aires; made her American début with the Chicago Opera Co. as Manon in Massenet's opera (Dec. 1, 1917); married Prince Cyril Naryshkin in N. Y. (Feb. 9, 1918). She possessed a fine lyric voice and was also adept as an actress.

Vlad, Roman, composer; b. Cernauti, Rumania, Dec. 29, 1919. He was a pupil of the Cernauti Cons.; in 1938, went to Rome, where he studied piano and composition with Casella; active in modern music groups; in 1943 he adopted the 12-tone method of composition. Works: La Strada sul caffè ballet (Rome, June 9, 1945); La Dama delle camelie, ballet in form of 5 waltzes (Rome, Nov. 20, 1945); Sinfonia (Venice Festival, Sept. 8, 1948); Divertimento for 11 instruments (Capri, Sept. 15, 1948); De Profundis, for soprano, mixed chorus, and orch. (Paris, June 2, 1949); Storia d'una mamma, musical fable (Venice Festival, Oct. 5, 1951); 5 Elegies for voice and string orch. (1952); Le Ciel est vide, for chorus and orch. (Turin, Oct. 29, 1954); Variations concertanti for piano and orch. based on a series of 12 notes in Mozart's Don Giovanni (Venice Festival, Sept. 18, 1955); Studi dodecafonici for piano (1943-57); Golinde transilvane for chorus (1957); Musica concertata for harp and orch. (Turin, April 24, 1958); Tre Innozzazioni for voice and orch. (Rome, June 6, 1958); incidental music to Shakespeare's Macbeth, T. S. Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral, Pirandello's Favola del figlio cambiato, etc.; film music; publ. the books Modernità e tradizione nella musica contemporanea (Turin, 1955), Storia della dodecafonia (Milan, 1958), and a monograph on Stravinsky (Turin, 1958). In 1957 he became music editor of the 'Enciclopedia dello Spettacolo.' - Cf. G. Graziosi, Roman Vlad, in 'Rassegna Musicale' (Jan., 1953).

Vladigerov, Pantcho, foremost Bulgarian composer; b. Shumen, March 18, 1899. He studied with Paul Juon and Georg Schumann in Berlin; conducted theater orchestras there; returned to Bulgaria in 1920, and was appointed teacher of theory at the Cons. in Sofia. After 1945 he spent several years in Russia; appeared as pianist and composer. His music is rooted in Bulgarian folksong; he artfully combines the peculiar melodic and rhythmic patterns of native material with stark modern harmonies; the method is similar to that of Béla Bartók. His works include an opera on a historic Bulgarian subject, Tsar Kaloyan (Sofia, April 20, 1936), a Bulgarian rhapsody for orch., Vardar (1934); a piano concerto; a violin concerto; a number of chamber music pieces; a series of effective suites for piano, of which Shumen (named after his place of birth) is the most attractive.

Vockerodt, Gottfried, German writer; b. Mühlhausen, Thuringia, Sept. 24, 1665; d. Gotha, Oct. 10, 1727, as rector of the Gymnasium. It was his opinion that excessive enjoyment of music injures the intellect, and that Nero and Caligula became totally depraved through their passion for music. He advocated these ideas in Consultatio . . . de cavenda falsa mentium intemperatarum medicina (1696); Missbrauch der freien Künste, insonderheit der Musik (1697); and Wiederholtes Zeugnis der Wahrheit gegen die verderbte Musik und Schauspiele, Opern, etc. (1698).

Vockner, Josef, Austrian organist, composer, and teacher; b. Ebensee, March 18, 1842; d. Vienna, Sept. 11, 1906. He was a pupil of Bruckner; became prof. of organ at the Vienna Cons. Composed an oratorio, Das jüngste Gericht; a cello sonata; a piano quartet; fugues and other pieces for organ; songs.

Vogel, Adolf, German bass-baritone; b. Munich, Aug. 18, 1895. He studied voice with Anna Bahr-Mildenburg and J. Kiechle; was a member of the Munich Opera from 1933 to 1937; made his American début at the Metropolitan Opera as Alberich (Dec. 3, 1937); remained on its roster for 2 seasons.

Vogel, Charles Louis Adolphe, French violinist and composer; b. Lille, May 17, 1808; d. Paris, Sept. 11, 1892. He was a grandson of Johann Christoph Vogel (q. v.); studied at the Paris Cons. with A. Kreutzer (violin) and Reicha (theory). After winning popularity with his song Les trois couleurs during the July Revolution (1830), he brought out a series of successful operas: Le Podestat (Paris, 1831), Le Siège de Leyde (The Hague, March 4, 1847), La Moissonneuse (Paris, 1853), Rompons (Paris, 1857), Le Nid de Cigognes (Baden-Baden, 1858), Gratin de Pigoche (Paris, 1866), and La Filleule du roi (Brussels, 1875). He also wrote symphonies, chamber music, sacred works; songs; piano pieces.

Vogel (föh'-gähl), Emil, German musicologist; b. Wriezen-on-Oder, Jan. 21, 1859; d. Nikolassee, near Berlin, June 18, 1908. He studied at Greifswald and Berlin, taking the degree of Dr. phil. in 1887. In 1893 he organized the Peters Music Library in Leipzig and was librarian till 1901; at the same time he also ed. the 'Peters Jahrbuch.' He publ. a monograph on Monteverdi (1887), and on Marco da Gagliano and music in Florence from 1570 to 1650 (1889), both in the 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft'; also a catalogue of Die Handschriften nebst den älteren Druckwerken der Musikabteilung der herzoglichen Bibliothek zu Wolfenbüttel (1890), and Bibliothek der gedruckten weltlichen Vokalmusik Italiens aus den Jahren 1500-1700 (1892; new ed., completely revised by Alfred Einstein, publ. in 'Notes' (June, 1945-Sept., 1948).

Vogel, Friedrich Wilhelm Ferdinand, German organist and composer; b. Havelberg, Prussia, Sept. 9, 1807; d. Bergen, Norway, July 20, 1892. He studied with Birnbach in Berlin; made tours as organ virtuoso; taught at Hamburg (1838-41) and Copenhagen (1845-52); then settled in Bergen, where he founded an organ school. He publ. a number of works for organ, including 60 chorale-preludes, 10 postludes, and 2 preludes and fugues; also chamber music; overtures; choruses.

Vogel, Johann Christoph, German composer; b. Nuremberg, 1756; d. Paris, June 26, 1788. He was a pupil of Riepel at Regensburg; went to Paris in 1776, and wrote 2 operas in Gluck's style: La Toison d'or (Paris, Sept. 5, 1786) and Démophon, which he completed shortly before his untimely death at the age of 32, and which was produced posthumously (Paris, Sept. 22, 1789). He also composed a great deal of instrumental music: 3 symphonies; a bassoon concerto; 3 clarinet concertos; 6 string quartets; 6 quartets for horn and strings; 3 quartets for bassoon and strings; 6 trios for 2 violins and bass; 6 duos for 2 clarinets; 6 duos for 2 bassoons; etc.

Vogel, Wilhelm Moritz, German pianist and composer; b. Sorgau, Silesia, July 9, 1846; d. Leipzig, Oct. 30, 1922. He studied in Leipzig, and settled there as a teacher; also conducted choral societies and wrote music criticism. He publ. a series of instructive piano pieces, and a method (in 12 parts); also songs and organ works; edited 'Deutsches Schulliederbuch' (a collection of 200 part-songs); brought out a Gesch- ichte der Musik (1900) and several didactic books.

Vogel (föh'-gähl), Wladimir, composer; b. Moscow, Feb. 29, 1896, of a German father and Russian mother. As a youth he studied music privately; was interned in Russia during World War I as a German citizen; in 1918 he went to Berlin, where he studied with Tiessen and Busoni (1920-24); left Berlin in 1933, and after a brief stay in France, settled in Ascona, Switzerland. His music reveals influences of Scriabin and Schoenberg; in some of his works he applied the 12-tone method of composition; he is very much preoccupied with philosophical expression in music. His most significant composition is the oratorio Thyl Claes (Till Eulenspiegel) in 2 parts: Oppression (Geneva, 1943) and Liberation (Geneva, 1947); an orchestral suite from it was given at the Palermo Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music (April 26, 1949); other works include a cantata, Wagadu, for 3 solo voices, chorus, and 5 saxophones (Munich, May 19, 1931); Deux études d'orchestre (London Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, July 28, 1931); Tripartita, for orch. (Geneva, Nov. 21, 1935); violin concerto (1937); Sept aspects d'une série dodécaphonique for orch. (Venice International Festival, Sept., 1950); Spielungen, for orch. (Frankfurt, June 26, 1953); Overture (Rome, April 7, 1954; received a prize of the International Congress of Contemporary Music, Rome); Goethe-Aphorismen, for soprano and string orch. (Venice International Festival, Sept., 1955); 12 variétés for violin, flute, clarinet, cello (1940); wind quintet (1941); quintet for clarinet, piano, and strings (1948); other chamber music; many piano pieces and songs.

Vogeleis (föh'-gél-iz), Martin, Alsatian music scholar; b. Erstein, June 5, 1861; d. Sélestat, Aug. 11, 1930. He studied for the priesthood, and was ordained in 1885; taught music at the Episcopalian Seminary in Zillesheim (1886-91); then was chaplain and choirmaster in Grafenstaden (1891-96); pastor in Behlenheim (1896-1906); from 1908 was pastor in Schlettstadt (Sélestat). He made a special study of music in Alsace; publ. Quellen und Bausteine zu einer Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters im Elsass 500-1800 (1911). He discovered the MS of Königshofen's Tonarius, which he publ. in facsimile in connection with F. X. Mathias' Der Strassburger Chronist Königshofen als Choralist (1903).

Vogelweide (foh'-gël-wi-dēh), Walther von der, famous German Minnesinger and lyric poet; b. probably in Tyrol, c. 1170; d. Würzburg, c. 1230. In Wagner's Tannhäuser he appears as one of the rival singers at the Wartburg. He led a wandering life; was in Worms in 1198; in Frankfurt in 1212; then in Würzburg. Very few of his melodies are extant; 3 of these were found in the Münster 'Bruchstücke' (MS collection of musical fragments from the Middle Ages), including the so-called 'Palestine Song' (1228); 5 others are contained in the Colmar Codex and in the 'Singebuch' of Adam Puschmann. —Cf. R. Kralik, in the supplement to Mantuani's Geschichte der Musik in Wien, vol. 1 (1904); R. Wustmann, Die Hofweise Walthers von der Vogelweide, in the 'Lilienron-Festschrift' (1910); R. Wustmann, Walther von der Vogelweide (1912); R. Wustmann, Walthers Palästinalied, in the 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. 13); R. Molitor, Die Lieder des Münsterischen Fragmentes, in the 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. 12; with facsimiles); F. Ludwig, in Adler's Handbuch der Musikgeschichte (Frankfurt, 1924); F. Gennrich, 7 Melodien zu mittelhochdeutschen Minneliedern, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1924-25); H. J. Moser, Geschichte der deutschen Musik, vol. 1 (5th ed., 1928); H. J. Moser, Gedenkblatt auf Walther von der Vogelweide (1929); H. Rietsch, in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 41); C. Bützel, Untersuchungen zu den Melodien Walthers von der Vogelweide (Jena, 1940); H. Böhm, Walther von der Vogelweide (Stuttgart, 1949); J. A. Huisman, Neue Wege zur dichterischen und musikalischen Technik Walthers von der Vogelweide (dissertation; Utrecht, 1950); K. K. Klein, Zur Spruchdichtung und Heimatfrage Walthers von der Vogelweide (Innsbruck, 1952); D. Kralik, Die Elegie Walthers von der Vogelweide (Vienna, 1952); F. Maurer, ed., Die Lieder Walthers von der Vogelweide unter Beifügung erhaltener und erschlossener Melodien, vol. 1 (Tübingen, 1955).

Vogl (fogl), Heinrich, famous German tenor; b. Au, suburb of Munich, Jan. 15, 1845; d. Munich, April 21, 1900. He studied music with Fr. Lachner; made a successful début as Max in Der Freischütz at the Munich Court Opera (Nov. 5, 1865) and remained on its roster until his death. He succeeded Schnorr von Carolsfeld (q.v.) as the model Tristan in Wagner's opera and was for years considered the greatest interpreter of that role. He frequently sang at Bayreuth; created the role of Loge in Das Rheingold (1869) and of Siegmund in Die Walküre (1870). He was also a composer; wrote an opera, Der Fremdling, in which he sang the leading role (Munich, May 7, 1899). In 1868 he married the German soprano Therese Thoma (b. Tutzing, Nov. 12, 1845; d. Munich, Sept. 29, 1921), who sang the part of Isolde with him. —Cf. H. von der Pfordten, Heinrich Vogl. Zur Erinnerung und zum Vermächtnis (Munich, 1900); K. Pottgiesser, Heinrich Vogl, in the 'Allgemeine Musikzeitung' (May 4, 1900).

Vogl (fogl), Johann Michael, Austrian baritone; b. Steyr, Aug. 10, 1768; d. Vienna, Nov. 19, 1840. He studied law in Vienna; Süssmayr, then conductor of the Vienna Court Theater, discovered his voice, and persuaded him to join his opera company; Vogl remained on its roster from 1794 until 1822. He was the first professional singer to perform Schubert's songs at concerts. —Cf. A. Liess, J. M. Vogl, Hofoperist und Schubertsänger (Graz, 1954).

Vogler (fög'-lêhr), Georg Joseph, Abbé or Abt, noted German composer and theorist; b. Würzburg, June 15, 1749; d. Darmstadt, May 6, 1814. The son of a violin maker, he mastered the organ at an early age; studied theology and law at Würzburg and Bamberg. In 1771 he went to Mannheim; there he wrote music for a ballet and gained the favor of the Elector, who provided him with funds for study in Italy. After a brief course in Bologna with Padre Martini, he proceeded to Padua, where he studied composition with Vallotti; but soon left for Rome, and took holy orders in 1773; was made Apostolic Protonotary, Chamberlain to the Pope, Knight of the Golden Spur; also joined the Academy of the Arcadians. In 1775 he returned to Mannheim as court chaplain and 2nd Kapellmeister, and founded there the 'Mannheimer Tonschule' for teaching his own method of composition. In 1780 he followed the Electoral Court to Munich. In 1781 he was in Paris, where he submitted a paper to the Académie Royale des Sciences, Essai de diriger le goût des amateurs de musique, an explanation of his system of teaching (publ. Paris, 1782); in Paris he also produced his opera, La Kermesse (1783), which was a fiasco. From France he traveled to Spain, Portugal, England, and Denmark. In 1786 he was engaged as court conductor in Stockholm, where he founded a music school; in 1788

he spent some time in St. Petersburg; in 1790 he was in London as organist; after traveling in Poland and Germany, he returned to Stockholm in 1791. In 1794 he went to Paris, and subsequently traveled to Greece and the Near East. From 1796 to 1799 he was again in Sweden, and afterwards visited Copenhagen. In 1800 he went to Berlin; was then in Vienna and Prague. Wherever he went, he solicited interest for his system of organ construction, and exhibited a portable organ called 'orchestron,' but was unsuccessful. After spending 2 years in Vienna, where he produced his opera Samori (1804), and brief sojourns in various German towns, he finally settled in Darmstadt; established a 'Tonschule'; Carl Maria von Weber and Meyerbeer became his pupils there. In teaching, Vogler found his most congenial work; his pedagogical and acoustic writings were also of importance. —Works: Operas: Der Kaufmann von Smyrna (Mannheim, 1771); Albert III von Bayern (Munich, 1781), Erwin und Elmire, after Goethe (Darmstadt, 1781), La Kermesse (Paris, Nov. 15, 1783), Castore e Polluce (Munich, Jan. 12, 1787), Gustav Adolph och Ebba Brahe (Stockholm, Jan. 24, 1788), Samori (Vienna, May 17, 1804); ballets, Rendez-vous de chasse (Darmstadt, 1772) and Le Forgeron villageois; other stage music. Many sacred works, including Masses and a Requiem (his masterpiece); 3 Misereres, motets, Te Deum, Stabat Mater (with orch.), about 50 hymns. Instrumental music: 6 trios for piano, violin, and bass, op. 1; 6 easy sonatas for piano, op. 2; 6 easy sonatas for violin and piano, op. 3; 6 sonatas for 2, 3, and 4 instruments, op. 4; 6 concertos for piano, op. 5; 6 piano trios, op. 6; 6 piano trios, op. 7; 12 Diversissements for piano, op. 8; a piano concerto; Nocturne for piano and strings; Quatuor concertante for piano, violin, viola, and bass; 6 sonatas for 2 pianos; sonata for piano 4 hands; sonata for piano and strings, called Der eheliche Zwist; Polymelos, ou caractères de musique des différentes nations, for piano and strings; other variations on national airs; a set of variations on Ah que dirai-je Maman for piano with orch.; several symphonies and overtures; 32 preludes for organ in every key (a didactic work); etc.—Also publ. Tonwissenschaft und Tonsetzkunst (Mannheim, 1776); Stimm-bildungskunst (Mannheim, 1776); Churpfälzische Tonschule (Mannheim, 1778), all 3 republished together as Mannheimer Tonschule; a monthly paper 'Betrachtungen der Mannheimer Tonschule' (1778-81); Inledning til harmoniens k n ndom (Introduction to the Theory of Harmony; Stockholm, 1795); Swedish methods for piano, organ, and thorough-bass (Stockholm, 1797); Choralsystem (Copenhagen, 1800); Data zur Akustik (Offenbach, 1801); Gr ndliche Anleitung zum Clavierstimmen (Stuttgart, 1807); System f r den Fugenbau (Offenbach, 1811);  ber Choral und Kirchenges nge (Munich, 1814). —Bibliography: J. Fr hlich, Biographie des grossen Tonk nstlers Abt Vogler (W rzburg, 1845); H. K nzle, Abt Vogler (Darmstadt, 1867); E. Pasqu , Abt Vogler als Tonk nstler, Lehrer und Priester (Darmstadt, 1884); K. E. von Schafh utl, Abt G. J. Vogler, Sein Leben, sein Charakter und musikalisches System (Augsburg, 1888; with a list of works); M. Brenet, L'Abb  Vogler   Paris, in 'Archives historiques, artistiques et litt raires' (Feb., 1891); J. Simon, Abt Voglers kompositorisches Wirken (Berlin, 1904); E. Rupp, Abb  Vogler als Mensch, Musiker, und Orgelbautheoretiker (Ludwigsburg, 1922); P. Vretblad, Abb  Vogler in Stockholm (W rzburg, 1924); P. Vretblad, Abb  Vogler (1933); H. K lletat, Zur Geschichte der deutschen Orgelmusik in der Fr hklassik (Kassel, 1933); H. Schweiger, Abb  G. J. Vogler's Orgellehre (dissertation; Vienna, 1938); H. Schweiger, Abt Vogler, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1939).

Vogrich, Max (Wilhelm Karl), pianist and composer; b. Szeben (Hermannstadt), Transylvania, Jan. 24, 1852; d. New York, June 10, 1916. He gave a piano concert at the age of 7; then studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Reinecke and Moscheles; traveled as pianist in Europe, South America, and the U. S.; also toured Australia. In 1886 he settled in N. Y.; then lived in Weimar (1902-08), and in London until 1914, returning to N. Y. at the outbreak of World War I. He wrote several operas to his own librettos: Vanda (Florence, 1875), King Arthur (Leipzig, Nov. 26, 1893), Der Buddha (Weimar, 1904), etc.; an oratorio, The Captivity (1884); 2 symphonies; a piano concerto; several pieces for violin, including a violin concerto subtitled E pur si muove (1913); 12 concert studies for piano; an Album of Ancient and Modern Dances for piano (20 dances, 2 books); anthems; songs. He edited the complete piano works of Schumann, Clementi's Gradus ad Parnassum (in progressive order), 'Modern Russian Composers,' and other collections.

Vogt, Augustus Stephen, Canadian choral conductor; b. Elmira, Ontario, Aug. 14, 1861; d. Toronto, Sept. 17, 1926. He studied at the New England Cons., and then at the Leipzig Cons. In 1888 settled in Toronto; founded and conducted the Mendelssohn Choir there (1894-97 and 1900-17); toured with it in the U. S.; principal of the Toronto Cons. (1913-26); dean, faculty of music, Univ. of Toronto (1916-26). He was an important figure in music education in Canada. Publ. several choral works: The Sea, Crossing the Bar, An Indian Lullaby, The Lord's Prayer, etc.; Standard Anthem Book (1894) and Modern Piano-forte Technique (1900). — Cf. A. Bridle, Vogt, a Great Chorus Master, in the 'Year Book of Canadian Art' (1913).

Vogt, Gustav, French oboe player and composer; b. Strasbourg, March 18, 1781; d. Paris, May 30, 1870. He studied at the Paris Cons.; was 1st oboist at the Opéra-Comique, and then at the Opéra (1814-34). He taught at the Paris Cons.; wrote 4 oboe concertos; duos for 2 oboes; potpourris and marches for military band.

Vogt, Johann (Jean), German pianist and composer; b. Gross-Tin, near Liegnitz, Jan. 17, 1823; d. Eberswalde, July 31, 1888. He studied in Berlin and Breslau; taught piano playing in St. Petersburg (1850-55); subsequently lived in Dresden and in Berlin; visited N. Y. (1871-73). He wrote a piano trio, a string quintet, many salon pieces for piano (in all, over 150 opus numbers).

Voigt, Henriette (née Kunze), German pianist; b. Leipzig, Nov. 24, 1808; d. there, Oct. 15, 1839. She was a talented amateur; studied with Ludwig Berger. She married the merchant Karl Voigt, whose house was the rendezvous of the most eminent musicians of the time. Schumann dedicated to her the piano sonata in G minor (op. 22). — Cf. Acht Briefe und ein Faksimile von F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (Leipzig, 1871, English transl. in 'Macmillan's Magazine' for June, 1871); J. Gensel, Schumanns Briefwechsel mit Henriette Voigt (Leipzig, 1892); J. Gensel, Aus Rochlitzens Briefen an Henriette Voigt (Leipzig, 1906).

Voigt, Johann Georg Hermann, German organist and composer; b. Osterwieck, May 14, 1769; d. Leipzig, Feb. 24, 1811. He served for many years as organist at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig; publ. chamber music and piano pieces.

Volbach (föhl'-bäh), Fritz, German choral conductor and composer; b. Wipperfürth, near Cologne, Dec. 17, 1861; d.

Wiesbaden, Nov. 30, 1940. He studied at the Cologne Cons., with Hiller, Jensen, and Seiss, and in Berlin with Taubert and Löschorh. In 1891 he was appointed conductor of the 'Liedertafel' and the 'Damengesangsverein' in Mainz; brought out many choral works by modern German composers; Dr. phil., Bonn Univ., for the dissertation Die Praxis der Händel-Aufführung (publ. 1900). A versatile musician, he had command of almost every orchestral instrument. His musical works include the symph. poems, Ostern and Es waren zwei Königskinder; a symphony; a piano quintet; numerous choral works, among them a Festkantate for the 5th centenary of the birth of Gutenberg (1900); publ. valuable books: Lehrbuch der Begleitung des gregorianischen Gesangs (1888); Händel (1898; in Reimann's 'Berühmte Musiker'); Die Zeit des Klassizismus: Beethoven (1905; 2nd ed., 1929); Die deutsche Musik im 19. Jahrhundert (1909); Das moderne Orchester in seiner Entwicklung (1910; 2nd ed., 1919); Die Instrumente des Orchesters (1913; 2nd ed., 1921); Handbuch der Musikwissenschaften, 2 vols. (1926, 1930); Die Kunst der Sprache (1929); Der Chorleiter (1931). A volume of memoirs, Erlebtes und Erstrebtes, was publ. posthumously (Mainz, 1956). — Cf. J. Hagemann, Fritz Volbach, in 'Monographien moderner Musiker' (Leipzig, 1909); G. Schwaake, Fritz Volbachs Werke (Münster, 1921).

Volckmar (fölk'-mähr), Wilhelm Valentin, German organist and composer; b. Hersfeld, Dec. 26, 1812; d. Hornberg, near Kassel, Aug. 27, 1887. In 1835 he settled at Hornberg, where he taught music and played organ. He wrote several organ concertos, 20 organ sonatas, an organ symphony; publ. an Orgelschule, a Schule der Geläufigkeit for organ, pieces for piano and for violin, hymns, songs.

Volkert (fölk'-kehr), Franz, organist and composer, b. Heimersdorf, Bohemia, Feb. 2, 1767; d. Vienna, March 22, 1845. He was active as organist; was (from 1821) conductor at the Leopoldstadt Theater (Vienna); produced over 100 comic operas, Singspiele, melodramas, farces, etc., many of which were popular; also church music, chamber music, and organ pieces.

Volkmann (fohlk'-män), Hans, German musicologist; grand-nephew of Robert Volkmann; b. Bischofswerda, April 29, 1875. He studied German philology and music in Munich and Berlin; undertook research in Italy and France; in 1921 settled in Dresden, where he taught music history; in 1946 became prof. at the Dresden Cons. — Writings: Neues über Beethoven (1904); Emanuel d'Astorga (2 vols.; 1911; 1919; fundamental and important biography; establishes the verifiable facts of d'Astorga's life); Beethoven in seinen Beziehungen zu Dresden (Dresden, 1942). He publ. the standard biography of Robert Volkmann (Leipzig, 1903; abridged ed., 1915); ed. Briefe von Robert Volkmann (1917), and compiled a Thematisches Verzeichnis der Werke von Robert Volkmann (Dresden, 1937).

Volkmann (föhlk'-männ), Robert, German composer; b. Lommatzsch, April 6, 1815; d. Budapest, Oct. 29, 1883. He studied with his father, a cantor (organ and piano); with Frießel (violin and cello) and Anacker (composition); then in Leipzig with K. F. Becker; was greatly encouraged by Schumann. After teaching music in Prague (1839-42), he settled in Budapest, where he spent the rest of his life, except 4 years (1854-58) in Vienna. In 1875 he was appointed prof. at the National Academy of Music in Budapest. His music was regarded very highly in his lifetime, but after his death it faded into oblivion; however, several publications dealing with his works, including a thematic index, were brought out by his grand-nephew, Hans Volkmann. — Works: 2 symphonies; 3 serenades for strings; 2 overtures; a cello concerto; 6 string quartets; 2 piano trios; Konzertstück for piano and orch.; Chant du Troubadour for violin and piano; Allegretto capriccioso for violin and piano; 2 violin sonatinas; Konzertstück for piano and orch.; Romanze for cello and piano; Capriccio for cello and piano; Schlummerlied for harp, clarinet, and horn (also arranged for piano, viola and cello; his last completed work). For piano solo: Phantasiebilder, Dithyrambe und Toccate, Souvenir de Maróth, Nocturne, sonata in C minor, Buch der Lieder, Deutsche Tanzweisen, Cavatine and Barcarole, Visegrád, 4 marches, Wanderskizzen, Fantasie, Intermezzo, variations on a theme of Handel, Lieder der Grossmutter, 3 Improvisations, Am Grab des Grafen Széchenyi, Ballade und Scherzetto, transcriptions of songs by Mozart and Schubert, etc. For piano 4 hands: Musikalisches Bilderbuch, Ungarische Skizzen, Die Tageszeiten, 3 marches, Rondino und Marsch-Caprice; transcriptions of his other works. Vocal works: 2 Masses for male chorus, 5 sacred songs for mixed chorus; offertories; Christmas carol of the 12th century; old German hymn for double male chorus; 6 duets on old German poems; alto solo with orch., An die Nacht; dramatic scene for soprano and orch., Sappho; Kirchenarie, for bass, flute, and strings; Weihnacht, for female chorus; Im Wiesengrün, for mixed chorus; etc. — Cf. B. Vogel, Robert Volkmann (Leipzig, 1875); H. Volkmann, Robert Volkmann. Sein Leben und seine Werke (Leipzig, 1903; standard biography; abridged ed., 1915); C. Preiss, Robert Volkmann. Kritische Beiträge zu seinem Schaffen (Graz, 1912); V. von Herzfeld, Robert Volkmann, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1915).

Volkov, Feodor Grigorievitch, Russian amateur musician; b. Kostroma, Feb. 19, 1729; d. St. Petersburg, April 14, 1763. He was educated in Yaroslavl, where he organized a theatrical group, which presented performances of plays with music. In 1754 he entered a military school in St. Petersburg; in 1759 he was sent to Moscow, where he was in charge of the spectacles accompanying the coronation of Catherine II (1763). Volkov was an able practical musician, even though he totally lacked professional training. His supposed authorship of the comic opera, Taniusha, or A Happy Encounter (1756), is extremely doubtful; in fact, the existence of such an opera has never been proved. Volkov's role in the early history of the Russian musical stage is confined to his activities as an organizer. — Cf. V. Tcheshikhin, History of Russian Opera from 1674 to 1903 (St. Petersburg, 1905; pp. 57-60).

Vollerthun (fohl'-ler-toon), Georg, German composer and conductor; b. Fürstenau, Sept. 29, 1876; d. Strausberg, Sept. 15, 1945. He studied with Tappert, Radecke, and Gernsheim; was theater conductor in Prague, Berlin, Barmen, and Mainz (1899-1905); spent 3 years in Paris (1908-10); then settled in Berlin as music critic and teacher; from 1922 lived mostly in Strausberg. He wrote the operas Veeda (Kassel, 1916), Island-Saga (Munich, Jan. 17, 1925), Der Freikorporal (Hanover, Nov. 10, 1931; his most successful opera; also given in Berlin, June 10, 1933), and Das königliche Opfer (Hanover, 1942); Alt-Danzig Suite for orch. (1938); cantatas and other vocal works; many German songs. — Cf. E. Krieger, Georg Vollerthun (Berlin, 1942).

Volpe, Arnold, conductor; b. Kovno, Lithuania, July 9, 1869; d. Miami, Fla., Feb. 2, 1940. He studied violin with Leopold Auer at the St. Petersburg Cons. (1887-91); also composition, with Soloviev (1893-97).

In 1898 he emigrated to America, settling in N. Y.; was conductor-founder of the Young Men's Symph. Orch. of N. Y. (1902-19) and of the Volpe Symph. Orch. (1904-14); director of the orch. school of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences (1910-19). In 1918 he founded the summer concerts at the Lewisholm Stadium in N. Y., and conducted the first two seasons there, reappearing in later years as guest conductor; was subsequently conductor of the Washington, D. C., Opera Co. (1919-22); musical director of the Kansas City Cons. (1922-25); from 1926, was conductor of the Univ. of Miami Symph. Orch., which he founded. He publ. a string quartet; pieces for violin and piano; many songs (Parting, The Brook, A Dream, Shadows, etc.). — Cf. Marie Volpe (his widow), Arnold Volpe, Bridge Between Two Musical Worlds (Coral Gables, Fla., 1950).

Vomáčka (vöh' - mäch - küh), Boleslav, Czech composer; b. Mladá Boleslav, June 28, 1887. He studied law in Prague; took music lessons from Novák; from 1919 to 1950 he was in the service of the Labor Ministry in Prague; wrote music criticism in several newspapers there; was editor of Listy Huděbní Matice (1922-35). He began to compose early in life; developed a strong national style of writing; his songs and piano pieces are well known in Czechoslovakia. — Works: operas Vodník (Water Spirit); Prague, Dec. 17, 1937) and Boleslav I (Prague, March 8, 1957); oratorio, Živi Mrtvým (The Living to the Dead); Prague, Feb. 24, 1929); cantata, Strážce majáku (The Watchman of the Lighthouse); 1931-33); S. O. S. for male chorus (1927); Czech Eroica, a symphony (1945); violin sonata; 2 piano sonatas; many part-songs. — Cf. H. Dolžil, Boleslav Vomáčka (Prague, 1941).

Von Blon, Franz, German composer and conductor; b. Berlin, July 16, 1861; d. there, Oct. 21, 1945. He studied in Berlin at the Stern Cons.; was active as conductor in Warsaw and Berlin; wrote several operettas (Sub rosa, Die Amazone, Die tolle Princess, etc.) and much light music for piano; also a number of military marches, of which one, Unter dem Siegesbanner, became extremely popular.

Von der Hoya, Amadeo, violinist; b. New York, March 13, 1874; d. Linz, Austria, April 4, 1922. He studied violin in Berlin; concertmaster of the Vienna Opera (1894-96); in 1901 appointed concertmaster of the Musikverein in Linz. He publ. Grundlagen der Violintechnik, a valuable method; also Moderne Lagenstudien für Violine und Studienbrevier.

Voormolen, Alexander Nicolas, Dutch composer; b. Rotterdam, March 3, 1895. He studied with Johan Wagenaar in Utrecht; became deeply interested in French music and went to Paris, where he took lessons with Ravel and Roussel; returned to Holland and was active as music critic, living in The Hague. — Works: the ballets Le Roi Grenouille (1918), Baron Hop (1926), Diana (1935); the melodrama Beatrijs; symph. poems: Droomhuis (1923), Zomerlied (1926), De drie Ruytertjes (variations on an old Dutch song; 1927); concerto for 2 oboes and orch. (1934); cello concerto (1941); Arethusa, 'symph. myth' (1947); string quartet; 3 violin sonatas; several piano albums: Le Souper clandestin, Tableaux des Pays-Bas, Le Livre des enfants, Suite de clavecin; songs to Dutch, German, and French texts. — Cf. Cor Backers, Nederlandse Componisten van 1400 tot op onze Tijd (The Hague, 1949; pp. 141-47).

Vopelius, Gottfried, German composer; b. Herwigsdorf, near Zittau, Jan. 28, 1635; d. Leipzig, Feb. 3, 1715. He was cantor of St. Nicholas at Leipzig from 1675; harmonized old German hymns and publ. a Neu Leipziger Gesangbuch (1682), containing 100 hymns originally brought out in Schein's Cantional oder Gesangbuch (1627).

Voříšek, Jan Hugo. See Worzischek.

Voss, Charles, German pianist; b. Schmarzow, Sept. 20, 1815; d. Verona, Aug. 29, 1882. He studied in Berlin, but made his career in Paris, where he went in 1846; enjoyed great success in Paris society as pianist and composer; publ. a great number of salon pieces, transcriptions, paraphrases, etc.; also wrote piano concertos and études. His first piano concerto, in F minor, was praised by Mendelssohn.

Voss (Vossius), Isaac, music theorist; b. Leyden, Holland, 1618; d. Windsor, England, Feb. 21, 1689. He was the son of the German scholar Gerhard Johann Voss (1577-1649), who lived in Holland. After his father's death, he went to Stockholm, where he was at the court of Queen Christina (1649-52); subsequently went to England, where he remained till his death. He publ. an important treatise in Latin, De poematum cantu et viribus rythmi (1673).

Vranken, Jaap, Dutch organist and composer; b. Utrecht, April 16, 1897; d. The Hague, April 20, 1956. He was the son of the organist Joseph Vranken (1870-1948), with whom he studied organ and theory. In 1916-18, he was in the U. S., studying with Percy Goetschius. He returned to Holland in 1920, and was appointed organist at the church of St. Anthonius in The Hague; acquired a fine reputation as a teacher. He composed mostly sacred music; also instrumental music in classical style; publ. a manual on counterpoint (1948). His last work was a Missa Polyphonica (1953).

Vredenburg, Max, composer; b. Brussels, Jan. 16, 1904, of Dutch parents; was taken to Holland as a child and received elementary education there; then went to Paris, where he became a pupil of Paul Dukas at the École Normale; upon his return to Holland he settled in The Hague as a teacher; from 1936 to 1940 was again in Paris; then was sent by the Dutch government to Java; was interned by the Japanese (1942-45) but was allowed to give concerts in Indonesia with the violinist Szymon Goldberg, who was also interned there; returned to Holland after the end of the war, and continued his activities as pianist and composer; publ. a book, Langs de vijf Lijnen (1947). —Works: Suite sportive, for violin and piano; oboe sonatina; many teaching pieces for piano; also song cycles.

Vretblad, Viktor Patrik, Swedish organist and musicologist; b. Svartnäs, April 5, 1876; d. Stockholm, Jan. 15, 1953. He studied at the Stockholm Cons. (1895-1900) and later in Berlin; wrote music criticism; acted as church organist; was an official of the Ministry of the Postal Services for 40 years (1900-40). He devoted his research mainly to early Swedish music; publ. basic biographies of J. H. Roman (Stockholm, 1914 and 1945); Konsertlivet i Stockholm under 1700-talet (1918); A. Hallén (1918); Abbé Vogler (1933).

Vreuls (vröls), Victor, Belgian composer; b. Verviers, Feb. 4, 1876; d. Brussels, July 26, 1944. He was a pupil of the Cons. of Verviers, and later studied with Sylvain Dupuis and J. T. Radoux in Liège. He then went to Paris, where he took a course with Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum; taught viola playing and elementary theory there (1901-06); subsequently was for 20 years (1906-26) director of the Luxembourg Cons. —Works: operas: Olivier le simple (Brussels, March 9, 1922) and Un Songe d'une nuit d'été, after Shakespeare (Brussels, Dec. 17, 1925); a ballet, Le Loupgarou (Ghent, 1937); the symph. poems Werther, Jour de Fête, Cortège héroïque; a symph. with violin solo (Ysaÿe Prize, 1904); Poème for cello and orch.; Élégie for flute and orch.; a string quartet; a piano quartet; 2 violin sonatas; a cello sonata; piano pieces; songs.

Vrieslander (frës'-lahn-dehr), Otto, German composer and writer on music; b. Münster, July 18, 1880; d. Tegna, Switzerland, Dec. 16, 1950. After attending the Cologne Cons. he went to Munich in 1904; in 1911-12, he was in Vienna, where he studied with Heinrich Schenker, becoming one of his disciples. From 1912 he lived in Ebertsberg, near Munich; in 1929 settled in Switzerland. He wrote some highly expressive song cycles (Lieder aus des Knaben Wunderhorn, Pierrot lunaire, etc.); edited works by Ph. E. Bach, six of whose symphonies he arranged for piano 4 hands; publ. various studies on him: Ph. E. Bachs Klavierstücke für Anfänger mit kompositionstechnischer Analyse (1914); Lieder und Gesänge von Ph. E. Bach nebst Einleitung (1922); Ph. E. Bach als Klavierkomponist, in 'Gany-med' (Dresden, 1922); Ph. E. Bach (1923); Ph. E. Bach als Theoretiker, in Von neuer Musik (1925).

Vrionides, Christos, conductor; b. Khania, Crete, Jan. 12, 1894; studied in Athens at the Odeon, and taught theory and double-bass there (1920-22), then came to the U. S.; studied at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. (graduated 1929); conducted the Vrionides Sinfonietta in N. Y. (1929-35); also led the Byzantine Vocal Ensemble (1924-38); conducted the Nassau-Suffolk Federal Orch. (1935-41); in 1946 became conductor of the Babylon, N. Y., Symph. Orch.; taught Greek liturgy in N. Y. and Boston; his musical settings of the liturgy of the Greek Orthodox Church have been accepted in Greek churches in the U. S. and South America.

Vronsky, Vitya (real name Victoria Vronsky), pianist; b. Evpatoria, Crimea, Aug. 22, 1909; studied at the Kiev Cons.; then with Petri and Schnabel in Berlin, and with Cortot in Paris. Married the pianist Victor Babin (q.v.) on Aug. 31, 1933. She came to America in 1937; toured widely with Babin in 2-piano recitals.

Vroye (vrwah'), Théodore-Joseph de, Belgian music scholar; b. Villers-la-Ville, Aug. 19, 1804; d. Liège, July 19, 1873. He entered the priesthood in 1828, and in 1835 became canon of the Liège Cathedral. He made a profound study of Gregorian Chant; publ. Vesperal (1829); Graduel (1831); Traité du plain-chant à l'usage des séminaires (1839); Manuale cantorum (1849); Processionale (1849); Rituale Romanum (1862); De la musique religieuse (1866; with Elewyc).

Vuataz, Roger, Swiss composer; b. Geneva, Jan. 4, 1898. He studied with Otto Barblan and Jaques-Dalcroze at the Geneva Cons.; was active as church organist and music critic; then devoted himself to conducting and composing. —Works: oratorio, Abraham; La Flûte de roseau for chorus; Le Rhône for tenor, chorus, and orch.; Petit concert for orch.; Dagmayanti, symph. poem; La Vie et les métiers au Péloponnèse, for orch.; Géometries for 5 instruments; piano and organ pieces.

Vuillaume (vüë-yohn'), Jean-Baptiste, celebrated French violin maker; b. Mirecourt, Oct. 7, 1798; d. Paris, Feb. 19, 1875. He came of a family of violin makers, and learned the trade from his father, Claude Vuillaume (1772-1834). At 19 he went to Paris, and worked with Chanot till 1821 and from 1821-25 for Lété, with whom he then entered into partnership. After Lété's retirement in 1828, Vuillaume worked alone, and put his own name on several instruments which he had constructed with the greatest care and fine craftsmanship; but he was unable to overcome the general distrust of the native product, and began manufacturing imitations of Italian instruments. After long and patient labor he placed a 'Stradivarius' violin on the market for 300 francs, bearing the master's label, and possessing a full, sonorous tone; also built cellos priced at 500 francs. The sight of a Duiffoprugear viola da gamba inspired him with the idea of further imitations; hence the hundreds of 'Duiffoprugear' violins and cellos with their quaint shape, carved scrolls, inlays, and the motto 'viva fui in sylvis, etc.' By dint of indefatigable researches and experiments, Vuillaume carried the construction of these various instruments to the highest perfection. His own inventions were numerous: in 1849 the huge 'Octobasse,' a double-bass 4 meters in length, 3-stringed (CC-GG-C), with a special lever-mechanism to aid the left hand (an 'octobasse' is in the Museum of the Paris Cons.); in 1855 a viola of broader and higher model, the 'contre-alto,' with double strength of tone, but clumsy to play; in 1867 a kind of mute, the 'pédale sourdine'; also a machine for manufacturing gut strings of perfectly equal thickness. He likewise formulated the laws governing the tapering of the stick of the Tourte bow.

Vuillermoz (vüë-yehr-mohz'), Émile, French music critic; b. Lyons, May 23, 1878. He studied organ and piano in Lyons, and composition at the Paris Cons. with Fauré. He was one of the organizers of the Société Musicale Indépendante (1911) and edited the 'Revue Musicale S. I. M.'; eventually became music critic of the daily 'L'Excelsior' and also contributed articles to 'Le Temps.' He publ. Musiques d'aujourd'hui (1923), La Vie amoureuse de Chopin (1927), and Histoire de la musique (26th printing, 1949).

Vuillermoz, Jean, French composer, b. Monte Carlo, Dec. 29, 1906; d. Lobsonn, Alsace, June 21, 1940 (killed while on patrol duty in the last hours before Franco-German armistice). He studied with Busser and Rabaud at the Paris Cons.; received 2nd Prix de Rome for his cantata Le Pardon (1932). —Works: Triptique for orch. (Paris, May 31, 1932); concerto for French horn and orch. (Paris, March 11, 1934); a ballet, Veglione (1937); cello concerto; Promenade zoologique for chamber orch.; piano trio; string trio.

Vulpus (Latinized form of real name, Fuchs), Melchior, German composer; b. Wasungen, c. 1560; d. Weimar, 1615 (buried Aug. 7). From 1596 to his death, he was cantor in Weimar. Publ. 2 books of Cantiones sacrae (1602, 2nd ed., 1603; and 1604, 2nd ed., 1611); Kirchengesänge und geistliche Lieder . . . for 4 and 5 voices (1604); Canticum beatissimae Virginis Mariae, for 4-8 voices (1605); Lateinische Hochzeitsstücke (1608); Opusculum . . . cantionum sacrarum, for 4-6 voices (1610); Das Leiden und Sterben unseres Herrn . . . (Passion after Matthew; 1613); 3 books of Sonntägliche Evangelische Sprüche for 4 voices (1619, 1620, 1621); also a new ed. of Heinrich Faber's Compendiolum musicae (1610) with a German transl. and a supplementary chapter. Modern editions are: the Matthew-Passion by Ziebler (1934); hymns by Heyden (1932); Christmas choruses by Twittenhoff and Heyden (1932); other pieces by Schöberlein, etc.—Cf. C. von Winterfeld, Zur Geschichte heiliger Tonkunst, I (1850); H. H. Eggebrecht, Melchior

Vulpus, dissertation, in 'Max Schneider Festschrift' (1955).

Vycpálek, Ladislav, Czech composer; b. Prague, Feb. 23, 1882. He studied philology at the Charles Univ., Prague; Dr. phil., 1906; then studied composition with Novák (1908-12). From 1922 till 1942 he was in charge of the Mus. Department at the National Library in Prague. He wrote 2 cantatas to biblical texts, and one to Moravian folk tales; many choruses; some chamber music; songs to Czech words; made numerous arrangements of Moravian folk-songs.

Vyshnegradsky, Ivan, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, May 5, 1893; studied at the Cons. there; in 1922 settled in Paris. He devoted his entire life to the cause of quarter-tone music; built a quarter-tone piano with 2 keyboards and publ. a textbook on quarter-tone harmony (Paris, 1933). His works for quarter-tone ensembles include First Symphonic Fragment, arranged for 4 pianos (2 tuned a quarter-tone higher than the others); Ainsi parlait Zarathoustra (1928-30), similarly arranged for 4 pianos; Étude en forme de scherzo (1931) for 2 pianos tuned a quarter-tone apart; a cycle, 24 Preludes in the 13-tone quasi-diatonic quarter-tone scale for 2 pianos. On Nov. 10, 1945, he conducted in Paris the première of a 4-piano arrangement of his symph. poem Cosmos.

W

Waack (väähk), Karl, German conductor; b. Lübeck, March 6, 1861; d. Neumünster, March 7, 1922. He was a pupil of the grand-ducal Musikschule in Weimar; 1882, conductor in Abo, Finland; settled in Riga as teacher and conductor of the 'Wagnerverein.' After the outbreak of the war in 1914, he fled to Lübeck, where he conducted the 'Verein der Musikfreunde.' He edited Tristan und Isolde (1904) and Lohengrin (1907) for Breitkopf & Härtel's 'Textbibliothek' (with leading motifs in notation, and references to the full and piano scores); also wrote historical introductions and prepared tables of motifs for all the Wagner operas in the new editions brought out by Breitkopf & Härtel (1913). He publ. Richard Wagner, ein Erfüller und Vollender deutscher Kunst (1918).

Wart, Hendrikus Aloysius Petrus de, Dutch composer and organist; b. Amsterdam, June 28, 1863; d. Voorburg, near The Hague, April 2, 1931. He studied in The Hague; then taught piano and organ at the Cons. there; wrote 3 symphonies, numerous choral works, a string trio, piano works, songs.

Wachs, Paul Étienne Victor, French pianist and composer; b. Paris, Sept. 19, 1851; d. St. Mandé, July 6, 1915. He studied with César Franck and Victor Massé at the Paris Cons., and won 1st prize for organ playing; subsequently was engaged as church organist in Paris. He wrote works for organ, chamber music, etc., but achieved his most signal success as composer of attractive salon pieces for piano (Pluie d'étoiles, Le Collier de perles, Les Doigts, etc.); also well known are his Pastorale and Hosanna for organ.

Wachtel, Theodor, German tenor; b. Hamburg, March 10, 1823; d. Frankfurt, Nov. 14, 1893. The son of a livery-stable keeper, he carried on the business from the age of 17, after his father's death. When his voice was discovered, he was sent to Hamburg for study, and soon appeared in opera. After further study in Vienna, he sang at the Berlin Opera (1865-68); in 1869 he appeared in Paris; made 2 American tours (1871 and 1875); accumulated a considerable fortune. His voice was a powerful and brilliant lyric tenor; the role in which he made himself famous was that of the postillion in Adam's Postillon de Longjumeau, which he sang more than 1,000 times; also was successful as Raoul in Les Huguenots. His sole attempt as a Wagner singer, in Lohengrin (Leipzig, 1876), was a dismal failure.

Wachtmeister (vakt'-mī-ster), Axel Raoul, Count, composer; b. London (son of the Swedish ambassador there), April 2, 1865; d. Paris, Dec. 12, 1947. He studied music with Gedalge and Vincent d'Indy. He lived mostly in Paris, going to Sweden in the summers; also spent some time in the U. S.; his cantata Sappho was performed in N. Y. in 1917. He also wrote 2 symphonies; a symph. poem, Le Récit de l'horloge; Hymne à la lune, for baritone, chorus, and orch. (Cincinnati, 1933); Suite romantique for piano; songs.

Wackernagel, Philipp, German historian; b. Berlin, June 28, 1800; d. Dresden, June 20, 1877. He publ. several books dealing with music: Das deutsche Kirchenlied, von Luther bis auf N. Hermann (1841; 2 vols.); Bibliographie zur Geschichte des deutschen Kirchenliedes im 16. Jahrhundert (1855); and Das deutsche Kirchenlied von der ältesten Zeit bis zum Anfang des 17. Jahrhunderts (5 vols., 1864-77).

Waddington, Sidney Peine, English composer and pedagogue; b. Lincoln, July 23, 1869; d. Uplyme, Devon, June 2, 1953. He studied in London, Frankfurt, and Vienna; returning to England, he was engaged as chorusmaster at St. Mary of the Angels, Bayswater, London (1894-1905); in 1905 joined the staff of the Royal College of Music as harmony teacher. He wrote an operetta for children, Whimland; Ode to Music for soli, chorus, and orch.; a piano concerto; a piano quintet; a string quartet; a string trio; Suite de Pièces for piano 4 hands; a violin sonata; a cello sonata; etc.

Wade, Joseph Augustine, Irish composer; b. Dublin, 1796; d. London, July 15, 1845. He went to London in 1821, and established himself as a highly successful composer of popular ballads; his song Meet me by moonlight alone (1826) enjoyed great vogue, as did his vocal duet I've wandered in dreams. He also wrote an opera, The Two Houses of Granada (London, Oct. 31, 1826), and an operetta, The Pupil of Da Vinci (London, Nov. 30, 1839).

Wacfelghem, Louis van, Belgian violinist and composer; b. Bruges, Jan. 13, 1840; d. Paris, June 19, 1908. He studied violin at the Brussels Cons. with Meerts; went to Germany in 1860; played violin in the orch. of the Budapest Opera; settled in Paris in 1863; often visited London as chamber music player. With Grillet, Diémer, and Delsart he founded the Société des Instruments Anciens in Paris (1895), where he played the viola d'amore; composed and arranged a number of pieces for that instrument.

Waelput (väh'l-pööt), Hendrik, Flemish composer; b. Ghent, Oct. 26, 1843; d. there, July 8, 1885. He studied at the Brussels Cons.; won the Prix de Rome for his cantata Het Woud (The Forest). He was director of the Bruges Cons. (1869-71); conducted theater orchestras at The Hague, Dijon, Douai, Fécamp, and Lille (1872-76). From 1876 to 1879 he was active in Ghent; in 1879 appointed prof. of harmony at Antwerp Cons.; returned to Ghent in 1884. He wrote two operas: La Ferme du diable (Ghent, 1865) and Stella (in Flemish; Brussels, March 14, 1881); 5 symphonies, cantatas, and other works.—Cf. E. Callaert, Levensschets van Hendrik Waelput (1886);

P. Bergmans, Notice biographique sur Henry Waelput (1886); E. de Vynck, Henry Waelput (Brussels, 1935).

Waelrant (väh'l-rähnt), Hubert, Flemish composer and theorist; b. Tongerlo, Brabant, c. 1517; d. Antwerp, Nov. 19, 1595. He matriculated at the Univ. of Louvain in 1534; in 1544 became a tenor singer at Notre Dame in Antwerp, where he founded a music school in 1547. In 1554 he established a music publishing business in partnership with Jean Lact, retiring in 1558. As a teacher, he abandoned the old system of solmization by hexachords and introduced a new system of the 7 tone-names, bo ce di ga lo ma ni (hence called 'Bocedization'; also 'Voces belgicæ'). His compositions include a book of chansons, publ. by Phalèse in Louvain (1553-54), and a book of madrigals for 5 voices (Antwerp, 1558); as a publisher he brought out several sacred works by various composers; edited a collection, Symphonia angelica . . . containing madrigals of his own (1585).—Cf. G. Becker, Hubert Waelrant et ses psaumes. Notice biographique et bibliographique (Paris, 1881). See also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954, pp. 396 and 505).

Wacsberghe, Joseph Smits van, Dutch musicologist; b. Breda, April 18, 1901. He studied philosophy; joined the Jesuit Order; then took courses in music with C. Huygens (church music) and Marius Monnikendam (theory); taught at the Cons. of Rotterdam (1928-43) and in 1943 was appointed to the staff of the Amsterdam Cons.—Publications: Muziekgeschiedenis der Middeleeuwen, a voluminous survey of medieval music history in 2 parts (Tilburg, 1935-39 and 1939-47); Klokken en Klokkegieten in de Middeleeuwen (1937); Muziek en Drama in de Middeleeuwen (Amsterdam, 1942; in English, as Music and Drama in the Middle Ages, Stockholm, 1947); De Gregoriaanse Zang (Amsterdam, 1943; in English, as Gregorian Chant and its Place in the Catholic Liturgy, Stockholm, 1947); School en Muziek in de Middeleeuwen (Amsterdam, 1949).

Wagenaar (väh'-gäh-nähr), Bernard, composer and teacher; son of Johan Wagenaar; b. Arnhem, Holland, July 18, 1894. He studied music with his father; violin with Gerard Veerman in Utrecht. In 1920 he came to the U. S.; was a violinist in the N. Y. Philharmonic (1921-23). In 1927 he became instructor of composition and orchestration at the Juilliard Graduate School of Music, N. Y.—Works: Pieces of Eight, operatic comedy (1943; N. Y., 1944); symph. No. 1 (N. Y., Oct. 7, 1928); Divertimento (Detroit, Nov. 28, 1929); Sinfonietta (N. Y., Jan. 16, 1930); symph. No. 2 (N. Y., Nov. 10, 1932, Toscanini conducting); symph. No. 3 (N. Y., Jan. 23, 1937, composer conducting); violin concerto (1940); Triple Concerto for flute, harp, cello, and orch. (N. Y., May 20, 1941, composer conducting); symph. No. 4 (Boston, Dec. 16, 1949); 5 Tableaux for cello and orch. (Amsterdam, Jan. 9, 1955); 3 Songs from the Chinese (1921); violin sonata (1925); 3 string quartets; piano sonata; sonatina for cello and piano; concertino for 8 instruments.—Cf. D. Fuller, Bernard Wagenaar, in 'Modern Music' (May, 1944).

Wagenaar (väh'-gēh-nähr), Johan, Dutch organist and composer; b. Utrecht, Nov. 1, 1862; d. The Hague, June 17, 1941. He studied with Richard Hol in Utrecht (1875-85) and with H. von Herzogenberg in Berlin (1889); established himself as an organist at the Utrecht Cathedral; also became known as an eminent Bach player; in 1904 became director of the Utrecht Music School; from 1908 also music director at Arnhem, and from 1910 at Leyden. From 1919 to 1937 he was director of the Royal Cons. at The Hague.—Works: the operas De Doge van Venetie (Utrecht, 1904) and De Cid (Utrecht, 1916); also the burlesque opera Jupiter Amans (Scheveningen, 1925); humorous cantata De Schipbreuk (1889); the symph. poems Levenszomer (1901); Saul and David (1906), and Elverhøi (1940); the overtures Koning Jan (1889), Cyrano de Bergerac (1905), De getemde feeën (1906), Driekoningenavond (1927), and De filosofische prinses (1931); numerous choral works; songs; organ pieces.—Cf. C. Backers, Nederlandse Componisten van 1400 tot op onze Tijd (The Hague, 1941; pp. 96-99).

Wagenmann (väh'-gen-mann), Josef Hermann, German singing teacher and writer; b. Engingen, May 11, 1876; d. Berlin, July 30, 1940. He studied jurisprudence in Heidelberg and Leipzig; then studied singing with various teachers in Italy; became a renowned singing teacher in Berlin; in 1934 was appointed prof. at the Academy for Church- and School-Music there. He publ. Neue Ära der Stimmbildung für Singen und Sprechen (1903); Umsturz in der Stimmbildung (1904; 2nd ed., 1922); Lilli Lehmanns Geheimnis der Stimmbänder (1905; 2nd ed., 1926); Ein automatischer Stimmbildner (1906); Enrico Caruso und das Problem der Stimmbildung (1911; 3rd ed., 1924); Heinrich Knote (1931).

Wagenseil (väh'-gēn-zil), Georg Christoph, Austrian composer and theorist; b. Vienna, Jan. 15, 1715; d. there, March 1, 1777. He studied with J. J. Fux; was music teacher of the Empress Maria Theresia and her children; in 1739 was appointed court composer, besides holding other court positions and sinecures; remained in the Imperial services until his death. He wrote many operas in Italian; the following were produced in Vienna: La Generosità trionfante (1745); Ariodante (May 14, 1746); La Clemenza di Tito (1746); Alexander der Grosse in Indien (July 7, 1748); Il Siroe (1748); L'Olimpiade (May 13, 1749); Andromeda (1749); Antigone (May 13, 1750); Armida placata (1750); Euridice (1750); Le Cacciatori amanti (1755); Demetrio (1760); 3 oratorios; 30 symphonies; 27 harpsichord concertos; organ works. Two symphonies and a trio-sonata are in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (XV, 2); a divertimento was ed. by Blume. Wagenseil publ. the following: Suavis, artificiosae elaboratus concentus musicus, continens: 6 selectas parthias ad clavicembalum compositas (1740); 18 Divertimenti di cembalo, op. 1-3; a divertimento for 2 harpsichords; 2 divertimentos for harpsichord, 2 violins, and cello, op. 5; 10 symphonies for harpsichord, 2 violins, and cello, op. 4, 7, 8; 6 violin sonatas with harpsichord, op. 6.—Cf. K. Horwitz, Wagenseil als Symphoniker (dissertation, Vienna, 1906); W. Vetter, G. C. Wagenseil, ein Vorläufer Glucks, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 8; 1926); W. Vetter, Der Opernkomponist G. C. Wagenseil und sein Verhältnis zu Mozart und Gluck, in the 'Hermann Abert-Gedenkschrift' (Halle, 1928); J. Pelikant, Die Klavier-Werke Wagenseils (Vienna, 1926); G. Hausswald, Der Divertimento-Begriff bei G. C. Wagenseil, in the 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (1952).

Wagenseil (väh'-gēn-zil), Johann Christoph, German historian and librarian; b. Nuremberg, Nov. 26, 1633; d. Altdorf, Oct. 9, 1708. He publ. an important book, De Sacri Rom. Imperii Libera Civitate Noribergensi Commentatio (Altdorf, 1697), with a 140-page supplement (in German), Buch von der Meister-Singer holdseligen Kunst: Anfang, Fortübung, Nutzbarkeiten und Lehr-Sätze, containing poems and melodies by Frauenlob, Mügling, Marner, and Regensbogen; this section was the main literary source that Wagner used in Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg. — Cf. K. Mey, Der Meistersinger in Geschichte und Kunst (2nd ed., 1901); H. Thompson, Wagner & Wagnerseil. A Source of Wagner's Opera 'Die Meistersinger' (London, 1927).

Waghalter, Ignatz, conductor and composer, b. Warsaw, March 15, 1882; d. New York, April 7, 1949. He studied in Berlin, where he became conductor of the 'Komische Oper' (1907-11); then conducted in Essen (1911-12), and at the 'Deutsches Opernhaus' in Berlin-Charlottenburg. In 1925 he succeeded Strinsky as conductor of the State Symph. Orch. in N. Y. (for one season only); then returned to Berlin; in 1933 he went to Prague, and in 1934 to Vienna. He then went to America, settling in N. Y. in 1938. He was also a composer; wrote the operas Der Teufelsweg (Berlin, 1911), Mandragola (Berlin, Jan. 23, 1914; N. Y., March 4, 1925), Jugend (Berlin, 1917), Der späte Gast (Berlin, 1922), and Sataniel (Berlin, 1923); also operettas (Der Weiberkrieg and Wem gehört Helena?); a violin concerto; a violin sonata; a string quartet; piano pieces. — Cf. H. Leichtentritt, Ignatz Waghalter (N. Y., 1924).

Wagner, Cosima, wife of Richard Wagner, daughter of Franz Liszt and the Countess Marie d'Agoult; b. Bellaggio, on Lake Como, Dec. 25, 1837; d. Bayreuth, April 1, 1930. She received an excellent education in Paris; married Hans von Bülow on Aug. 18, 1857; there were two daughters of this marriage, Blandine and Daniela; the third daughter, Isolde, was Wagner's child, as was the fourth, Eva, and the son, Siegfried. A divorce followed on July 18, 1870; the marriage to Wagner took place in a few weeks, on Aug. 25, 1870. A woman of high intelligence, practical sense, and imperious character, Cosima Wagner emerged after Wagner's death as a powerful personage in all affairs regarding the continuance of the Bayreuth Festivals as well as the complex matters pertaining to the rights of performance of Wagner's works all over the world. She publ. her reminiscences of Liszt: Franz Liszt. Ein Gedenkblatt von seiner Tochter (Munich, 2nd ed., 1911). — Cf. M. Strauss, Wie ich Frau Cosima Wagner sehe (Magdeburg, 1912); E. Schuré, Femmes inspiratrices (Paris, 1930); W. Siegfried, Frau Cosima Wagner (Stuttgart, 1930); F. Blei, Gefährtinnen (Berlin, 1931); R. Du Moulin-Eckart, Cosima Wagner (Munich, 1929; English translation, in 2 vols., N. Y., 1930); M. von Waldberg, Cosima Wagners Briefe an ihre Tochter Daniela von Bülow, 1866-85 (Stuttgart, 1933); L. Scalero, Cosima Wagner (Zürich, 1934); P. Pretzsch, Cosima Wagner und H. S. Chamberlain im Briefwechsel, 1888-1908 (Leipzig, 1934); Briefwechsel zwischen Cosima Wagner und Fürst Ernst zu Hohenlohe-Langenburg (Stuttgart, 1937); M. von Millenkovich (M. Morold), Cosima Wagner, ein Lebensbild (Leipzig, 1937); E. Thierbach, ed., Die Briefe Cosima Wagners an Friedrich Nietzsche (Weimar, 1938-40). See also Wagner's autobiography, Mein Leben, and bibliography under Wagner.

Wagner, Georg Gottfried, German violinist; b. Mühlberg, Saxony, April 5, 1698; d. Plauen, March 23, 1756. He studied with Kuhnau at the Thomasschule, Leipzig (1712-19); was a violinist in Bach's orch., and was recommended by Bach for the post of cantor at Plauen, which he held from 1726 to his death. He also wrote numerous sacred works and instrumental compositions; his motet Lob und Ehre was misattributed to Bach by Breitkopf & Härtel (publ. 1819). — Cf. B. Hammerschmidt, G. G. Wagner (Chemnitz, 1912).

Wagner, Gerrit Anthonie Alexander, Dutch conductor and composer; b. Amsterdam, March 8, 1862; d. Antwerp, Nov. 24, 1892. He studied with Brandts-Buys in Amsterdam and with Benoit and Blockx in Antwerp; became a choral conductor there. He wrote an oratorio, Babylonische Gevangenschap; a symph. poem, Zusterengelen; much choral music; his promising career was terminated by an early death.

Wagner, Johanna, German soprano; b. Seelze, near Hanover, Oct. 13, 1826; d. Würzburg, Oct. 16, 1894. She was a natural daughter of Lieutenant Bock von Wülfigen of Hanover, and was adopted by Richard Wagner's brother, Albert; was thus regarded as Wagner's niece. Of a precocious talent, she acted on the stage as a small child; through Wagner she obtained a position at the Dresden Opera when she was 17; produced an excellent impression as Agathe in Der Freischütz, and was engaged as a regular member. She studied the part of Elisabeth in Tannhäuser with Wagner, and sang it in the première of the opera on Oct. 19, 1845, when she was barely 19 years old. In 1846 she went to Paris for further study, with Mme. Viardot-Garcia (1846-48); then was engaged at the Hamburg Opera (1849) and finally at the Court Opera in Berlin (1850-61). In 1859 she married the district judge Jachmann. After 1862 she acted mainly on the dramatic stage, reappearing in opera at the Bayreuth Festival in 1876 in the parts of Schwertleite and the First Norn. In 1882 she settled in Munich as a singing teacher. —Cf. J. Kapp and H. Jachmann, Richard Wagner und seine erste 'Elisabeth,' Johanna Jachmann-Wagner (Berlin, 1927; in English as Wagner and His First Elisabeth, London, 1944).

Wagner, Josef Franz, Austrian composer of light music; b. Vienna, March 20, 1856; d. there, June, 1908. He was a popular leader of military bands in Vienna; produced the operettas Der Herzub (Vienna, Feb. 7, 1895) and Der Cognac-König (Vienna, Feb. 20, 1897), which had little success, but achieved fame as the composer of the Austrian march Under the Double Eagle, which became a semi-official march of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Wagner, Joseph Frederick, American composer and conductor; b. Springfield, Mass., Jan. 9, 1900. He studied at the New England Cons. with Converse (until 1923); then at the College of Music of Boston Univ. (graduated 1932); also private pupil in advanced composition with Alfredo Casella in Boston (1927) and Nadia Boulanger in Paris (1934-35); conducting with Pierre Monteux in Paris and Felix Weingartner in Basel (1935). He was assistant director of music and supervisor of instrumental music in the Boston public schools from 1923 till 1944; member of the faculty of Boston Univ. College of Music (1929-40), Hunter College, N. Y. (1945-46), Brooklyn College (1945-47). In 1925 he founded the Boston Civic Symph. Orch., which he conducted until 1944, presenting many new American works; was conductor of the Duluth Symph. Orch. (1947-50) and of the Orquesta Sinfónica Nacional de Costa Rica in San José (1950-54); guest conductor in Havana, Helsinki, Stockholm, Washington, Buffalo, etc. From 1955 living mostly in N. Y. —Works: Ballets: The Birthday of the Infanta, after Oscar Wilde (1935), Dance Divertissement (1937), and Hudson River Legend (1941; Boston, March 1, 1944). For orch.: Miniature Concerto for piano and orch. (1919; Providence, June 11, 1920; revised as Concerto in G minor; New Brunswick, N. J., Aug. 3, 1930); symph. No. 1 (1943; Rochester, Oct. 19, 1944); Variations on an Old Form (Washington, 1941); Four Miniatures (N. Y., May 15, 1941); A Fugal Triptych for piano, percussion, and strings (Boston, May 25, 1941); symph. No. 2 (1943); Festival Processions (Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 16, 1946); American Jubilee, overture (1946); concertino for harp and orch. (1947); Radio City Snapshots (St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 6, 1947); Fantasy in Technicolor for piano and orch. (1948); Northern Saga, a 'landscape' for orch. (1949); concerto grosso (1949); symph. No. 3 (1951); violin concerto (1955); rhapsody for clarinet, piano, and strings (Boston, May 7, 1926); sinfonietta No. 1 (1931); sinfonietta No. 2 (Boston, Feb. 22, 1942); From the North Shore, '2 sea pieces' for string orch. (Boston, March 10, 1942); Introduction and Scherzo for bassoon and strings (1951); pieces for band. Chamber music: 3 Pastorals for oboe and piano (1941); violin sonata (1941); Concert Piece for clarinet and piano (1942); 2 Silhouettes for violin and piano (1944); Theme and Variations for flute, clarinet, violin, and cello (1950); Introduction and Scherzo for bassoon and piano (1951). For piano: sonatina (1934), 4 Landscapes (1936); From the Monadnock Region, suite of 5 pieces (1942); Radio City Snapshots (1945; also for orch.); sonata in B minor (1946); Pastoral and Toccata (1948); After-Dinner Sonata for 2 pianos (1949); Classical Variations for organ. Choral Works: Gloria in Excelsis, a Christmas cantata (1925); David Jazz, for baritone, men's chorus, and small orch. (1934); Psalm XXIX, for men's chorus with orch. (1934); The Pledge of Allegiance (1940); Song of All Seas, All Ships (1946); Ballad of Brotherhood (1947); Missa Brevis (1949); various pieces for women's chorus, children's chorus, etc.; songs. Published Orchestration: A Practical Handbook (N. Y., 1958).

Wagner, Karl Jakob, German composer, b. Darmstadt, Feb. 22, 1772; d. there, Nov. 25, 1822. He was a French horn player and conductor in the Darmstadt Orch.; studied theory with Abbé Vogler. He wrote 4 operas, all produced in Darmstadt: Pygmalion (1809), Der Zahnarzt (1810), Siaph und Nitetis (1811), and Chimene (1821); 2 symphonies; 4 overtures; trios for violin, flute, and cello; duos for flute and violin; 40 horn duos; 3 violin sonatas; variations for piano, etc. Many of his works have been published.

Wagner, Peter (Joseph), eminent musicologist; b. Kurenz, near Trèves, Aug. 19, 1865; d. Freiburg, Switzerland, Oct. 17, 1931. From 1876-86 he was a pupil at the Catholic Music School in Trèves and chorister at the Cathedral; studied musicology at the Univ. of Strasbourg from 1886, becoming Dr. phil. with the dissertation Palestrina als weltlicher Komponist (1890); studied further in Berlin under Bellermann and Spitta; 1893, instructor of church music at the Univ. of Freiburg (Switzerland); made full prof. in 1902. In 1901 he established at the Univ. the 'Gregorianische Akademie' for theoretical and practical study of plain-song, in which field he was an eminent authority. He was a member of the Papal Commission for the 'Editio Vaticana' of the Roman Gradual, and was made a Papal Chamberlain. In the course of numerous visits to Spain he did valuable research on the Mozarabic liturgical chant (cf. Spanische Forschungen der Görresgesellschaft, I and II; Report of the International Musicological Congress at Vienna, 1927; 'Musica Sacra,' 1927). —Writings: Das Madrigal und Palestrina, in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1892); Francesco Petrarca's 'Vergini' in der Komposition des Cipriano de Rore (1893); Einführung in die gregorianischen Melodien (1895; 2nd ed. in 3 parts, I. Ursprung und Entwicklung der liturgischen Gesangsformen bis zum Ausgang des Mittelalters [1901; 3rd ed. 1911; Engl. transl. 1907], II. Neumenkunde [1905; reprint, 1912], III. Gregorianische Formenlehre; eine choralische Stilkunde [1921]); Das Freiburger Dreikönigspiel (1903); Über traditionellen Choral und traditionellen Choralvortrag (1905); Der Kampf gegen die 'Editio Vaticana' (1907); Elemente des gregorianischen Gesanges (1909; 2nd ed., 1916); Geschichte der Messe (vol. I, 1913 [to 1600]); Einführung in die katholische Kirchenmusik (1919); also many valuable studies (in 'Adler-Festschrift,' 'J. Wolf-Festschrift,' etc.). A 'Festschrift' for him, ed. by K. Weinmann, was publ. in 1926. He wrote organ accompaniments for the Vatican Graduale and Vespereale.

Wagner (vagh'-ner), (Wilhelm) Richard, illustrious German composer; creator of the music drama; b. Leipzig, May 22, 1813; d. Venice, Feb. 13, 1883. His father, clerk in the city police court, died when Wagner was but six months old; his mother, Johanna Rosina, née Paetz (or Bectz), was ostensibly the daughter of a baker, though it is possible she was the natural daughter of Prince Friedrich Ferdinand Constantin of Weimar; about nine months after her husband's death, Johanna married the actor and playwright Ludwig Geyer, who had been an intimate member of the family circle for some time (the possibility that Geyer was Wagner's real father cannot be excluded; Wagner himself harbored such a suspicion). The family then moved to Dresden, where Wagner entered the Kreuzschule at the age of nine, remaining there until 1827 (his stepfather Geyer died in 1821). He was interested in the study of Greek, and showed strong literary inclinations, writing a grand tragedy, Leubald und Adelaide, in Shakespearian style, at the age of 14. In 1825 he began to take piano lessons from a certain Humann, and with characteristic impatience tried to play the Freischütz overture as soon as he had learned some 5-finger exercises; actually he made little progress on the piano; nor did he do better with the violin, which he took up with Robert Sipp. He was already beginning to be fascinated by opera, and with the idea of trying to write music for his 'tragedy' he began studying Logier's System der Musikwissenschaft und der praktischen Komposition. In 1827 the family settled in Leipzig, and in 1828 Wagner was sent to the Nikolaischule there (from 1830 he also attended the Thomasschule for a short time). About this time he had some lessons in theory from the organist C. G. Müller, and soon began to compose, writing a string quartet, a piano sonata, and an overture in Bb, which the conductor H. Dorn performed on Christmas Eve, 1830 (the work was received with ridicule). In 1831, after a brief plunge into the wild student life at Leipzig Univ., he received his first serious training in composition from Theodor Weinlig, cantor of the Thomasschule. The following year his op. 1 (a piano sonata) and op. 2 (4-hand Polonaise) were publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel; to this year (1832) also belong the Concert Overture in C (performed in Leipzig, April 30, 1832) and Symphony in C, first performed in the summer in Prague (whither Wagner had gone on a visit) and later in Leipzig (Jan. 10, 1833); these works were the result of Wagner's enthusiastic study of Beethoven's symphonies. It was likewise in 1832 that Wagner wrote his first opera libretto, Die Hochzeit, for which he composed an introduction, a septet, and a chorus, afterwards abandoning the work on account of objections raised by his sister Rosalie (she found the plot too 'gory'). In 1833 he began his career as a professional musician, being invited by his brother Albert, stage manager and singer at the Würzburg Theater, to take the position of chorusmaster there. He found leisure to compose a romantic opera in 3 acts, Die Feen, to a libretto of his own after La Donna serpente by Carlo Gozzi. In 1834 he was made conductor of the Magdeburg Theater; he brought out two overtures, to Die Feen and Columbus, songs to the farce, Der Berggeist, etc.; and finished book and score of a 2-act opera, Das Liebesverbot (after Shakespeare's Measure for Measure), the performance of which, on March 29, 1836, after hurried rehearsals, ended in chaos. He then went to Königsberg, became conductor of the theater, and married (Nov. 24, 1836) the actress Minna Planer. His sole new work here was the overture Rule Britannia. Next year he was appointed conductor of the Riga opera; he also conducted orchestral concerts, and completed the libretto of Rienzi, der Letzte der Tribunen, a tragic opera in 5 acts, of which he composed the first 2 in Riga. Inspired by the hope of equaling Meyerbeer's triumphs on the stage of the Grand Opéra at Paris, Wagner set out for that city in July, 1839, his contract at Riga having expired; the events of the stormy voyage, heightened by his previous perusal of the legend of the Flying Dutchman, made an indelible impression on his mind. During a stay in Boulogne, he met Meyerbeer, who gave him letters to musicians and publishers in Paris; he arrived there with his wife in September, and remained there until 1842. Unsuccessful in his attempts to get a hearing for Rienzi, he found himself in dire straits, and supported himself by hack-work, writing articles for musical papers, etc. His financial situation became desperate; on Oct. 28, 1840 he was put in the debtors' prison, and was not released until Nov. 17 of that year. In the midst of his troubles, he completed the grand Faust-Ouverture, intended for the first movement of a 'Faust Symphony'; the score of the opera Rienzi was finished, and sent to the Intendant of the Dresden Court Theater. Sketches for Der fliegende Holländer had also been submitted to the Director of the Opéra, who viewed them with approval, but the upshot was that Wagner was obliged to sell his libretto for 500 francs; it was then put into French verse by Foucher and set to music by Dietsch (produced at the Paris Opéra, Nov. 9, 1842). Meanwhile, Wagner went rapidly ahead with the composition of his own version, completing the score in 7 weeks (the overture was written later). A welcome stroke of good fortune—the acceptance of Rienzi at Dresden—enabled Wagner to return to Germany; in April, 1842, he was in Dresden to superintend the rehearsals, and Rienzi was produced there on Oct. 20, 1842, with great success. Another success—the première of Der fliegende Holländer at Dresden on Jan. 2, 1843—led to his appointment as music director of the Saxon Court. In this position he developed great activity for the next 6 years, bringing out the best operas (Iphigenie in Aulis, Der Freischütz, Euryanthe, Don Giovanni, Die Zauberflöte, Fidelio, etc.) in masterly fashion at the Dresden Court Theater; he also conducted the Dresden Liedertafel, for which he composed a 'biblical scene,' Das Liebesmahl der Apostel, for 3 choirs of men's voices, singing at first a cappella, finally with full orch. The 3-act opera Tannhäuser und der Sängerkrieg auf Wartburg (originally sketched in 1842 as Der Venusberg) was finished in April, 1844, and produced at Dresden on Oct. 19, 1845. Wagner then began work on the 3-act romantic opera Lohengrin, which was finished on April 28, 1848; but he was not able to secure its production in Dresden (only the finale to Act I was performed at the 300th anniversary of the court orch. on Sept. 22, 1848); the opera was finally produced by Liszt at Weimar in 1850 (Wagner himself did not hear the work until 1861). In 1848 he wrote the poem of Siegfried's Death (3-act drama with prologue). By this time Wagner, chafing under the restrictions of bourgeois conservatism, had joined a radical political organization, the 'Vaterlandsverein,' and soon allowed himself to be drawn into active participation in the revolutionary movement that came to a head with the May uprising of 1849. He was obliged to flee in order to escape arrest, going first to Weimar, where he was given a most friendly reception by Liszt (the two had met in Paris in 1840; Liszt remained a staunch champion of Wagner's music), then to Jena, and finally to Zürich. After a brief visit to Paris, he returned to Zürich, where he was joined by his wife, Minna. He now embarked upon a period of intense literary activity, writing, among other important essays explaining his philosophy of art: Die Kunst und die Revolution (1849), Das Kunstwerk der Zukunft (1850), Kunst und Klima (1850), and Oper und Drama (1851). The ideas advanced in Das Kunstwerk der Zukunft (Art-Work of the Future) gave rise to the description of Wagner's music as 'Zukunftsmusik' and himself (and Liszt) as 'Zukunftsmusiker'—in derision by opponents, but accepted by Wagner, Liszt, and their disciples as honorable. In 1852 Wagner completed the poems of the Nibelung trilogy (privately printed 1853). In Jan., 1850, he made another trip to Paris with the vain hope of having an opera produced there; becoming involved in a love affair with a married woman named Jennie Laussot, he followed her to Bordeaux and planned an elopement; but the affair came to nothing and Wagner returned to Minna in Zürich; but here he met a wealthy merchant, Otto

Wesendonk, with whose wife, Mathilde, he fell deeply in love. In 1857 Wagner and Minna took up their abode in a house called the 'Asyl,' on the Wesendonks' estate. Meanwhile Wagner had completed the full score of Das Rheingold (1854) and that of Die Walküre (1856), and in 1854, while under the influence of Schopenhauer's philosophy, he had conceived the idea of Tristan und Isolde; in 1856-57 he was at work both on Tristan and on Siegfried, always under the spell of his love for Mathilde Wesendonk, five of whose poems he set to music about this time. This situation led to a domestic crisis; Minna left Wagner and returned to Germany, while Wagner went to Venice, where he completed the 2nd act of Tristan in March, 1859 (the 3rd act was finished at Lucerne in Aug. of that year). Meanwhile, in the spring of 1855, Wagner had added to his reputation as a conductor by leading 8 concerts of the London Philharmonic Society. In Paris, whither he had gone in Sept., 1859, he conducted concerts of his own music, making many enthusiastic friends, but also stirring up active opposition, and incurring heavy debts. However, powerful interests in Paris were enlisted in his favor; the Emperor Napoleon III ordered that Tannhäuser (with the Venusberg scene revised) should be put in rehearsal at the Opéra, and it was given on March 13, 1861, though in the face of such tumultuous opposition by a hostile clique that it was withdrawn after the 3rd performance. But Wagner's general prospects were now improved owing to the fact that he had received an amnesty in the summer of 1860, allowing him to return to Germany (except Saxony, to which the amnesty was not extended until March, 1862). In 1859 Minna had rejoined him in Paris; but in the summer of 1861 she separated from him definitely (she died at Dresden in 1866). In 1861 he went to Vienna in the hopes of having Tristan produced and while there heard Lohengrin for the first time (May 31, 1861). Back in Paris he worked on the libretto of his comic opera Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (finished Jan., 1862), which he had sketched as far back as 1845. After completing the text he went to Biebrich-on-Rhine and began to compose the music, though the score was not finished until 1867. He made another visit to Vienna, where Tristan was finally accepted for production at the Court Opera; but after 77 rehearsals it was given up as 'impracticable.' In 1863 he gave some successful concerts in Moscow and St. Petersburg. But his financial situation had become desperate; for many years he had been harassed by debts, due largely to his extravagance, aggravated by his unstable position; an annuity received from Julie Ritter in 1851, and help from various other friends, provided only temporary relief; in March, 1864, he was forced to flee from his creditors, going to Stuttgart by way of Mariafeld. At this crisis King Ludwig II of Bavaria, who had just ascended the throne, invited Wagner to Munich with the promise of the amplest aid in carrying out his projects.

It was at this time that Wagner also reached a crisis in his emotional life. He had fallen in love with Liszt's daughter, Cosima, who was married to the conductor Hans von Bülow; the passion was reciprocated and received a further impetus after the arrival in Munich of Cosima and her husband, the latter chosen to conduct Wagner's works there (he gave the 1st performance of Tristan on June 10, 1865). On April 10, 1865, Isolde, the daughter of Cosima and Wagner, was born. During the summer of 1865, Wagner worked on a sketch of Parsifal (the idea was first conceived in 1845) and began to dictate his autobiography, Mein Leben, to Cosima. But court cabals, and the persistent opposition of his numerous enemies, united to the circumstances of his private life, rendered Wagner's position in Munich untenable, and in Dec., 1865, he left the city at King Ludwig's request, going to Switzerland. The following April he settled in the village of Tribschen, on Lake Lucerne, where he was soon joined by Cosima (their son Siegfried was born there on June 6, 1869). In 1867 he finished Die Meistersinger, which was produced in Munich on June 21, 1868; this was followed by the première of Das Rheingold, also in Munich, on Sept. 22, 1869; in the latter year Wagner completed the score of Siegfried and began Götterdämmerung (finished in 1874). In July, 1870, Cosima was divorced by Bülow, and on Aug. 25, 1870 she and Wagner were married. A significant episode of this period was the meeting with Nietzsche (1868), a frequent visitor at Tribschen, who was at first an ardent admirer of Wagner but later became a bitter opponent. In 1871 Wagner began the publication of his collected writings, and in that year the first 'Wagner Society' was founded at Mannheim by Emil Heekel. For many years Wagner had cherished the ambition of building his own theater for the production of his operas in a way that would meet his exacting artistic ideals. Had things gone better in Munich, he might have seen his scheme realized there; as it was, he received the offer of a site for his theater from the city of Bayreuth in 1872, and at once seized the opportunity. In April, 1872 he moved to Bayreuth; on May 22 the cornerstone of the 'Festspielhaus' was laid, the ceremony commemorated by a performance of Beethoven's 9th Symphony (this was Wagner's 59th birthday). On his 60th birthday (May 22, 1873), Wagner began to build his own home in Bayreuth, 'Wahnfried,' which was ready for occupancy in the spring of 1874. The fund required for erecting the new theater, which was built according to Wagner's original plans, was raised by private subscription, by the contributions of 'Wagner Societies' formed all over the world, and by a series of concerts arranged by Wagner in various German cities. At length, in August, 1876, the dream of his life was realized; three complete performances of Der Ring des Nibelungen were presented at the Bayreuth theater, attended by musical notables from the four quarters of the globe, and honored by the presence of Emperor William I and King Ludwig. Hans Richter conducted the orchestra, in which Wilhelmj led the violins. Musically a grand success, the undertaking left Wagner again heavily involved in debt; concerts given at the Albert Hall, London, in 1877, gave meager pecuniary returns; but he was finally relieved by the setting aside of the royalties derived from performances of the Ring at Munich. The next few years were occupied with literary work, and with the completion of his last dramatic composition, the 'Bühnenweihfestspiel' Parsifal, finished in 1882, and produced for the first time in Munich on July 26 of that year, other performances following through July and August, all under Wagner's personal supervision. He also made arrangements for the performances of 1883; in the autumn of 1882 ill health compelled him to seek relief in Venice, where he spent the winter; death (from an attack of angina pectoris) overtook him suddenly on Feb. 13, 1883. His remains were interred in the garden of his villa 'Wahnfried' at Bayreuth.

In comprehensiveness and grandeur of conception, originality and boldness of execution, vividness of characterization, intensity of expression and sustained power Wagner towers like a colossus above all other opera composers. From the outset he wrote his own librettos, based on his own poems. His early operas, Die Feen, Das Liebesverbot, and Rienzi, represent a formative period. With Der fliegende Holländer the individual Wagner, the genius, is unveiled, almost abruptly. The plain, straightforward mythical tale, a conflict of stormy emotions and the apotheosis of love and self-sacrifice, appealed directly to the heart; the music is as wildly romantic, as tenderly pathetic, and as sternly tragic, as the successive situations—and, above all, a music not written to exhibit the beauty and agility of the singers' voices but to follow the drama into its least details without the customary breaks made by set numbers (arias, duets, ensembles). The dramatic and musical unity is secured by the ingenious, and yet logical use of Leitmotive—leading motifs that allude to characters, objects, or abstract concepts in the music dramas (the term was popularized by Hans von Wolzogen; Wagner never used it himself). With Tannhäuser and Lohengrin (1848) Wagner's second period, the romantic, closes. In these two operas he employs substantially the same manner, though with growing variety and refinement. The third period opens six years later, with Das Rheingold (1854). With this work Wagner's ideas are carried out to their logical conclusion. He assumes the role of a reformer of the musico-dramatic stage; unsparingly criticizes and condemns the faulty and illogical plan of the Italian 'opera' and the French 'grand opera,' and naturally discards these titles, calling his own subsequent works 'music dramas.' To quote his own words, "the mistake in the art-form of the opera consists in this, that a means of expression (music) was made the end, and the end to be expressed (the drama) was made a means." The choice of subject is of the utmost importance, for not all subjects lend themselves to musical characterization. He formulated this conviction as follows: "The subject to be treated by the word-tone poet [Worttondichter] is the purely human, freed from all convention and from everything historically formal." The new art-work procreated its own artistic form: continuous thematic development of leading-motifs. Wagner's orchestra became an exponent of the dramatic action; the highly individualized and pregnant leading-motifs, now singly, in bold relief, now subtly intertwined and varied, plastically present the ever-changing soul-states of the characters of the drama and form the connecting links for the dramatic situations; the singing of the actors is resolved into a musical declamation, which Wagner himself described as 'Sprechsingen.'

Wagner's reform was incomparably more far-reaching in aim, import, and effect than Gluck's, whose main purpose was to counteract the arbitrary predominance of the singers; this Wagner tried to accomplish through insistence upon the drama and dramatic truth. When he rejected traditional opera, he did so with the conviction that this artificial form could never serve as a basis for true dramatic expression. In its place he gave the world a new form, the music drama. So revolutionary, so novel was Wagner's art, that he was obliged to train singers and conductors in the new style of interpretation demanded by his works. Thus he became the founder of interpretative conducting and of a new school of dramatic singing.

WAGNER

WORKS

WRITINGS—Wagner spent a large amount of his enormous productive activity in writing. Besides the dramatic works he set to music, he wrote the texts of a 2-act comic opera, Männerlist grösser als Frauenlist, oder Die glückliche Bärenfamilie (1837), a 4-act tragic opera, Die hohe Braut, oder Bianca und Giuseppe (first sketch, 1836; completed 1842; composed by J. F. Kittl, and produced in Prague, 1848), and a 3-act 'grosse Heldenoper' Siegfrieds Tod (1848; later expanded into Götterdämmerung); a 2-act comedy in ancient style, Eine Kapitulation (1871); dramatic sketches, Die Bergwerke zu Falun (1841), Die Sarazenen (1841), Friedrich der Rothbart (1846; enlarged 1848), Jesus von Nazareth (1848), Wieland der Schmied (1856), Die Sieger (1856). He expounded his theories on music and the music drama in several works, the more important of which are Die Kunst und die Revolution (1849), Das Kunstwerk der Zukunft (1850), Kunst und Klima (1850), Oper und Drama (1851), Eine Mittheilung an meine Freunde (1851), Über das Dirigieren (1869), Beethoven (1870). In his later years he also touched upon a large number of religious, social, and economic subjects. The first edition of Wagner's collected writings, edited by himself, was publ. at Leipzig in 9 vols. (1871-73) as Gesammelte Schriften und Dichtungen; it contains the dramatic works from Rienzi to Der Ring des Nibelungen, the social and esthetic essays, besides numerous others written between 1840 and 1871. The 2nd ed. (1883), with an additional vol. (Parsifal and essays), was also prepared by Wagner personally; the 3rd (1887) and 4th (1897) editions are only reprints. Not contained in these editions, and publ. separately, are: Entwürfe, Gedanken, Fragmente (ed. by H. von Wolzogen; Leipzig, 1885); Jesus von Nazareth (Leipzig, 1887); Nachgelassene Schriften und Dichtungen (Leipzig, 1895; 2nd ed., 1902); Gedichte (ed. by K. F. Glasenapp; Berlin, 1905); Entwürfe zu 'Die Meistersinger', 'Tristan und Isolde' und 'Parsifal' (ed. by H. von Wolzogen; Leipzig, 1907); essays and criticisms of the first Paris period ed. by R. Sternfeld as Aus R. W.s Pariser Zeit (Berlin, 1907); the texts of Die Feen,

Die hohe Braut, Das Liebesmahl der Apostel, a fragment of Die Hochzeit, the sketch to Die Bergwerke zu Falun, and early essays ed. by J. Kapp as Der junge W. (Berlin, 1910). All these works were included in the 5th edition, ed. by H. von Wolzogen and R. Sternfeld (12 vols.; Leipzig, 1911; English transl. by W. A. Ellis, The Prose Works of R. W., 8 vols.; London, 1892-1900). A popular edition of Wagner's writings (10 vols.) was publ. by Kistner and Siegel, in 1930 (2 supplementary vols. ed. by R. Sternfeld, 2 by W. Altmann, 1933).—A detailed autobiography, Mein Leben (only up to May, 1864) was privately printed (15 copies, 1870) for distribution among intimate friends; publ. in 2 vols. at Munich, 1911 (simultaneously in English, French, and Russian; new critical ed. by W. Altmann, Leipzig, 1933).—Very valuable and important is Wagner's voluminous published correspondence (see BIBLIOGRAPHY, section B).—Cf. also K. F. Glasenapp and H. von Stein, W.-Lexikon. Hauptbegriffe der Kunst- und Weltanschauung W.s in wörtlichen Ausführungen aus seinen Schriften zusammengestellt (Stuttgart, 1883) and K. F. Glasenapp, W.-Enzyklopädie. Hauptsächlich der Kunst- und Kulturgeschichte im Lichte der Anschauung W.s in wörtlichen Ausführungen aus seinen Schriften dargestellt (2 vols.; Leipzig, 1891).

OPERAS AND MUSIC DRAMAS: Die Hochzeit (fragment; composed 1832); Die Feen (composed 1833, produced Munich, June 29, 1888); Das Liebesverbot (Magdeburg, March 29, 1836, as Die Novize von Palermo; revived Munich, March 24, 1923; Berlin, Jan. 20, 1932); Rienzi, der letzte der Tribunen (Dresden, Oct. 20, 1842; Paris Théâtre Lyrique, April 6, 1869; N. Y., March 4, 1878; London, Jan. 27, 1879); Der fliegende Holländer (Dresden, Jan. 2, 1843; London, July 23, 1870; Philadelphia, Nov. 8, 1876; N. Y., Jan. 26, 1877); Tannhäuser (Dresden, Oct. 19, 1845; N. Y., April 4, 1859; London, May 6, 1876; 'Paris version' given at the Opéra, March 13, 1861); Lohengrin (Weimar, Aug. 28, 1850; N. Y., April 3, 1871; London, May 8, 1875; Paris, May 3, 1887); Tristan und Isolde (Munich, June 10, 1865; London, June 20, 1882; N. Y., Dec. 1, 1886); Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (Munich, June 21, 1868; London, May 30, 1882; N. Y., Jan. 4, 1886).—Der Ring des Nibelungen, 'dramatic trilogy' in 3 parts and an introduction, the latter consisting of Das Rheingold (Munich, Sept. 22, 1869; London, May 6, 1882; N. Y., Jan. 4, 1889); Part I, Die Walküre (Munich, June 26, 1870; N. Y., April 2, 1877; London, May 6, 1882); Part II, Siegfried (Bayreuth, Aug. 16, 1876; London, May 8, 1882; N. Y., Nov. 9, 1887); Part III, Götterdämmerung (Bayreuth, Aug. 17, 1876; London, May 9, 1882; N. Y., Jan. 25, 1888; first complete performance of entire Ring cycle, Bayreuth, Aug. 13, 14, 16, 17, 1876; N. Y., Metropolitan Opera House, March 4, 5, 8, and 11, 1889; without cuts, Feb. 20, 22, 27, and March 1, 1900). — Parsifal (Bayreuth, July 26, 1882; N. Y., Dec. 24, 1903; Paris, Jan. 2, 1914; London, Feb. 2, 1914).

WAGNER

ORCHESTRAL WORKS: Overture in Bb (composed 1830; score lost); Overture in D minor (1831; Leipzig, Feb. 23, 1832; unpubl.); Overture in C (1831); Overture to Raupach's König Enzo (1832; publ. 1908); Symphony in C (1832; publ. 1911); Symphony in E (1834; fragment; unpubl.); Overture to Apel's Columbus (1835; publ. 1904); Overture Rule Britannia (1836; publ. 1904); Overture Polonia (begun 1832, finished 1836; publ. 1904); Eine Faust-overtüre (1839-40; Dresden, July 22, 1844; rewritten and publ. 1855); Trauermusik for wind instruments, after motifs from Euryanthe (1844; Dresden, Dec. 14, 1844, on the arrival of Weber's remains from London; publ. 1906); Huldigungsmarsch, dedicated to King Ludwig II (1864; originally for military band; orchestral score begun by Wagner, finished by Raff; publ. 1869); Siegfried-Idyll (1870; Triebchen, Dec. 25, 1870; publ. 1877); Kaisermarsch (1871; Berlin, May 5, 1871; publ. 1871); Grosser Festmarsch, for the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition (1876; Philadelphia, May 10, 1876; publ. 1876).

CHORAL WORKS: Neujahrskantate for mixed chorus and orch. (1834; Magdeburg, Dec. 31, 1834; publ. 1914, arranged with a new text by Peter Cornelius as Künstlerweihe, and produced at Bayreuth on Wagner's 60th birthday); Volkshymne for mixed chorus and orch. (1837; Riga, Nov. 21, 1837; publ. 1914); La Descente de la Courtille for mixed chorus and orch. (1840; publ. 1914); Weihegruss for men's chorus and orch., for the unveiling of the statue of King Friedrich August of Saxony (1843; Dresden, June 7, 1843; vocal parts publ. 1906, full score 1914); Das Liebesmahl der Apostel, biblical scene for men's chorus and orch. (1843; Dresden, July 6, 1843; publ. 1844); Gruss seiner Treuen an Friedrich August den Geliebten for men's chorus a cappella, on the return from England of King Friedrich August of Saxony (1843; Dresden, Aug. 12, 1843; publ. 1914); An Webers Grabe for men's chorus a cappella, for the interment of Weber's remains (1844; Dresden, Dec. 15, 1844; publ. 1871).

PIANO WORKS: Sonata in D minor (1829; lost); Doppelfuge (composed probably in 1831; 103 bars, with corrections in Weinlig's hand; publ. 1912, in 'Die Musik'); sonata in Bb (1831; publ. 1832); Polonaise in D major, 4 hands (1831; publ. 1832); Fantasie in F# minor (1831; publ. 1905); sonata in A major (1831; unpubl.); Albumsonata in Eb (for Mathilde Wesendonck; 1853; publ. 1877); Zürcher Vielliebchen, waltz in E (1853; publ. 1896, in 'Musikalische Rundschau'); Albumblatt in C (for Countess Metternich; 1861; publ. 1871); Ankunft bei den schwarzen Schwänen (Albumblatt for Countess Pourtalès; 1861; publ. 1897); Albumblatt in Eb (for Frau Betty Schott; 1875; publ. 1876).

SONGS: Glockentöne (1832; unpubl.); Sieben Kompositionen zu Goethes Faust: 1, Lied der Soldaten. 2, Bauern unter der Linde. 3, Bränders Lied. 4, Lied des Mephistopheles (Es war einmal ein König). 5, Lied des Mephistopheles (Was machst du mir). 6, Gesang Gretchens (Meine Ruh ist hin). 7, Melodram Gretchens (Ach neige, du Schmerzensreiche) (1832; publ. 1914); Carnevalslied from Das Liebesverbot (1835; publ. 1885); Der Tannenbaum (1838; publ. 1871); Les deux grenadiers (Heine's poem; French transl. by Heine himself; composed and publ. 1839); Trois Romances: 1, Dors, mon enfant. 2, Attente. 3, Mignonne (1839-40; publ. as supplement to Lewald's Europa, 1841-42); Les Adieux de Marie Stuart (1840; publ. 1913); Tout n'est qu'images fugitives (1840; publ. 1914); Fünf Gedichte: 1, Der Engel. 2, Schmerzen. 3, Träume. 4, Stehe still. 5, Im Treibhaus (Nos. 1-3 composed Dec., 1857; No. 4, Feb., 1858; No. 5, June, 1858; all publ. 1862); Kraftliedchen (1871; publ. in 'Wiener Illustrierte Zeitung,' Oct. 14, 1877).

ARRANGEMENTS: Piano score of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (1830; unpubl.), of Donizetti's La Favorita and Elisir d'Amore (both publ. 1840) and of Halévy's La Reine de Chypre and Le Guitarrero (both publ. 1841); Gluck's Iphigénie en Aulide, new translation and new close to overture (1846; Dresden, Feb. 22, 1847; full score of new close, and complete piano score [by von Bülow] publ. 1859); Palestrina's Stabat Mater, with indications for performance (1848; Dresden, March 8, 1848; publ. 1877); Mozart's Don Giovanni, version of dialogues and recitatives and, in parts, new translation (1850; not produced; unpubl.).

The first complete edition of Wagner's works was publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel (1912-22).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

(The literature on Wagner is virtually inexhaustible; the following is a selective list, divided into 15 categories: A, biographical; B, correspondence; C, personal reminiscences; D, relations with contemporaries; E, criticism, appreciation; F, Wagner's art in relation to esthetics, philosophy, and religion; G, Wagner's art in relation to theory and technique; H, Wagner and Bayreuth; I, Wagner's literary sources; J, analyses, guides, stories of the operas; K, characters; L, Wagner as writer; M, catalogues, year-books, etc.; N, iconography; O, miscellaneous.)

A—BIOGRAPHICAL: R. Wagner, Mein Leben (see above, WRITINGS); C. Cabrol, R. W. (Paris, 1861); A. de Gasperini, La nouvelle Allemagne musicale: R. W. (Paris, 1866); F. Filippi, R. W. (Leipzig, 1876); P. Lindau, R. W. (Paris, 1885); K. F. Glasenapp, R. W.'s Leben und Wirken (2 vols.; Leipzig, 1876-77; 2nd ed., 1882; 3rd ed., in 6 vols., as Das Leben R. W.'s, Leipzig, 1894-1911); F. Hueffer, R. W. (London, 1883; new ed., 1912); A. Jullien, R. W. Sa vie et ses œuvres (Paris, 1886; English transl., Boston, 1892, reprinted Philadelphia, 1910); G. Kobbe, W.'s Life and Works (2 vols., N. Y., 1890); H. T. Finck, W. and His Works (2 vols.; N. Y., 1893; 5th ed., 1898); H. S. Chamberlain, R. W. (Munich, 1896; 4th ed., 2 vols., 1912; English transl., London, 1897); W. A. Ellis, Life of R. W. (6 vols.; London, 1900-08; vols. I-III based on Glasenapp); W. J. Henderson, R. W., His Life and His Dramas (N. Y., 1901; revised, 1923); Mrs. M. Burrell, R. W. His Life and Works from 1813 to 1834 (London, 1898; a sumptuous folio richly illustrated; with many facsimiles of original documents, etc.); R. Bürkner, R. W. Sein Leben und seine Werke (Jena, 1906; 6th ed., 1911); M. Koch, R. W. (3 vols.; Berlin, 1906, 1912, 1914; with detailed bibliography); J. Kapp, R. W. (Berlin, 1910; 32nd printing, 1929); F. Pfuhl, R. W. Sein Leben und Schaffen (Berlin, 1911; 4th ed., Bielefeld, 1924); E. Newman, W. as Man and Artist (London, 1914; 2nd American ed., N. Y., 1924); H. Lichtenberger, W. (Paris, 1925); W. Wallace, W. as He Lived (London, 1925; new ed., 1933); L. Barthou, La Vie amoureuse de R. W. (Paris, 1925; in English as The Prodigious Lover, N. Y., 1927); V. d'Indy, R. W. et son influence sur l'art musical français (Paris, 1930); H. Reisinger, Unruhiges Gestirn; die Jugend R. W.'s (Leipzig, 1930; in English as Restless Star, N. Y., 1932); Max Morold (pen-name of Max v. Millenkovich), W.'s Kampf und Sieg

(Zürich, 1930); G. de Pourtales, R. W. (Paris, 1932; English transl., N. Y., 1932); A. Spring, R. W.'s Weg und Wirken (Stuttgart, 1933); P. Lalo, R. W. (Paris, 1933); W. J. Turner, W. (London, 1933); Sir W. H. Hadow, W. (London, 1934); M. Fehr, R. W.'s Schweizer Zeit (2 vols., Aarau, 1934-53); R. L. Jacobs, W. (London, 1935); Ernest Newman, The Life of R. W. (4 vols.; N. Y., vol. I [1813-48], 1933; vol. II [1848-59], 1937; vol. III [1859-66], 1941; vol. IV [1866-83], 1946; the most thorough and authoritative biography); H. Malherbe, R. W. Révolutionnaire (Paris, 1938); E. Kretzschmar, R. W. Sein Leben in Selbstzeugnissen, Briefen und Berichten (Berlin, 1939); O. Strobel, Neue Urkunden zur Lebensgeschichte R. W.'s 1864-1882 (Karlsruhe, 1939; a supplement to the 4 vols. of correspondence between W. and Ludwig II; see CORRESPONDENCE); M. von Millenkovich, Dreigestirn: W., Liszt, Bülow (Leipzig, 1941); W. Reich, R. W., Leben, Fühlen, Schaffen (Olten, 1948); K. Ipsen, R. W. in Italien (Salzburg, 1951); T. W. Adorno, Versuch über Wagner (Berlin, 1952); P. A. Loos, R. W., Vollendung und Tragik der deutschen Romantik (Munich, 1952); O. Strobel, R. W. Leben und Schaffen (Bayreuth, 1952); Z. von Kraft, R. W.: ein dramatisches Leben (Munich, 1953); R. Dumesnil, R. W. (Paris, 1954); C. von Westernhagen, R. W.: sein Werk, sein Wesen, seine Welt (Zürich, 1956).

B—CORRESPONDENCE: Briefwechsel zwischen W. und Liszt (2 vols., Leipzig, 1887; 2nd ed., 1900; English transl., London, 1888; 2nd ed., 1897, with index by W. A. Ellis). These two editions contain only the letters from 1841-61, and many passages referring to persons still living at the time of publication were omitted; in the 3rd ed., prepared by E. Kloss (1 vol., 1910), all letters up to Wagner's death are included, and the omitted portions restored.—Eliza Wille, Fünfzehn Briefe des Meisters [to her], nebst Erinnerungen und Erläuterungen (Leipzig, 1887); W.'s Briefe an Dresdener Freunde (Uhlig, Fischer, Heine; Leipzig, 1888; English transl., London, 1890); La Mara, R. W.'s Briefe an Aug. Röckel (Leipzig, 1894; 2nd ed., 1903; English transl., London, 1897); H. S. Chamberlain, R. W.'s echte Briefe an Ferd. Praeger (Bayreuth, 1894; 2nd ed., Berlin, 1908); E. Kastner, Briefe von R. W. an seine Zeitgenossen (1830-83) (Berlin, 1897; very incomplete); K. Heckel, Briefe an Emil Heckel (Berlin, 1898; 3rd ed., 1911; English transl., London, 1899); W. Golther, R. W. an Mathilde Wesendonck, Tagebuchblätter und Briefe (Berlin, 1904; 84th printing, 1922; English transl., London, 1905); W. Altmann, R. W.'s Briefe nach Zeitfolge und Inhalt (Leipzig, synopses of 3143 letters; new ed., 2 vols., 1933; English transl., London, 1927); W. Golther, Briefe R. W.'s an Otto Wesendonck [1852-70] (Berlin, 1905; English transl., London, 1911); D. Spitzer, R. W.'s Briefe an eine Putzmacherin (Vienna, 1906; in English as R. W. and the Seamstress, N. Y., 1941); W. Golther, Familienbriefe von R. W. [1832-74] (Berlin, 1906; English transl., London, 1911); K. F. Glaschnapp, Bayreuther Briefe von R. W. [1871-83] (Berlin, 1907); E. Kloss, R. W. an seine Künstler (Berlin, 1908); H. von Wolzogen, R. W. an Minna Wagner (2 vols., Berlin, 1908; English transl., London, 1909); E. Kloss, R. W. an Freunde und Zeitgenossen (Berlin, 1909); T. Apel, Jr., R. W. an Theodor Apel (Leipzig, 1910); W. Altmann, R. W.'s Briefwechsel mit seinen Verlegern (3 vols.; Leipzig, 1911); J.-G. Prod'homme, W. and the Paris Opéra (unpubl. letters from Feb. and March 1861), in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1915); E. Kloss, Briefe an Hans von Bülow (Jena, 1916).—Almost all the above collections were republ. in 1912 by Breitkopf & Härtel as R. W.'s Briefe (17 vols.); a number of the letters appear in mutilated form (portions expressing political and religious views being suppressed). An un mutilated edition was begun by J. Kapp and E. Kastner, R. W.'s gesammelte Briefe [1830-50] (2 vols.; Leipzig, 1914).—S. von Haussegger, R. W.'s Briefe an Frau Julie Ritter (Munich, 1920); E. Förster-Nietzsche, The Nietzsche-W. Correspondence (N. Y., 1921); L. Karpath, Briefe an Hans Richter (Berlin, 1924); R. Sternfeld, R. W. Aufsätze und Briefe des Meisters aus Paris (Grossenwörden, 1927); W. Lippert, R. W.'s Verbannung und Rückkehr, 1849-62 (Dresden, 1927; English transl. as W. in Exile, London, 1930); H. Scholz, R. W. an Mathilde Maier (Leipzig 1930); E. Lenrow, The Letters of R. W. to A. Pusinelli (N. Y., 1932); J. Tier-sot, Lettres françaises de R. W. (Paris, 1935); W. Schuh, Die Briefe R. W.'s an Judith Gautier (Zürich, 1936); K. Geiringer, W. and Brahms (with unpubl. letters), in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1936); O. Strobel, König Ludwig II und R. W.; Briefwechsel (5 vols.; Karlsruhe, 1936-39); A. Holde, Four Unknown Letters of R. W., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1941); J. N. Burk, ed., Letters of R. W. The Burrell Collection (N. Y., 1950; in German, Frankfurt, 1953).

C—PERSONAL REMINISCENCES: H. von Wolzogen, Erinnerungen an R. W. (Leipzig, 1883; English transl., Bayreuth, 1894); A. Schilling, Aus R. W.'s Jugendzeit (Berlin, 1898; reminiscences of Wagner's step-sister Cäcilie Avenarius); E. Schuré, Souvenirs sur R. W. (Paris, 1900; German transl., Leipzig, 1900); E. von Possart, Die Separat-Vorstellungen vor König Ludwig II. Erinnerungen (Munich, 1901); L. Schemann, Meine Erinnerungen an R. W. (Stuttgart, 1902); G. A. Kietz, R. W. in den Jahren 1842-49 und 1873-75 (Dresden, 1905); A. Kohut, Der Meister von Bayreuth (Berlin, 1905); E. Michotte, Souvenirs personnels (Paris, 1906); A. Gobineau, Ein Erinnerungsbild aus Wahnfried (Stuttgart, 1907); A. Neumann, Erinnerungen an R. W. (Leipzig, 1907; English transl., N. Y., 1908); H. Schmidt and U. Hartmann, R. W. in Bayreuth. Erinnerungen (Leipzig, 1910); Siegfried Wagner, Erinnerungen (Stuttgart, 1923; extended ed., privately printed, 1935); Judith Gautier, Après de R. W.; Souvenirs (1861-1883) (Paris, 1943).

D—RELATIONS WITH CONTEMPORARIES: J. L. Craemer, König Ludwig II. und R. W. (Munich, 1901); F. Gerard, Romance of King Ludwig II of Bavaria. His Relation with R. W. (London, 1901); S. Röckel, Ludwig II. und R. W. in den Jahren 1864-65 (Munich, 1903; 2nd ed., 1913); J. Kapp, R. W. und Franz Liszt. Eine Freundschaft (Berlin, 1908); H. Bélart, Friedr. Nietzsches Freundschaftstragödie mit R. W. (Dresden, 1912) and R. W.'s Liebestragödie mit Mathilde Wesendonck (Dresden, 1912); J. Kapp, R. W. und die Frauen (Berlin, 1912; new revised ed., 1951; in English as The Women in W.'s Life, N. Y., 1931); E. Förster-Nietzsche, W. und Nietzsche zur Zeit ihrer Freundschaft (Munich, 1915); C. Sarti, W. und Nietzsche (N. Y., 1915); E. Schuré, Femmes inspiratrices (Paris, 1930); M. Herwegh, Au banquet des dieux: F. Liszt, R. W. et ses amis (Paris, 1931); L. Barthou, R. W. et Judith Gautier, in 'Revue de Paris' (1932); P. G. Dippel, Nietzsche und W. (Berne, 1934).

E—CRITICISM, APPRECIATION: F. Hinrichs, R. W. und die neuere Musik: eine kritische Skizze (Halle, 1854); F. K. F. Müller, R. W. und das Musik-Drama (Leipzig, 1861); L. Nohl, Gluck und W. Über die Entwicklung des Musikdramas (Munich, 1870); F. Nietzsche, Die Geburt der Tragödie aus dem Geiste der Musik (Leipzig, 1872; in vol. I of Nietzsches Werke, 1895; English transl. in O. Levy's ed. of complete works, Edinburgh, 1910-14); E. Dannreuther, R. W. His Tendencies and Theories (London, 1873); F. Hueffer, R. W. and the Music of the Future (London, 1874); E. Schuré, Le Drame musical: I.

La Musique et la Poésie dans leur développement historique. II. Wagner. Son Œuvre et son idée (Paris, 1875; 3rd ed., augmented, 1894); L. Nohl, Das moderne Musikdrama (Vienna, 1884); F. Nietzsche, Der Fall W. and N. contra W. (both Leipzig, 1888; in vol. VIII of Nietzsches Werke, 1895; English transl. in vol. XI of complete works; bitter invective in place of former admiration); H. E. Krehbiel, Studies in the Wagnerian Drama (N. Y., 1891); M. Kufferath, Le Théâtre de W. de Tannhäuser à Parsifal. Essais de critique littéraire, esthétique et musicale (6 vols.; Paris, 1891-98); H. S. Chamberlain, Das Drama R. W.s. Eine Anregung (Leipzig, 1892; 5th ed., 1913; English transl., London, 1915); G. Servières, R. W. jugé en France (Paris, 1897); G. B. Shaw, The Perfect Wagnerite (London 1898; also in vol. 17 of complete works, 1932); Arthur Seidl, Wagneriana (3 vols.; Berlin, 1901-02; continuation as Neue Wagneriana, Bonn, 1914); E. Istel, Das Kunstwerk R. W.s (Leipzig, 1910; 2nd ed., 1919); G. Adler, R. W. (lectures; Vienna, 1904; 2nd ed., 1922); P. Bekker, R. W. Das Leben im Werke (Stuttgart, 1924; English transl., London, 1931); J. Kapp, W. und die Berliner Oper (Berlin, 1933); J. Kapp, Das Liebesverbot, Entstehung und Schicksale des Werkes von R. W. (Berlin, 1933); A. Bahr-Mildenburg, Tristan und Isolde (Leipzig, 1936; vol. I of Darstellung der Werke R. W.s aus dem Geiste der Dichtung und Musik); R. C. Schuster, R. W. und die Welt der Oper (Munich, 1937); L. Gilman, W.s Operas (N. Y., 1937); T. Mann, Freud, Goethe, W. (N. Y., 1937); E. Borrelli, Estetica wagneriana (Florence, 1940); J. Barzun, Darwin, Marx, Wagner (Boston, 1941); M. Doisy, L'Œuvre de R. W. du Vaisseau fantôme à Parsifal (Brussels, 1945); M. Beaufils, W. et le wagnérisme (Paris, 1947); P. W. Jacob, Taten der Musik; R. W. und sein Werk (Regensburg, 1952). Liszt's fine essays on Tannhäuser (1849), Lohengrin (1850), Der fliegende Holländer (1854), and Das Rheingold (1855) are in vol. III, 2, of his Gesammelte Schriften (Leipzig, 1899).

F—WAGNER'S ART IN RELATION TO ESTHETICS, PHILOSOPHY, AND RELIGION: F. von Haasegger, R. W. und Schopenhauer (Leipzig, 1878; 2nd ed., 1897); J. Freson, Essais de Philosophie et de l'Art: l'esthétique de R. W. (2 vols.; Paris, 1893); M. Hébert, Le Sentiment religieux dans l'œuvre de R. W. (Paris, 1894); R. Louis, Die Weltanschauung R. W.s (Leipzig, 1898); D. Irvine, Parsifal and W.s Christianity (London, 1899); M. Kufferath, Musiciens et Philosophes: Tolstoy, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, W. (Paris, 1899); P. Moos, R. W. als Ästhetiker (Berlin, 1906); R. Richter, Kunst und Philosophie bei R. W. (Leipzig, 1906); H. Bêlart, F. Nietzsche und R. W.: Ihre persönlichen Beziehungen, Kunst- und Weltanschauungen (Berlin, 1907); G. Robert, Philosophie et drame. Essai d'une explication des drames wagnériens (Paris, 1907); O. Schmiedel, R. W.s religiöse Weltanschauung (Tübingen, 1907); W. Vollert, R. W.s Stellung zur christlichen Religion (Wismar, 1907); L. Dauriac, Le Musicien-poète R. W. Étude de psychologie musicale (Paris, 1908); G. Braschowanoff, Von Olympia nach Bayreuth (2 vols.; Leipzig, 1911-12); F. Gross, Die Wiedergeburt des Sehers (Zürich, 1927); A. Drews, Ideengehalt von W.s dramatischen Dichtungen (Leipzig, 1931); G. Wooley, R. W. et le symbolisme français (Paris, 1931); F. Gross, Der Mythos W.s (Vienna, 1932); G. Frommel, Der Geist des Antike bei R. W. (Berlin, 1933); I. Wyzewska, La Revue wagnérienne; essai sur l'interprétation esthétique de W. en France (Paris, 1934); K. R. Karzer, R. W. der Revolutionär gegen das 19. Jahrhundert (1934); W. Engelsmann, Erlösung dem Erlöser: R. W.s religiöse Weltgestalt (Leipzig, 1936); M. Boucher, Les Idées politiques de R. W. (Paris, 1948; in English, N. Y., 1950); K. Overhoff, R. W.s germanisch-christlicher Mythos . . . (Dinkelsbühl, 1955).

G—WAGNER'S ART IN RELATION TO THEORY AND TECHNIQUE: C. Kistler, Harmonielehre . . . (Heilbronn, 1879; 2nd ed., greatly augmented, 1903; based on Wagner's harmonic innovations); K. Mayrberger, Die Harmonik R. W.s (Chemnitz, 1883); S. Jadassohn, Melodik und Harmonik bei R. W. (Berlin, 1899); E. Thomas, Die Instrumentation der 'Meistersinger' von R. W. (2 vols.; Mannheim, 1899; 2nd ed., Leipzig, 1907); G. Capellen, Ist das System Simon Sechters ein geeigneter Ausgangspunkt für die theoretische Wagnerforschung? (Leipzig, 1902); É. Poincé, Le Discours musical, son principe, ses formes expressives, spécialement d'après la partition des 'Maîtres-Chanteurs' de R. W. (Paris, 1902); E. Ergo, Über R. W.s Harmonik und Melodik (Leipzig, 1914); E. Kurth, Romantische Harmonik und ihre Krise in W.s 'Tristan' (Bern and Leipzig, 1920; 2nd ed., Berlin, 1923; valuable); A. Lorenz, Das Geheimnis der Form bei R. W. (4 vols.; Berlin: I, Der Ring, 1924; II, Tristan, 1926; III, Meistersinger, 1930; IV, Parsifal, 1933; valuable).

H—WAGNER AND BAYREUTH: F. Nietzsche, W. in Bayreuth (Chemnitz, 1876; in

vol. I of Nietzsches Werke, Leipzig, 1895; new ed., 1931; English transl. in complete works, Edinburgh, 1910-14); H. von Wolzogen, Grundlage und Aufgabe des Allgem. Patronalvereins zur Pflege und Erhaltung der Bühnenfestspiele in B. (Chemnitz, 1877); K. Heckel, Die Bühnenfestspiele in B. (Leipzig, 1891); H. Porges, Die Bühnenproben zu den Festspielen des Jahres 1876 (Leipzig, 1896); F. Weingartner, B., 1876-96 (Berlin, 1896; 2nd ed., 1904); H. S. Chamberlain, Die ersten 20 Jahre der B. Bühnenfestspiele (Bayreuth, 1896); E. Kloss, Zwanzig Jahre B. (Berlin, 1896; English transl., London, 1896); F. Hofmann, B. und seine Kunstdenkmale (Munich, 1902); W. Golther, B. (Berlin, 1904); R. Sternfeld, R. W. und die B. Bühnenfestspiele (2 vols.; Berlin, 1906; new ed., 1927); M. G. Conrad, W.'s Geist und Kunst in B. (Munich, 1906); A. Prüfer, Das Werk von B. (Leipzig, 1909); A. Prüfer, R. W. in B. (Leipzig, 1910); H. von Wolzogen, Heinrich von Steins Briefwechsel mit H. von Wolzogen. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Bayreuther Gedankens (Leipzig, 1910); H. Bahr and A. Bahr-Mildenburg, Bayreuth und das W.-Theater (Leipzig, 1910; 2nd ed., 1912; English transl., London, 1921); C. V. Kerr, The Story of Bayreuth as Told in the Bayreuth Letters of R. W. (Boston, 1912); R. Du Moulin-Eckart, Wahnfried (Leipzig, 1925); P. Bülow, R. W. und sein Werk von Bayreuth (Frankfurt, 1927); F. Klose, Bayreuth. Eindrücke und Erlebnisse (Regensburg, 1929); O. Bie, R. W. und Bayreuth (Leipzig, 1931); J. Kneise, Der Kampf zweier Welten um das Bayreuther Erbe (Kassel, 1931); L. Reichwein, Bayreuth (Bielefeld and Leipzig, 1934); H. B. Brand, Aus R. W.'s Leben in Bayreuth (Munich, 1935); S. Rützow, R. W. und Bayreuth (Munich, 1943; 2nd ed., 1953); J. Bertram, Der Seher von Bayreuth (Berlin, 1943); E. Ebermayer, Magisches Bayreuth, Legende und Wirklichkeit (Stuttgart, 1951).

I—WAGNER'S LITERARY SOURCES: F. Schultz, Das neue Deutschland. Seine alten Heldensagen und R. W. (Leipzig, 1888); E. Meinck, Die sagenwissenschaftlichen Grundlagen der Nibelungendichtung W.'s (Berlin, 1892); J. L. Weston, The Legends of the Wagnerian Drama (London, 1896; new ed., 1903); A. M. Bowen, The Sources and Text of W.'s 'Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg' (Munich, 1897); J. Nover, Die Tannhäuser-sage und ihre poetische Gestaltung (Hamburg, 1897); E. Wechsler, Die Sage vom hl. Gral in ihrer Entwicklung bis auf R. W.'s 'Parsifal' (Halle, 1898); J. Nover, Die Lohengrinsage und ihre poetische Gestaltung (Hamburg, 1899); Hermann von der Pfordten, Handlung und Dichtung der Bühnenwerke R. W.'s nach ihren Grundlagen in Sage und Geschichte (Berlin, 1900; 4th ed., 1908); W. Golther, Die sagengeschichtlichen Grundlagen der Ringdichtung R. W.'s (Berlin, 1902); S. Valot, Les Héros de R. W. Études sur les origines indoeuropéennes des légendes wagnériennes (Paris, 1903); W. C. Sawyer, Teutonic Legends in the Nibelungenlied and the Nibelungen Ring (Philadelphia, 1904); W. Golther, Tristan und Isolde in den Dichtungen des Mittelalters und der neuen Zeit (Leipzig, 1907); R. von Kralik, Die Gralsage (Ravensburg, 1907); E. Elster, Tannhäuser in Geschichte, Sage und Dichtung (Bromberg, 1908); L. von Schroeder, Die Wurzeln der Sage vom hl. Gral (Vienna, 1910); F. Strich, Die Mythologie in der deutschen Literatur von Klopstock bis W. (2 vols.; Halle, 1910); W. Golther, Zur deutschen Sage und Dichtung (Leipzig, 1911); O. Rank, Die Lohengrinsage (Vienna, 1911); W. Golther, Parsifal und der Gral in deutscher Sage des Mittelalters und der Neuzeit (Leipzig, 1913); A. Bonilla y San Martín, Las Leyendas de W. en la literatura española (Madrid, 1913); G. Brownell, The Wagnerian Romances (N. Y., 1925); H. Thompson, W. and Wagenseil: A Source of W.'s Opera 'Die Meistersinger' (London, 1927); M. Unger, The Cradle of the Parsifal Legend, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1932); A. Salazar, Parsifal in Romanic Lands, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1939); R. M. Rayner, Wagner and 'Die Meistersinger' (Oxford, 1940); H. Hirsch, R. W. und das deutsche Mittelalter (Vienna, 1944).

J—ANALYSES, GUIDES, STORIES OF THE OPERAS: G. Kobbé, R. W.'s 'Tristan und Isolde' (N. Y., 1886); A. Smolian, The Themes of 'Tannhäuser' (London, 1891); A. Lavignac, Le Voyage artistique à Bayreuth (Paris, 1897; 14th printing, 1925; English transl. as The Music-Dramas of R. W., N. Y., 1898; new ed., 1932); J. Tiersot, Études sur les Maîtres-Chanteurs de Nuremberg, de R. W. (Paris, 1899); G. Kobbé, W.'s Music Dramas Analyzed (N. Y., 1904); G. Kobbé, How to Understand W.'s Ring (7th ed., N. Y., 1916); W. Dry, Erläuterungen zur R. W.'s Tondramen (2 vols., Leipzig, 1906-07); S. H. Hamer, The Story of 'The Ring' (N. Y., 1907); M. Burckhardt, Führer durch R. W.'s Musikdramen (Berlin, 1909); L. Windsperger, Das Buch der Motive und Themen aus sämtlichen Opern und Musikdramen R. W.'s (for piano, with explanatory text; Mainz, 1921); W. Wilms-hurst, Parsifal (London, 1922; 'Mus. Pilgrim' series); A. Cœuroy, La Walkyrie de R. W. (Paris, 1924); C. Winn, The Mastersingers of W. (London, 1925; 'Mus. Pilgrim' series); A. Himonet, Lohengrin de R. W. (Paris, 1925); A. E. F. Dickinson, The Musical Design of 'The Ring' (London, 1926; 'Mus. Pilgrim' series); E. Newman, Stories of the Great Operas (vol. I, R. W.; N. Y., 1928); A. Bucsst, R. W., The Nibelung's Ring (London, 1932; 2nd ed., 1952); R. Grisson, Beiträge zur Auslegung von R. W.'s 'Ring des Nibelungen' (Leipzig, 1934); V. d'Indy, Introduction à l'étude de Parsifal de W. (Paris, 1937); E. Hutcheson, A Musical Guide to R. W.'s Ring of the Nibelung (N. Y., 1940); S. A. Luciani, Il Tristano e Isolda di R. W. (Florence, 1942); G. Gavazzini, Il Siegfried di R. W. (Florence, 1944); K. Overhoff, R. W.'s Tristan Partitur; eine musikalisch-philosophische Deutung (Bayreuth, 1948); E. Newman, The Wagner Operas (N. Y., 1949); K. Overhoff, R. W.'s Parsifal (Lindau im Bodensee, 1951).

K—CHARACTERS: C. Maude, W.'s Heroes (London, 1896) and W.'s Heroines (London, 1896); H. von Wolzogen, R. W.'s Heldengestalten erläutert (Hanover, 1896); A. Höfler, Wotan. Eine Studie zum 'Ring des Nibelungen' (Vienna, 1897); H. Bélar, Taschenbuch der Wagnerkünstler. W.'s Frauengestalten in gesangsdramatischer Beziehung (Leipzig, 1898); E. Destranges, Les Femmes dans l'œuvre de R. W. (Paris, 1899); F. Schwabe, Die Frauengestalten W.'s als Typen des 'Ewig-weiblichen' (Munich, 1902); H. Materna, R. W.'s Frauengestalten (Leipzig, 1904); W. Broescl, Evchen Pogner (Berlin, 1906); H. Güntert, Kundry (Heidelberg, 1928).

L—WAGNER AS WRITER: H. von Wolzogen, Die Sprache in R. W.'s Dichtungen (Leipzig, 1878); J. Gautier, R. W. et son œuvre poétique (Paris, 1882); B. Vogel, W. als Dichter. Ein Überblick seines poetischen Schaffens (Leipzig, 1889); A. Ernst, L'Art de W.: l'œuvre poétique (Paris, 1893); H. Lichtenberger, R. W., poète et penseur (Paris, 1898; new ed., 1931; German transl., Dresden, 1899 [augmented ed. 1913]); O. Lüning, R. W. als Dichter und Denker (Zürich, 1900); W. Golther, R. W. als Dichter (Berlin, 1904; English transl., London, 1905); R. W. Ulrich, R. W.'s 'Tristan und Isolde' als Dichtung. Nebst einigen allgemeinen Bemerkungen über W.'s Kunst (Berlin, 1904); E. Meinck, Fr. Hebbels und R. W.'s Nibelungen-Trilogien (Leipzig, 1905); J. Schuler, The Language of R. W.'s 'Ring des Nibelungen' (Lancaster, Pa., 1910); K. Reichelt, R. W. und die englische Literatur (Leipzig, 1912); E. von Schrenck, R. W. als Dichter (Munich, 1913); P. Bülow, Die Jugendschriften R. W.'s (Leipzig, 1917); W. Ramann, Der dichterische Stil R. W.'s (Leipzig, 1929); O. Strobel, Skizzen und Entwürfe zur Ring-Dichtung (Munich, 1930); H. Galli, W. und die deutsche Klassik (Berne, 1936).

M—CATALOGUES, YEAR-BOOKS, ETC.: E. Kastner, Chronologisch-systematischer W.-Katalog (Offenbach, 1878); N. Oesterlein, Katalog einer W.-Bibliothek (4 vols.; Leipzig, 1882, 1886, 1891, 1895; describes the treasures of the W.-Museum and contains full bibliography of books and articles publ. about Wagner during his life [10, 181 titles]); E. Kastner, Verzeichnis der ersten Aufführungen von R. W.'s dramatischen Werken (Vienna, 1896; 2nd ed., Leipzig, 1899); H. Silège, Bibliographie wagnérienne française [1851-1902] (Paris, 1902); P. Pabst, Verzeichnis von R. W.'s Werken, Schriften und Dichtungen, deren hauptsächlichsten Bearbeitungen, sowie von besonders interessanter Litteratur, Abbildungen, Büsten und Kunstblättern, den Meister und seine Schöpfungen betreffend (Leipzig, 1905); L. Frankenstein, Bibliographie der auf R. W. bezüglichen... Literatur für die Jahre 1907-11 (Berlin, 1912); J. Kürschner, R. W.-Jahrbuch (Stuttgart, 1886; only 1 vol. publ.); L. Frankenstein, R. W.-Jahrbuch (Berlin, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1912, 1913); M. Burrell, Catalogue of the Burrell Collection of W. Documents, Letters and Other Biogr. Material (London, 1929); O. Strobel, Führer durch die wiederholte Ausstellung einer umfassenden Auswahl von Schätzen aus dem Archiv des Hauses Wahnfried: Genie am Werk, R. W.'s Schaffen und Wirken im Spiegel eigenhandschriftlicher Urkunden (Bayreuth, 1934). The volumes of 'Bayreuther Blätter' (founded by Wagner in 1878) are of value.

N—ICONOGRAPHY: J. Grand-Carteret, R. W. en caricatures (Paris, 1892); E. Fuchs and E. Krcowski, R. W. in der Karikatur (Berlin, 1907; 6th ed., 1913); A. Vanselow, R. W.'s photographische Bildnisse (Munich, 1908); E. Engel, R. W.'s Leben und Werke im Bilde (2 vols.; Vienna, 1913; new ed., Leipzig, 1922); J. Kapp, R. W. sein Leben, sein Werk, seine Welt in 260 Bildern (Berlin, 1933); P. Bülow, R. W. sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1936); R. Bory, R. W. sein Leben und sein Werk in Bildern (Leipzig, 1938).

O—MISCELLANEOUS: C. Baudelaire, R. W. et Tannhäuser à Paris (Paris, 1861); W. Tappert, Wagner-Lexikon. Wörterbuch der Unhöflichkeit... (Leipzig, 1877; new augmented ed. as R. W. im Spiegel der Kritik, 1903; an interesting collection of adverse and abusive comments); Über Schicksale und Bestimmung des W.-Museums (Leipzig, 1892); E. Kloss, Das W.-Museum in Eisenach, in Ein W.-Lesebuch (Leipzig, 1904); K. Grunsky, R. W. und die Juden (Munich, 1921); W. Lange, R. W. und seine Vaterstadt, Leipzig (Leipzig, 1921); J. Marnold, Le Cas W.: la musique pendant la guerre (Paris, 1920); W. et la France, special issue of the 'Revue Musicale' (Oct., 1923); P. Stefan, Die Feindschaft gegen W. (Regensburg, 1918); E. Newman, Fact and Fiction About W. (N. Y., 1931); E. Stempelinger, W. in Munich (Munich, 1933); W. Golther, R. W. Leben und Werke in urkundlichen Zeugnissen, Briefen, Schriften, Berichten (Ebenhausen, near Munich, 1936); W. Lange, R. W.'s Sippe, with genealogical table (Leipzig, 1938); L. Weinhold, Handschriften von R. W. in Leipzig (Leipzig, 1938); O. Daube, Humor bei R. W. (Gütersloh, 1944); L. Stein, The Racial Thinking of R. W. (N. Y., 1950); L. Strecker, R. W. als Verlagsgefährte (Mainz, 1951).

Wagner, Siegfried, son of Richard and Cosima Wagner; b. Triebtschen, June 6, 1869; d. Bayreuth, Aug. 4, 1930. His parents were married on Aug. 25, 1870, and Siegfried was thus legitimized. Wagner wrote Siegfried Idyll for him, and it was performed in Wagner's house in Triebtschen on Christmas Day, 1870 (Cosima Wagner's birthday). He attended a polytechnic school, but the lure of music proved overwhelming, and he took up studies under Julius Kniebe and Humperdinck; began to compose; also embarked on a conductorial career; appeared as a symph. conductor in Germany, Austria, Italy, and England. In 1894 he was appointed assistant conductor in Bayreuth, and in 1896 became one of the regular conductors. He conducted from memory, and left-handed. In 1909 he succeeded his mother as general supervisor of the Bayreuth Festivals. On Sept. 21, 1915, he married Winifred Williams, an adopted daughter of Karl Klindworth. In 1923-24 he visited the U. S. in order to raise funds for the reopening of the Bayreuth Festspielhaus, which had been closed in the course of World War I. In his career as composer, he was greatly handicapped by the inevitable comparisons with his father. He wrote a symph. poem Sehnsucht, after Schiller (1895); Fahnenmarsch for men's chorus and orch. (1914); a violin concerto (1915); chamber music and vocal works. But his main interest was in music drama; like his father, he wrote his own librettos. — Operas:

Der Bärenhäuter (Munich, Jan. 22, 1899); Herzog Wildfang (Munich, March 14, 1901); Der Kobold (Hamburg, Jan. 29, 1904); Bruder Lustig (Hamburg, Oct. 13, 1905); Sternengebot (Hamburg, Jan. 21, 1908); Banadietrich (Karlsruhe, Jan. 15, 1910); An Allem ist Hütchen Schuld (Stuttgart, Dec. 6, 1917); Schwarzschwannerreich (Karlsruhe, Nov. 5, 1918); Sonnenflammen (Karlsruhe, 1926); Der Heidenkönig (Cologne, Dec. 16, 1933); Der Schmied von Marienburg (Rostock, 1923). His reminiscences, Erinnerungen, were publ. at Stuttgart in 1923.—Cf. L. Karpath, Siegfried Wagner als Mensch und Künstler (Leipzig, 1902); K. F. Glasenapp, Siegfried Wagner und seine Kunst (Leipzig, 1911; 3rd ed., 1919); P. Pretzsch, Die Kunst Siegfried Wagners (1919); O. Daube, Siegfried Wagner und sein Werk (Bayreuth, 1925); R. Du Moulin-Eckart, Wahnfried (Leipzig, 1925); H. Rebois, Lettres de Siegfried Wagner (Paris, 1933); O. Daube, Siegfried Wagner und die Märchenoper (Leipzig, 1936).

Wagner-Régeny, Rudolf, composer, b. Régen, Transylvania, Aug. 28, 1903. He studied piano with Robert Teichmüller at the Leipzig Cons., conducting and theory at the Musikhochschule in Berlin. He occupied various posts as theater and cinema conductor; was in the German army during World War II; director of the Musikhochschule in Rostock (1947-50); in 1950 appointed director of the State Cons. in East Berlin. In 1934 he was commissioned (together with J. Weismann) by the Ministry of Culture to write new musical settings for A Midsummer Night's Dream, to replace Mendelssohn's score; his music was produced at Düsseldorf, on June 6, 1934. Other works: the operas Moschopolus (Gera, 1928), Der nackte König (Gera, 1928), Sganarelle (Essen, 1929), Die heilige Courtisane (1932), Der Günstling (Dresden, Feb. 20, 1935), Die Bürger von Calais (Berlin, Jan. 28, 1939), Johanna Balk (Vienna, April 4, 1941), Das Opfer (1942), Der Darnenwäscher (1950); several ballets, among them Der zerbrochene Krug (1937); Mythologische Figuren for orch. (Salzburg Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 21, 1952); various minor pieces.—Cf. A. Burgartz, Rudolf Wagner-Régeny (Berlin, 1935).

Wailly, (Louis Auguste) Paul (Warnier) de, French composer; b. Amiens, May 16, 1854; d. Paris, June 18, 1933. He was a pupil of César Franck, and in his works showed himself a follower of Franck's precepts. He wrote 3 symphonies; a dramatic oratorio, L'Apôtre (1924); 26 Pièces for harmonium; publ. La Vie et l'âme de César Franck (Paris, 1922).—Cf. A. Laurent, Paul de Wailly: l'artiste, l'œuvre (Paris, 1933); A. Laurent, Paul de Wailly: le compositeur, l'artiste (Eu, 1940).

Weisselius, Matthäus, German composer and lute player; flourished in the 2nd half of the 16th century. He was a schoolmaster in the vicinity of Königsberg; publ. several books, in tablature notation, of music for the lute, among them Cantiones 4, 5, et 6 vocum . . . (Frankfurt, 1573) and Lautenbuch, comprising instruction for the lute and a selection of dance tunes (1592).

Walcker (vahl'-kehr), Eberhard Friedrich, German organ-builder; b. Cannstadt, near Stuttgart, July 3, 1794; d. Ludwigsburg, Oct. 2, 1872. Trained in the workshops of his father, a skilled organ-builder, he set up for himself in Ludwigsburg in 1820, and won great renown by his excellent work and numerous inventions. After his death the business passed to his five sons, Heinrich (b. Oct. 10, 1828; d. Kirchheim, Nov. 24, 1903), Friedrich (b. Sept. 17, 1829; d. Dec. 6, 1895), Karl (b. March 6, 1845; d. Stuttgart, May 19, 1908), Paul (b. May 31, 1846; d. 1928), and Eberhard (b. April 8, 1850; d. 1927). In 1916 Oscar Waleker (son of Friedrich; b. Jan. 1, 1869; d. Nov. 4, 1948) became head of the firm; in 1932 he effected a merger with the firm Ziegler of Steinsfurt (in 1910 a merger with the firm of W. Sauer of Frankfurt had taken place). His reminiscences, Erinnerungen eines Orgelbauers, were publ. in Kassel, 1948. The firm has built more than 2,500 organs; some of the largest are those in Ulm Cathedral (1856; 95 speaking stops; rebuilt and enlarged in 1914 to 171), Music Hall, Boston (now removed; 1863; 86 stops); Paulskirche, Frankfurt (1833; 74 stops); St. Peter's, St. Petersburg (1840; 65 stops); Reval Cathedral (1842; 65 stops); Votivkirche, Vienna (1878; 61 stops); Riga Cathedral (1885; 124 stops); St. Stephen's Cathedral, Vienna (1886; 90 stops); St. Michael's, Hamburg (1912; 154 stops, 5 manuals and pedal).—Cf. J. Fischer, Das Orgelbauergeschlecht Walcker (Kassel, 1949).

Wald, Max, American composer and teacher; b. Litchfield, Ill., July 14, 1889; d. Dowagiac, Mich., Aug. 14, 1954. After studying in Chicago, he was active as theater conductor; went to Paris in 1922 to study with Vincent d'Indy, and remained in Europe until 1936; then returned to Chicago and became chairman of the theory department of the Chicago Musical College. His symph. poem The Dancer Dead won 2nd prize in the National Broadcasting Co. competition in 1932, and was broadcast from N. Y. on May 1, 1932. His other works include Retrospectives for orch. (Chicago, Jan. 15, 1926), Comedy Overture (1937); In Praise of Pageantry, for orch. (Chicago, Oct. 31, 1946); October Moonlight, a song cycle for soprano, string quartet, flute, clarinet, and piano (1937); 2 piano sonatas; other piano music; also an opera, Mirandolina (1936), and a light opera, Gay Little World (1942).

Waldersee (vählt'-dër-zä), Paul, Graf von, German music editor; b. Potsdam, Sept. 3, 1831; d. Königsberg, June 14, 1906. He was a Prussian officer (1848-71), but became absorbed in musical studies; was co-editor of Breitkopf & Härtel's collected editions of Mozart and Beethoven; edited a valuable 'Sammlung musikalischer Vorträge' (1879-84), to which he contributed Die Gesamtausgabe der Werke Mozarts (No. 7; 1879), Robert Schumanns Manfred (No. 13; 1880), Giov. Pierluigi da Palestrina und die Gesamtausgabe seiner Werke (No. 52; 1884). He edited the 2nd edition of Köchel's catalogue of Mozart's works.

Waldstein (vählt'-shtin), Ferdinand Ernst Gabriel, Graf von, amateur musician; friend of Beethoven; b. Dux, Bohemia, March 24, 1762; d. Vienna, Aug. 29, 1823. While serving his novitiate in the 'Deutscher Orden' at Bonn (1787-88), he became acquainted with Beethoven, and on several occasions aided him materially, pretending that the sums were extra allowances from the Elector; after Beethoven's departure for Vienna, Waldstein introduced him in the circles of the aristocracy there; in later life their friendship seems to have cooled. Beethoven wrote a set of variations in C for piano 4 hands on a theme of Waldstein's (publ. 1794), and later (1805) dedicated to him the great sonata in C, op. 53. Waldstein also planned the Ritter-Ballet (1791), to which Beethoven wrote the music (score published 1872).—Cf. J. Heer, Der Graf von Waldstein und sein Verhältnis zu Beethoven (Bonn, 1933).

Waldteufel (vählt'-toi-fël), Emil, celebrated waltz composer; b. Strasbourg, Dec. 9, 1837; d. Paris, Feb. 16, 1915. He received his first instruction from his father, professor at the Strasbourg Cons.; then went to the Paris Cons., where he studied with Marmontel, leaving before completing his studies to accept a position with the piano manufacturer Scholtus. The success of his first waltzes, Joies et Peines and Manola (publ. at his own expense), determined him to devote himself entirely to writing dance music; he lived all his life in Paris, making several very successful concert tours to London, Berlin, Vienna, etc., conducting his own music. In 1865 he was appointed chamber musician to the Empress Eugénie and director of the court balls. He publ. 268 dances, mostly for orch.; a selection of the most popular ones appeared in 5 vols.; several waltzes (Die Schlittschuhläufer [also known as The Skaters and Les Patineurs], Les Sirènes, Mon Rêve, Les Violettes, Estudiantina, Dolores, Toujours ou Jamais, etc.) for a time almost rivalled in popularity those of Johann Strauss.

Waley, Simon, English pianist and composer; b. London, Aug. 23, 1827; d. there, Dec. 30, 1875. He studied in London with Moscheles and Bennett (piano); later with Molique (theory); began to compose as a child, and developed rapidly; wrote a piano concerto; 2 piano trios; and many solo pieces; 2 psalms for the synagogue service, which were publ. in vol. 1 of 'Musical Services of the West London Synagogue.' Eventually he abandoned composition, and turned to a mercantile career; became a member of the London Stock Exchange.

Walker, Edyth, American mezzo-soprano, b. Hopewell, N. Y., March 27, 1867; d. New York, Feb. 19, 1950. She studied singing with Aglaja Orgeni at the Dresden Cons.; made her début as Fides in Le Prophète at the Berlin Opera on Nov. 11, 1894. She then became a member of the Vienna Court Opera, where she was engaged until 1903. She made her American operatic début with the Metropolitan Opera, as Amneris (N. Y., Nov. 30, 1903); remained with the company until 1906; then sang in Germany, particularly excelling in Wagnerian roles. She sang Elektra in the London première of Strauss's opera (Feb. 19, 1910). After a period of travels in Europe, she taught at the American Cons. in Fontainebleau (1933-36). In 1936 she returned to N. Y., settling there as a singing teacher.

Walker, Ernest, English writer on music; b. Bombay, India, July 15, 1870; d. Oxford, Feb. 21, 1949. He was educated at Balliol College, Oxford; D. Mus., 1898; became director of music there (1901-25); also examiner and member of the Board of Studies for music at Oxford Univ. He publ. the valuable compendium, A History of Music in England (Oxford, 1907; 2nd ed., 1924; 3rd ed., revised by J. A. Westrup, 1952); a monograph on Beethoven in the 'Music of the Masters' series (1905); contributed to Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians and to many musical periodicals. His collection of essays, Free Thought and the Musician, was publ. in 1946. He was also a composer; wrote a number of choral works; 2 piano quartets; a piano quintet; a horn quintet; a cello sonata; piano pieces; songs to German and English words. —Cf. M. Deneke, Ernest Walker (London, 1951).

Walker, Frank, English musicologist; b. Gosport, Hampshire, June 10, 1907. He studied at Portsmouth; having attained remarkable knowledge of history, literature, and music, he addressed himself to problems of musical biography; examined primary sources, and established factual data regarding particularly the composers of the Neapolitan School; contributed valuable studies on Pergolesi; publ. an excellent biography, Hugo Wolf (London, 1951); wrote a number of biographical articles for the 5th ed. of Grove's Dictionary (1954).

Walker, John, English lexicographer; b. Colney Hatch, Middlesex, March 18, 1732; d. London, Aug. 1, 1807. He wrote The Melody of Speaking Delineated (1787; often republished) with an original notation for representing the musical inflections of the speaking voice.

Walker, Joseph Cooper, Irish writer; b. Dublin, Nov., 1760; d. St.-Valéry, France, April 12, 1810. He publ. the valuable books Historical Memoirs on the Irish Bards, with notes on Irish music (London, 1786), and An Historical Account and Critical Essay on the Opera . . . (1805).

Wallace, William, Scotch composer and music educator; b. Greenock, July 3, 1860; d. Malmesbury, Wiltshire, Dec. 16, 1940. The son of a surgeon, he studied medicine at Glasgow Univ. (M.D., 1888); specialized in ophthalmology in Vienna, and was employed in the Royal Army Medical Corps during World War I. He was self-taught in music; devoted much of his energy to the protection of the rights of British composers; served on the Composers' Copyright Committee of the Society of British Authors; also taught at the Royal Academy of Music.

His works include the symph. poems The Passing of Beatrice (1892), Amboss oder Hammer, after Goethe (1896), Sister Helen (1899), To the New Century (1901), William Wallace (for the 6th centenary of the death of the national hero of Scotland, and namesake of the composer; 1905), François Villon (1909); a symph., The Creation (1899); the suites for orch.: The Lady from the Sea, after Ibsen (1892) and Pelléas and Mélisande, after Maeterlinck (1900); overture, In Praise of Scottish Poesie (1894); The Massacre of the Macpherson, burlesque cantata; The Outlaw, scena for baritone and orch.; the Rhapsody of Mary Magdalene, vocal scene; My Soul is an Enchanted Boat, trio for voice, violin, and piano; Spanish Songs, vocal quartet; song cycles, Freebooter Songs (with orch.; his most famous work), Lords of the Sea, and Jacobite Songs. He publ. The Threshold of Music: An Inquiry into the Development of the Musical Sense (1908); The Musical Faculty: Its Origins and Processes (1914); Richard Wagner as He Lived (1925); Liszt, Wagner and the Princess (1927).

Wallace, William Vincent, Irish composer; b. Waterford, March 11, 1812; d. Château de Bagen (Haute-Garonne), France, Oct. 12, 1865. The son of a bandmaster, Wallace was brought up in a musical atmosphere. He was 15 when the family moved to Dublin, and soon entered a professional career, playing violin in theater orchestras and organ in churches. One of his earliest compositions was The Harp in the Air, which later became famous when he incorporated it into his opera Maritana. In 1831 he married Isabella Kelly. He applied himself to the study of violin, and subsequently was able to give successful concerts. With his wife he traveled in Australia, South America, Mexico, and the U. S. Returning to Europe in 1844, he toured Germany; in 1845 he was in London, where he produced his opera Maritana (Drury Lane, Nov. 15, 1845), which obtained excellent success; it was followed by another opera, Matilda of Hungary (Drury Lane, Feb. 2, 1847), which was a failure. In 1850 he resumed his wanderings and revisited the U. S.; he declared his first marriage invalid, and married an American pianist, Helen Stoepel. Back in England, he produced several operas, of which Lurline (Covent Garden, Feb. 23, 1860) had tremendous acclaim; his other operas were The Amber Witch (Haymarket, Feb. 28, 1861), Love's Triumph (Covent Garden, Nov. 3, 1862), and The Desert Flower (Covent Garden, Oct. 12, 1863); several operas remained unfinished at his death. His piano music enjoyed great vogue during his lifetime; some noted numbers are La Gondola; 2 Nocturnes; Chant d'amour; Nocturne mélodique; Mélodie irlandaise; Music Murmuring in the Trees; Valse brillante de salon; Tarentelle, etc. — Cf. A. Pougin, W. V. Wallace, étude biographique et critique (Paris, 1866); W. H. G. Flood, W. V. Wallace, a Memoir (Watford, 1912).

Wallaschek, Richard, Austrian theorist; b. Brünn, Nov. 16, 1860; d. Vienna, April 24, 1917. He studied law and philosophy in Vienna, Heidelberg, and Tübingen; from 1890 to 1895 was in London, engaged in research work; in 1896 joined the faculty of the Univ. of Vienna; wrote music criticism. He wrote a number of essays on esthetics, primitive music, and psychology of musical perception. His publications include Ästhetik der Tonkunst (1886) and several books publ. in London, in English: On the Origin of Music (1891), Natural Selection and Music (1892), On the Difference of Time and Rhythm in Music (1893), Primitive Music: An Inquiry into the Origin and Development of Music, Songs, Instruments, Dances and Pantomimes of Savage Races (1893; German ed., enlarged, as Anfänge der Tonkunst, 1903). He also publ. Das k. k. Hofoperntheater (Vienna, 1909). — Cf. R. Lach, Zur Erinnerung an Richard Wallaschek (Vienna, 1917).

Wallenstein, Alfred, American cellist and conductor; b. Chicago, Oct. 7, 1898 (of German parents). The family moved to Los Angeles when he was a child; he studied cello; was employed in theater orchestras; then became a cellist in the San Francisco Symph.; in 1917 joined the traveling troupe of the Pavlova Ballet, with whom he toured in South America; in 1919 played in the Los Angeles Philharmonic. In 1920 he went to Europe, studied medicine at the Univ. of Leipzig, and took cello lessons with Julius Klengel; returned to the U. S., and was engaged as 1st cellist with the Chicago Symph. Orch. (1922-29); from 1929 to 1936 was 1st cellist of the N. Y. Philharmonic under Toscanini. He made his début as conductor on the radio in 1931; in 1933 he established the Wallenstein Sinfonietta; presented many radio programs of serious music, including weekly performances of Bach's cantatas, a complete series of Mozart's piano concertos, and also works by modern composers. From 1943 to 1956 he was conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic; from 1952 also music director of the Hollywood Bowl. In the spring of 1956, Wallenstein traveled to Japan and other countries in the Far East with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, under the auspices of the American National Theater and Academy and of the State Department. —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U. S. A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 274-79).

Wallenstein, Martin, German pianist and composer; b. Frankfurt, July 22, 1843; d. there, Nov. 29, 1896. He studied with Droyschok in Prague, and with Hauptmann and Rietz in Leipzig; made many successful tours as a pianist. His opera, Das Testament, was produced at Frankfurt in 1870; he also wrote a piano concerto; many piano studies and characteristic pieces.

Wallerstein, Anton, German violinist and composer; b. Dresden, Sept. 28, 1813; d. Geneva, March 26, 1892. He played in public as a child; joined the Dresden court orch. (1829-32) and later was a member of the Hanover orch. (1832-41). He wrote a number of popular dance compositions, of which about 300 were publ.; also violin pieces and songs.

Wallerstein, Lothar, pianist and conductor; b. Prague, Nov. 6, 1882; d. New Orleans, Nov. 13, 1949. He studied art and music in Prague and Munich; also attended the Geneva Cons., where he later taught piano; after a brief engagement as accompanist at the Dresden Opera (1909), he held the posts of conductor and stage director in Poznan (1910-14), in Breslau (1918-22), in Frankfurt (1924-26), at the Vienna State Opera (1927-29), and at La Scala of Milan (1929). He came to the U. S. in 1941, and lived in New Orleans. He brought out eds. of Mozart's Idomeneo, Verdi's Don Carlos, and other operas. —Cf. A. Berger, Über die Spielleitung der Oper. Betrachtungen zur musikalischen Dramaturgie Dr. Lothar Wallensteins (Graz, 1928).

Wallnöfer (väh-l-nö-fähr), Adolf, Austrian tenor and composer; b. Vienna, April 26, 1854; d. Munich, June 9, 1946. He studied singing with Rokitsky; composition with Krenn and Dessoff. He began his career as a baritone, but developed his voice into a tenor in 1880; joined Neumann's Wagner troupe in 1881; then sang at Bremen and at the German Opera in Prague (1885-95); in 1896-98, appeared in the U. S.; then toured in Russia (1899); in 1906 he was engaged at the Vienna Opera; in 1908 he went to Munich, where he remained until his death. He composed an opera, Eddystone (Prague, 1889); several works for solo voice, chorus, and orch. (Die Grenzen der Menschheit, Gersprenz, Hymne an die Erde, etc.); many unaccompanied choruses; piano pieces; numerous songs and ballads, a selection of which was publ. in 5 vols. His unpubl. MSS are in the Municipal Music Library in Munich. Author of Resonanztonlehre (1911).

Walmisley, Thomas (Attwood), English organist and composer; son of Thomas Forbes Walmisley; b. London, Jan. 21, 1814; d. Hastings, Jan. 17, 1856. His father placed him under the guidance of Thomas Attwood, his own teacher. He showed remarkable progress, and became organist at Trinity and St. John's Colleges at Cambridge, at the age of 19. In 1836 he became a prof. of music; continued to study nonetheless; received his B.A. degree in 1838 and M.A. in 1841. He wrote several odes and anthems for Trinity College. He enjoyed the reputation of being one of the best organists in England of his day. His anthems and church services were brought out by his father, who survived him by 10 years; they were included in the vol. Cathedral Music (1857).

Walmisley, Thomas Forbes, English organist and composer; b. London, May 22, 1783; d. there, July 23, 1866. He was a chorister at Westminster Abbey; studied organ with Thomas Attwood; then was organist at the Female Orphan Asylum (1810-14) and at St. Martin-in-the-Fields (1814-54). He was a popular composer of glees; publ. 3 sets containing 6 glees each; also 'A Collection of Glees, Trios, Rounds and Canons' (1826); several single glees and songs.

Walsh, John, English music publisher; place and date of birth unknown; d. London, March 13, 1736. From about 1690 he had his business at the sign of the 'Golden Harp and Hoboy' in the Strand, London; in 1692 he was appointed 'musical instrument maker in ordinary to His Majesty.' He developed a flourishing trade, and achieved great renown; in England he was unquestionably the foremost publisher of music in his time. In 1711 he publ. Handel's Rinaldo, and remained Handel's principal publisher. He was succeeded by his son, also named John Walsh (d. London, Jan. 15, 1766), who maintained the firm's high standards. —Cf. F. Kidson, Handel's Publisher, John Walsh, his Successors and Contemporaries, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1920); Wm. C.

Smith, Handel's 'Rinaldo': An Outline of the Early Editions, in the 'Mus. Times' (Aug., 1935); W. C. Smith, A Bibliography of the Musical Works Published by J. Walsh during the Years 1695-1720 (London, 1948).

Walter, Arnold, composer; b. Hannsdorf, Austria, Aug. 30, 1902; studied at the Univ. of Prague and Berlin Univ. (with H. Abert, Joh. Wolf, and Curt Sachs). He taught at Brno (1928-30); then was music critic of the daily newspaper 'Vorwärts' in Berlin (1930-33); in 1933 went to Barcelona; in 1937 settled in Canada as teacher and opera conductor at the Royal Cons., Toronto. His works include a symph. in G minor (Toronto, Feb. 1, 1944); For the Fallen, cantata (1949); chamber music.

Walter, Bruno (real name B. W. Schlesinger), eminent German conductor; b. Berlin, Sept. 15, 1876. He studied at Stern's Cons., Berlin with H. Ehrlich, L. Bussler, and R. Radecke. At the age of 17 he became opera coach at the Municipal Opera of Cologne; also did occasional conducting there; in the following year he was engaged as assistant conductor at the Hamburg Stadttheater, under Gustav Mahler; this contact was decisive in his career, and he became in subsequent years an ardent champion of Mahler's music; conducted the premières of the posthumous symph. No. 9 and Das Lied von der Erde. During the season 1896-97 Walter was engaged as 2nd conductor at the Stadttheater in Breslau; then became principal conductor in Pressburg, and in 1898 at Riga, where he conducted for two seasons. In 1900 he received the important engagement of conductor at the Berlin Opera under a 5-year contract; however he left this post in 1901 when he received an offer from Mahler to become his assistant at the Vienna Opera. He established himself as an efficient opera conductor; also conducted in England (first appearance, March 3, 1909, with the Royal Philharmonic Society, London). He remained at the Vienna Opera after the death of Mahler; on Jan. 1, 1914, he became court conductor and music director in Munich; under his guidance, the Munich Opera enjoyed brilliant performances, particularly of Mozart's works. Seeking greater freedom for his artistic activities, he left Munich in 1922, and gave numerous performances as guest conductor with European orchestras; from 1922 he also conducted summer concerts of the Salzburg festival; his performances of Mozart's music there set a standard. He also appeared as pianist in Mozart's chamber works. On Feb. 15, 1923, he made his American début with the N. Y. Symph. Society, and appeared with it again in 1924 and 1925. From 1925 till 1929 he was conductor of the Städtische Oper in Berlin-Charlottenburg; in 1929 he succeeded Furtwängler as conductor of the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orch., but continued to give special concerts in Berlin. On Feb. 25, 1932, he was guest conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic, acting also as soloist in a Mozart piano concerto; was reengaged during the next 3 seasons as associate conductor with Toscanini. He was also guest conductor in Philadelphia, Washington, and Baltimore. With the advent of the Nazi regime in Germany his engagement with the Gewandhaus Orch. was cancelled, and he was also prevented from continuing his orchestral concerts in Berlin. He filled several engagements with the Concertgebouw in Amsterdam, and also conducted in Salzburg. In 1936 he was engaged as music director of the Vienna Opera; this was terminated with the annexation of Austria in 1938. Walter with his family then went to France, where he was granted French citizenship. After the outbreak of World War II he sailed for America, establishing his residence in California, and eventually becoming an American citizen. He was guest conductor with the NBC Symph. Orch. (1940); also conducted many performances of the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y. (début in Fidelio on Feb. 14, 1941). From Feb. 1947 to 1949 he was conductor and musical adviser of the N. Y. Philharmonic. —Walter achieved the reputation of a perfect Classicist among contemporary conductors; his interpretations of the masterpieces of the Vienna School are particularly notable. He is acknowledged as a foremost conductor of Mahler's symphonies. His own compositions include 2 symphonies; Siegesfahrt for solo voices, chorus, and orch.; a string quartet; a piano quintet; a piano trio; several albums of songs. He publ. the books Von den moralischen Kräften der Musik (Vienna, 1935), Gustav Mahler (Vienna, 1936; English transl., London, 1937; new transl. with additions, N. Y., 1958), and Theme and Variations, an autobiography (N. Y., 1946). —Cf. M. Kornorn-Rebhan, Was wir von Bruno Walter lernten (Vienna, 1913); Paul Stefan, Bruno Walter (Vienna, 1936); Thomas Mann, To Bruno Walter on his 70th Birthday, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1946); Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (Bristol, 1951; pp. 207-20); B. Gavoty, Bruno Walter (Geneva, 1956).

Walter, Fried, German composer; b. Ottendorf-Okrilla, near Dresden, Dec. 19, 1907; studied in Dresden; filled various posts as opera coach and conductor in Germany; in 1949 became a chief of the light music dept. at the Berlin Radio. — Works: operas, Königin Elizabeth (Stockholm, Nov. 24, 1939), Andreas Wolfius (Berlin, Dec. 19, 1940), and Dorfmusik (Wiesbaden, Nov. 1, 1943); a dance drama, Kleopatra (Prague, 1943); a dance fairy tale, Der Pfeil (Berlin, Dec. 22, 1946); a Kleine Sinfonie (1942); numerous dramatic ballads; chamber music; songs.

Walter, Friedrich Wilhelm, German writer on music; b. Mannheim, Sept. 3, 1870. He studied in Heidelberg; Dr. phil., 1892; lived most of his life in Mannheim, and publ. a number of valuable monographs dealing with musical life there: Die Entwicklung des Mannheimer Musik- und Theaterlebens (1897), Geschichte des Theaters und der Musik am kurpfälzischen Hofe (1898), and Archiv und Bibliothek des Grossherzoglichen Hof- und National-Theaters in Mannheim (2 vols.; 1899).

Walter, Georg A., composer and teacher; b. Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 13, 1875 (of German parents); d. Berlin, Sept. 13, 1952. He studied singing in Berlin, Milan, and London; composition with Wilhelm Berger in Berlin; made a career as a singer, particularly distinguishing himself in the works of Bach and Handel. He was prof. at the Stuttgart Hochschule (1925-34); then taught in Berlin until 1945. He wrote a number of songs; brought out new editions of works by the sons of Bach, Schütz, etc.

Walter, George William, American organist; b. New York, Dec. 16, 1851; d. Washington, March 11, 1911. At the age of 5 he played the organ at Trinity Chapel; studied with J. K. Paine in Boston and with S. P. Warren in N. Y.; settled in Washington in 1869. He enjoyed a high reputation as an improviser; accumulated a musical library which was one of the finest in America.

Walter (Walther) (real name Blanckenmüller), Johann (Johannes), one of the earliest composers for the Lutheran church; b. Kahler, Thuringia, 1496; d. Torgau, March 25, 1570. In 1517 he entered the chapel of the Elector Friedrich the Wise of Saxony as a bass singer (the Elector divided his residence between Altenburg and Torgau). In 1524, at Wittenberg, he publ. the Geystlich Gesangk-Buchleyn for 3-5 voices, the first Protestant singing-book. In 1525 he was summoned to Wittenberg by Luther to assist in the composition and regulation of the German Mass. Shortly after the death of the Elector Friedrich (1525) his chapel was disbanded, and Walter became cantor of the Municipal Latin-School in Torgau and director of the 'Stadtkantorei' (community choir) there (1526-48). In 1548 he was called upon by the new Elector, Moritz, of Saxony, to organize the court chapel in Dresden, and remained there as Kapellmeister until 1554, when he retired to Torgau on a pension. He publ. Cantio septem vocum in laudem Dei omnipotentis et Evangelii ejus (1544); Magnificat 8 tonorum (1557); Ein neues christliches Lied (1561); Ein gar schöner geistlicher und christlicher Bergkreysen (1561); Lob und Preis der himmlischen Kunst Musica (1564); Das christlich Kinderlied Dr. Martin Luthers, 'Erhalt uns Herr bei deinem Wort' (1566), etc. The Geystlich Gesangk-Buchleyn was reprinted in vol. VII of the 'Publikationen der Gesellschaft für Musikforschung' (1878); a list of other reprints is found in W. Ehmann's article Johann Walter, der erste Kantor der protestantischen Kirche, in 'Musik und Kirche' (vol. VI, 1934). Instrumental works by Walter were discovered in the library of the Thomasschule in Leipzig by B. Engelke in 1912 (examples in A. Schering's 'Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen,' Nos. 80 and 81). A complete ed. of Walter's works was begun by Otto Schröder and Max Schneider with the publ. of the Geystlich Gesangk-Buchleyn in 3 vols. (Kassel, 1953-55). — Cf. O. Kade, Johann Walthers Wittenbergisch geistlich Gesangbuch von 1524 (1878); H. Holstein, Der Lieder- und Tondichter Johann Walther, in 'Archiv für Literaturgeschichte' (1884); A. Aber, Die Pflege der Musik unter den Wettinern . . . (1921); R. Haas, Zu Walthers Choralpassion nach Matthäus, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' IV (1922); A. Schmitz, in 'Siebs-Festschrift' (1933); W. Gurlitt, Johannes Walter und die Musik der Reformationszeit, in 'Luther-Jahrbuch' (1933); O. Michaelis, Johann Walther, der Musikedichter in Luther's Gefolgschaft (Leipzig, 1939); C. Gerhardt, Die Torgauer Walter-Handschriften; eine Studie zur Quellenkunde der Musikgeschichte der deutschen Reformationszeit (Kassel, 1949). See also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 677-78).

Walter, Karl, German organist and campanologist; b. Cransberg, Oct. 27, 1862; d.

Montabaur, Dec. 4, 1929. He studied at the Seminary in Montabaur, where he became instructor in 1893; in 1899, appointed diocesan inspector for the building of organs and bells. In 1903, became instructor of church music at Limburg Seminary. He wrote organ music and sacred works; publ. several manuals on organ building, and on the construction of bells, a field in which he was an authority. — Publications: Kleine Orgelbaulehre (1904); Orgelbegleitung zu den Melodien des Gesangbuchs für das Bistum Limburg (1907; 2nd ed., 1911); Glockenkunde (1913); Kleine Glockenkunde (1916).

Walter, Thomas, American clergyman and author of singing books; b. Roxbury, Mass., Dec. 13, 1696; d. there, Jan. 10, 1725. He was the son of a clergyman and a nephew of Cotton Mather; educated at Harvard College (M.A., 1713); on Oct. 29, 1718, he was ordained; was assistant pastor to his father at Roxbury. With the aim of correcting what he described as 'an horrid medley of confused and disorderly sounds' prevailing in the singing in New England churches, he publ. The Grounds and Rules of Musick Explained; or, an Introduction to the Art of Singing by Note; Fitted to the meanest capacities (Boston, 1721; several other eds. up to 1764). It was the 2nd singing-book to be publ. in America, following that of John Tufts (q.v.). He also publ. The Sweet Psalmist of Israel (1722). — Cf. F. J. Metcalf, American Writers and Compilers of Sacred Music (1925); E. H. Pierce, The Rise and Fall of the 'Fugue-Tune' in America, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1930); M. B. Jones, Bibliographical Notes on Thomas Walter's 'Grounds and Rules...' in 'Proceedings of the American Antiquarian Society' (Oct., 1932; also reprinted separately, Worcester, Mass., 1933).

Waltershausen (väh'l-těrs-how-zen), (Hermann) Wolfgang von, German composer and writer on music; b. Göttingen, Oct. 12, 1882; d. Munich, Aug. 13, 1954. He was a pupil of M. J. Erb in Strasbourg and of Ludwig Thuille in Munich, where he settled. In 1917 he established there a seminar for operatic dramaturgy; prof. and assistant director at the Akademie der Tonkunst (1920-23); then director (1923-33). After 1933 he remained in Munich as private teacher; in 1948 established a seminar for all musical subjects in Munich. In his own music he adopted a neo-Romantic style, rather advanced in harmonic treatment. His most successful work was the opera Oberst

Chabert, to his own libretto after Balzac (Frankfurt, Jan. 18, 1912; also several productions in other German cities). Other operas are Else Klapperzehen (Dresden, May 15, 1909), Richardis, a dramatic mystery (Karlsruhe, Nov. 14, 1915), Die Rauenstein-Hochzeit (Karlsruhe, 1919), Die Gräfin von Tolosa (1934). He further wrote an Apokalyptische Symphonie (1924), the symph. poem, Hero und Leander (1925), Krippenmusik for chamber orch. with harpsichord (1926), an orchestral partita (1928), piano pieces, and songs. Having lost his right arm in a childhood accident, he developed a piano technique for the left hand alone, and publ. studies and transcriptions for left hand which he performed in public. He also publ. a number of valuable writings on music: Musikalische Stillehre in Einzeldarstellungen (1920-23); R. Strauss (1921); Musik, Dramaturgie, Erziehung (1926); Dirigenten-Erziehung (1929); Der stilistische Dualismus in der Musik des 19. Jahrhunderts, in the 'Adler-Festschrift' (Vienna, 1930); Die Kunst des Dirigierens (1943; 2nd ed., 1954); also publ. a book of poetry (1952).

Walther, Johann Gottfried, noted German composer and musicographer; b. Erfurt, Sept. 18, 1684; d. Weimar, March 23, 1748. He was a pupil of J. Bernhard Bach at Erfurt, where he was appointed organist of the Thomaskirche in 1702; in 1707, town organist at Weimar, and music master to the children of the ducal family; from 1720, court musician. He stands next to Bach as a master of chorale-variations for organ. His greatest work is the Musikalisches Lexikon oder Musikalische Bibliothek, the first music encyclopedia of biography, bibliography, and terms (Leipzig, 1732; facsimile ed., Kassel, 1953, by R. Schaal, with bibliographical notes); he had previously publ. the 64-page Alte und neue musikalische Bibliothek, oder Musikalisches Lexikon (1728; only entries under letter A printed, as a preliminary to the main work). His published musical compositions include: Clavierconcert (unaccompanied; 1741); Prelude and Fugue (1741); 4 chorale-variations (Jesu meine Freude, Meinen Jesum lass' ich nicht, Allein Gott in der Höh' sei Ehr', Wie soll ich dich empfangen); many chorale-variations, preludes, fugues and toccatas, in MS; also 5 collections of 'Choralbearbeitungen' by other composers. His organ works were ed. by M. Seiffert in vols. 26 and 27 of 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (with a biographical sketch). His Præcepta der musikalischen Composition was publ. at Leipzig, 1955, ed. by Peter Benary. — Cf. H.

Gehrmann, J. G. Walther als Theoretiker, in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1891); G. Schünemann, J. G. Walther und H. Bokemeyer, in 'Bach-Jahrbuch' (1933); O. Brodde, J. G. Walther. Leben und Werk (1937).

Walther, Johann Jakob, notable German violinist and composer; b. Witterda, near Erfurt, 1650; date and place of death unknown. He was concertmaster at the Electoral Court of Saxony in Dresden (from 1674), and Italian secretary, in charge of the correspondence with Rome, to the Elector of Mainz (from 1688); in 1693 he was designated as Doctor. He publ. Scherzi da violino solo with continuo (1676; reprinted in 'Das Erbe deutscher Musik' vol. 17); Hortulus Chelicus, uni violino, duabus, tribus et quatuor subinde chordis simul sonantibus . . . (1688; 2nd ed. as Wohlgepflanzter Violinischer Lustgarten, 1694). Reprints are found in A. Schering's 'Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen' (No. 239) and in 'Alte Meister' (No. 10); several violin sonatas ed. by G. Beckmann (1921). — Cf. J. W. von Wasielewski, Die Violine und ihre Meister (7th ed., 1927); G. Beckmann, Das Violinspiel in Deutschland vor 1700 (1918); A. Moser, Geschichte des Violinspiels (1923).

Walther von der Vogelweide. See Vogelweide.

Walthew, Richard Henry, English composer and pedagogue; b. London, Nov. 4, 1872; d. East Preston, Sussex, Nov. 14, 1951. He studied with Parry at the Royal College of Music (1890-94); after a directorship of the Passmore Edwards Settlement Place (1900-04), he was appointed instructor of the opera class at the Guildhall School of Music; in 1907, became prof. of music at Queen's College; also conducted provincial orchestras. His works include two operettas: The Enchanted Island (London, May 8, 1900) and The Gardeners (London, Feb. 12, 1906); the cantatas: Ode to a Nightingale and The Pied Piper of Hamelin; a piano concerto; a piano quintet; a piano quartet; two piano trios; a violin sonata; vocal quartets with piano; songs. Author of The Development of Chamber Music (1909). — Cf. 'Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music' (London, 1930; vol. II, p. 566); K. H. Leech, R. H. Walthew, in 'Mus. Opinion' (Jan., 1952).

Walton, Sir William (Turner), eminent English composer; b. Oldham, Lancashire,

March 29, 1902. He received his early education from his father, a music teacher; was sent to the Christ Church Cathedral Choir School at Oxford at the age of 10, and at 16 entered Christ Church College; studied under Sir Hugh Allen at Oxford, and also received advice from E. J. Dent, Busoni, and Ansermet. At the age of 17 he wrote a piano quartet. On June 12, 1923, his amusing and original work, Façade, for speaking voice and instruments, to poems by Edith Sitwell, created something of a sensation in London. However, the somewhat impish wit displayed in Façade is but one aspect of Walton's creative personality; in his later works, there is evident a deep emotional strain, a fine eloquence, and a definitely English melodic style; the sense of tonality is strong in the modern harmonic structure; and the formal design is invariably clear. Walton's temperament lends itself to great versatility; he is successful both in lighter music, as exemplified by his overtures Portsmouth Point and Scapino, and compositions of an epic character, such as the oratorio Belshazzar's Feast. His symphonic works show him as an inheritor of the grand Romantic tradition; his viola concerto and his violin concerto demonstrate his adroitness in modern instrumental writing. He wrote his 1st opera, Troilus and Cressida, at the age of 52. He was knighted in 1951. — Works: opera, Troilus and Cressida (London, Dec. 3, 1954); ballet, The Quest (1943); Façade, an 'entertainment' for declamation, flute, clarinet, saxophone, trumpet, cello, and percussion (London, June 12, 1923; revised in 1942, with an augmented orch.). For orch.: Portsmouth Point, overture (Zürich Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 22, 1926); Siesta (1926); Sinfonia concertante for piano and orch. (London, Jan. 5, 1928); viola concerto (London, Oct. 3, 1929); symph. No. 1 (London, Nov. 6, 1935); Crown Imperial, coronation march for George VI (1937); violin concerto (Cleveland, Dec. 7, 1939, Jascha Heifetz soloist); Orb and Sceptre, coronation march for Elizabeth II (1953); Johannesburg Festival Overture (Johannesburg, South Africa, Sept. 25, 1956); cello concerto (Boston, Piatigorsky soloist, Jan. 25, 1957); Partita (Cleveland, Jan. 30, 1958); 2 orchestral suites from Façade (also used as ballet scores): No. 1 (Siena Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Sept. 14, 1928); No. 2 (N. Y., March 30, 1938). Vocal works: Belshazzar's Feast, oratorio for baritone, chorus, and orch. (Leeds Festival, Oct. 10, 1931); In Honour of the City of London,

WALTZ — WANNENMACHER

for chorus and orch. (Leeds Festival, 1937); Te Deum for the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II (London, June 2, 1953). Chamber music: string quartet (1918-19; Salzburg Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Aug. 4, 1923); Toccata for violin and piano (1923); string quartet in A minor (1947); violin sonata (1949); also piano pieces; transcriptions for orch. of 6 pieces by Bach, arranged as a ballet suite under the title The Wise Virgins (1940); film music: Escape Me Never (1934), As You Like It (1936), Stolen Life (1939), Major Barbara (1941), Henry V (1944), Hamlet (1947), Richard III (1954), etc.; several suites have been drawn from these scores. —Cf. H. J. Foss, William Walton, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1940); F. S. Howes, The Music of William Walton, 2 vols. (London, 1942 and 1943; 'Mus. Pilgrim' series); E. Evans, William Walton, in the 'Mus. Times' (1944); K. Avery, William Walton, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1947).

Waltz, Gustavus, German bass; place and date of birth unknown; d. London about 1753; was in Handel's household in London. He appeared on the London stage in 1732 in Handel's Acis and Galatea and subsequently sang in Handel's oratorios. He is chiefly celebrated because of the reported acrid comment of Handel on Gluck: 'He knows no more of counterpoint than my cook Waltz.' —Cf. W. C. Smith, Gustavus Waltz: Was He Handel's Cook?, in Concerning Handel (London, 1948).

Wambach, Emile, composer; b. Arlon, Luxembourg, Nov. 26, 1854; d. Antwerp, May 6, 1924. He was a pupil of Benoit, Mertens, and Callaerts at the Antwerp Cons. In 1902 he was appointed inspector of the music schools in Belgium; in 1913 succeeded Jan Blockx as director of the Royal Flemish Cons. in Antwerp. His works include the Flemish opera Nathans Parabel; 2 oratorios, Moses op den Nijl and Yolande; cantata Vlaenderland (Flanders) for male chorus; De Lente (Spring) for female chorus with orch.; a symph. poem, Aan de boorden van de Schelde (On the Banks of the Schelde); sacred works; piano pieces; songs. —Cf. L. Vocht, Levensbericht over E. Wambach, in the 'Annuaire' of the Académie Royale de Belgique (vol. 118; 1952; with a list of works).

Wangemann (vähn'-géh-mäh'n), Otto, German music scholar; b. Loitz-on-the-Peene, Jan. 9, 1848; d. Berlin, Feb. 25, 1914. He studied with F. Kiel in Berlin; in 1886, settled there as church organist and singing teacher. He publ. Grundriss der Musik-Geschichte (1878); Geschichte der Orgel (1879; 3rd ed., 1887); Geschichte des Oratoriums (1880); also singing manuals for schools; a Weihnachtsmusik for solo voices, chorus, and orch.; school songs; piano pieces.

Wanhal (Vanhall), Johann Baptist, Bohemian composer; b. Nechanicz, Bohemia, May 12, 1739; d. Vienna, Aug. 26, 1813. His musical ability brought him the patronage of Countess Schaffgotsch, who enabled him to study in Vienna with Dittersdorf; another patron, Baron Riesch, sent him to Italy for further study. He settled in Vienna. An extremely prolific composer, he wrote a great number of piano pieces, which enjoyed considerable popularity among amateurs. He also composed an enormous amount of instrumental music (some 100 symphonies and as many string quartets); 26 Masses; 2 Requiems; 36 offertories. Among his published works are 12 symphonies for strings, 2 oboes, and 2 horns; 12 string quartets; 12 trios for 2 violins and cello; quartets (concerti) for piano and strings; quartets for piano, flute, violin, and cello; piano trios; 5 piano sonatas for 4 hands, and 6 for 2 hands; violin duos; 6 violin sonatas with piano; characteristic sonatas (Militaire, The Battle of Würzburg, The Battle of Trafalgar); many piano sonatinas; 70 books of piano variations; fantasias, dances, and other piano pieces, fugues, preludes, etc., for organ; etc. —Cf. M. von Dewitz, J. B. Vanhall, Leben und Klavierwerke (dissertation; Munich, 1933); G. Wolters, J. Wanhal als Sinfoniker (dissertation; Cologne, 1933).

Wanless, John, English organist and composer; flourished early in the 17th century. He was organist at the Lincoln Cathedral between 1616 and 1625; only a few of his church works are extant, among them an anthem Plead thou my cause. His son, Thomas Wanless (d. 1721), was organist of York Minster from 1691 till 1695. He publ. a psalter, The Metre Psalm-tunes in 4 parts (London, 1702); composed a York Litany.

Wannenmacher (Latinized as Vannius), Johannes, German composer; b. Neuenburg on the Rhine; d. Interlaken, 1551. He was cantor at Bern, Switzerland, in 1510, and at Freiburg-im-Breisgau in 1514; because of his inclinations toward Lutheranism, he was obliged to leave Germany; settled in Interlaken in 1531 as town clerk, and remained there until his death. He was greatly esteemed in his time as a fine polyphonist; Glareanus cites a motet for 4 voices in the Dodecachordon. Wannenmacher's An Wasserflüssen Babylon for 3-6 voices was publ. in Ott's Liederbuch (1544); some German songs by him were publ. posthumously (Bern, 1553). —Cf. A. Geering, Die Vokalmusik in der Schweiz zur Zeit der Reformation: Leben und Werke von Bartholomäus Frank, Johannes Wannenmacher, Cosmas Alder (Aarau, 1933).

Warburg, Felix Moritz, patron of music; b. Hamburg, Jan. 14, 1871; d. New York, Oct. 20, 1937. He came to the U.S. in 1894, and became associated with the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; U.S. citizen, 1900. He participated in many musical activities as sponsor; was a member of the board of the Institute of Musical Art and (in the last two years of his life) of the Metropolitan Opera. He owned a quartet of Stradivarius instruments, and sponsored the concerts of the Stradivarius String Quartet.

Ward, Frank Edwin, American organist and composer; b. Wysox, Pa., Oct. 7, 1872; d. Wolfburo, N. H., Sept. 15, 1953. He studied at the N.Y. College of Music with J. P. Lawrence (organ) and S. A. Pearce (theory); was a student of MacDowell at Columbia Univ. (1898-1903); later became associate prof. of music there (1909-19); for 40 years (1906-46) was organist and choirmaster at the Church of the Holy Trinity, N.Y. His works include a Lenten cantata, The Saviour of the World; a Christmas cantata, The Divine Birth; Ocean Rhapsody for orch.; services; anthems; organ pieces; part-songs; also 2 string quartets and other chamber music.

Ward, John, English composer; place and date of birth unknown; d. before 1641. He was in the service of Sir Henry Fanshawe (d. 1616), to whom he dedicated The First Set of English Madrigals to 3. 4. 5. and 6. parts apt both for Viols and Voyces. With a Mourning Song in memory of Prince Henry (London, 1613). As a composer he is especially notable for his madrigals for 5 and 6 voices; he also wrote services and anthems; fancies for 4, 5, and 6 viols; and pieces for the virginals. His madrigals were reprinted in vol. XIX of 'The English Madrigal School.' —Cf. E. H. Fellowes, The English Madrigal Composers (1921).

Ward, John Milton, American musicologist; b. Oakland, Calif., July 6, 1917. He studied at the Univ. of Washington (M.M., 1942); New York Univ. (Ph. D., 1953, with the dissertation The Vihuela de Mano and Its Music [1536-76]); held the following teaching positions: instructor, Dept. of Literature and Fine Arts, Michigan State Univ. (1947-53); assistant (later associate) prof., Univ. of Illinois (1953-55); 1955, appointed associate prof., Harvard Univ.; 1958, prof. He publ. The Dublin Virginal MS (Wellesley, Mass., 1954); also The Editorial Methods of Venegas de Henestrosa, in 'Musica Disciplina' (1952); Les Sources de la musique pour le clavier en Angleterre, in 'La Musique instrumentale de la Renaissance' (Paris, 1955); and other articles in various publications.

Ward, Robert, American composer; b. Cleveland, Sept. 13, 1917. He studied at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y., with Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers, and at the Juilliard School, N. Y., with Frederick Jacobi (composition) and Albert Stoessel (conducting); also took a course with Aaron Copland at the Berkshire Music Center. He graduated from the Army Music School at Fort Meyer, Va.; composed the musical score for the Army revue, The Life of Riley, produced at Fort Riley; was band-leader of the 7th Infantry Division Band in the Pacific Theater. After the war, he graduated from the Juilliard School (1946); then taught there, and elsewhere in N. Y. He held Guggenheim Fellowships in 1949 and 1951. In 1955 he became president of the American Composers Alliance; in 1956 he was appointed managing editor of the Galaxy Music Corporation and Highgate Press. —Works: Fatal Interview for soprano and orch. (1937); Ode for orch. (1939); Yankee Overture (1940); symph. No. 1 (N. Y., May 10, 1941); Adagio and Allegro for orch. (1943); Jubilation Overture (Los Angeles, Nov. 21, 1946); symph. No. 2 (Washington, Jan. 25, 1948); Concert Music for orch. (1948); Night Music, for chamber orch. (1949); Jonathon and the Gingery Snare, for narrator, small orch., and percussion (Young People's Concert, N.Y. Philharmonic, Feb. 4, 1950); symph. No. 3 (Washington, March 31, 1950); Fantasia for brass choir and timpani (1953); Euphony for orch. (1954); Pantaloon, opera after Leonid Andreyev's play, He Who Gets Slapped (Juilliard School of Music, N. Y., May 17, 1956); chamber music: violin sonata (1950) and Arioso and Tarantella, for cello and piano (1954); choruses; piano pieces; songs. —Cf. 'American Composers Alliance Bulletin' (1955, No. 4).

Ware, Harriet, American pianist and composer; b. Waupun, Wis., Aug. 26, 1877. She received her musical instruction from her father, who was a professional musician and choral conductor; she then studied piano with Dr. William Mason in N.Y. and with Sigismund Stojowski in Paris; composition with Hugo Kaun in Berlin; in 1906 she returned to the United States. Her Women's Triumphal March was made the national song of the Federation of Women's Clubs in 1927; her symph. poem The Artisan was given by the N.Y. Symph. Orch. in 1929. Some of her songs (Boat Song, Joy of the Morning, The Call of Radha, Stars, Sunlight Waltz Song, etc.) have achieved considerable popularity. She also wrote the choral cycles, Trees and Undine; an operetta, Waltz For Three; piano pieces (Mountain Pictures, Midnight Waltz, etc.).

Wareing, Herbert Walter, English composer; b. Birmingham, April 5, 1857; d. Malvern, March 29, 1918. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Reinecke, Jadassohn, and Papperitz; upon his return to England he filled various positions as organist; in 1909 became prof. of piano at Malvern College, where he remained until his death. He wrote several operettas for children: Princess Snowflake, The Court of Queen Summergold, A Garden of Japan, A Day in Roseland; cantatas, The Wreck of the Hesperus, The Angel Reapers, The Nativity, The Good Shepherd, New Year's Eve; numerous choruses and solo songs; church services; piano pieces.

Warlich (vähr'-lih), Reinhold von, baritone; b. St. Petersburg, May 24, 1877; d. New York, Nov. 10, 1939. His father, a German musician resident in Russia, was an opera conductor in St. Petersburg, and Warlich received his training at home; then studied at the Hamburg Cons., in Florence, and in Cologne. He toured in Europe as a singer of German lieder, and was especially distinguished as an interpreter of Schubert, whose song cycles he gave in their entirety. He lived for some time in Canada; later was singing teacher in Paris and London; made concert tours in the U.S. from 1909, eventually settling in N.Y.

Warlock, Peter. See Haseltine.

Warnecke (vähr'-näh-käh), (Johann Heinrich) Friedrich, German double-bass player and pedagogue; b. Bodenteich, Nov. 19, 1856; d. Hamburg, March 1, 1931. He studied with Bontemps in Ulzen and with Walther in Hanover; was a member of various military bands (1874-89); then settled in Hamburg; from 1893 to 1924 he was a member of the Hamburg Philharmonic and prof. at the Hamburg Cons. He publ. Das Studium des Kontrabass-Spiels (2 parts; with German and English text); piano pieces and songs. Author of 'Ad infinitum.' Der Kontrabass, seine Geschichte und seine Zukunft. Probleme und deren Lösung zur Hebung des Kontrabass-Spiels (1909) and Der Kontrabass (1929).

Warner, Harry Waldo, English viola player and composer; b. Northampton, Jan. 4, 1874; d. London, June 1, 1945. He studied violin with Alfred Gibson and theory with R. Orlando Morgan at the Guildhall School of Music; subsequently taught there (until 1920); while still a student, he wrote an opera, The Royal Vagrants (1900), which was performed by the opera class. When the London String Quartet was founded in 1907, he joined it as viola player, remaining with it until 1928. His chamber music received several prizes, including the $1000 E. S. Coolidge prize for a piano trio (1921) and a Cobbett prize for an earlier piano trio. His other works comprise 2 Phantasy Quartets (1906 and 1913); a Folk-Song Phantasy for string quartet (1917); The Pixy Ring for string quartet (1921); 3 Elfin Dances (1905) for orch.; Hampton Wick, a tone picture for orch. (awarded $1000 in the Hollywood Bowl Competition, 1932; 1st performance, Cincinnati Symph. Orch., Nov. 30, 1934); Suite in the Olden Style, for string orch. (originally for string quartet; London, Sept. 22, 1928); piano pieces; many songs. —Cf. 'Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music' (London, 1930; vol. II, pp. 567-69).

Warner, Sylvia Townsend, English novelist and writer on music; b. London, Dec. 6, 1893. Apart from her well-known novels and books of poetry, she publ. valuable papers on music history; author of The Point of Perfection in 16th Century Notation (1919); was one of the editors of the collection 'Tudor Church Music.' She also composed a rhapsody for voice and string quartet, Memorial; a song cycle, Children of the Earth; etc.

Warnots, Henri, Belgian tenor and composer; b. Brussels, July 11, 1832; d. Saint-Josse-ten-Noode, Feb. 27, 1893. He studied at the Brussels Cons.; then sang in Paris and Strasbourg. In 1867, he became prof. at the Brussels Cons.; in 1870, established a music school in Saint-Josse-ten-Noode, where he remained until his death. His operetta, Une Heure de mariage, was produced in Strasbourg on Jan. 24, 1865.

Warren, Elinor Remick, American pianist and composer of songs; b. Los Angeles, Feb. 23, 1905. She was educated at the Westlake School for Girls, and at Mills College; publ. her first compositions while still in high school; later studied in N. Y. with Frank La Forge, Paolo Gallico, and Clarence Dickinson; appeared as pianist. —Works: The Harp Weaver, for women's chorus, baritone, harp, and orch.; The Passing of King Arthur for orch.; Singing Earth, song cycle for voice and piano (or orch.); many songs (White Horses of the Sea, Children of the Moon, My Lady Lo Fu, We Two, Christmas Candle, etc.).

Warren, George William, American organist and composer of sacred music; b. Albany, N.Y., Aug. 17, 1828; d. New York, March 17, 1902. He held positions as church organist in Albany (1846-60), in Brooklyn (1860-70), and at St. Thomas, N.Y. (from 1870 until his death). He publ. 'Warren's Hymns and Tunes, as Sung at St. Thomas's Church' (1888). He is remembered chiefly for his tune, National Hymn, to which God of Our Fathers is sung.

Warren, Leonard, American baritone; b. New York, April 21, 1911. The original family name was Varenov; it was Americanized as Warren when his father came from Russia to the U.S. His father was in the fur business in N.Y., and Leonard Warren helped him, while studying at the Greenwich House Music School. He won an audition with the Metropolitan Opera in 1938 and was granted a stipend to study in Milan. Returning to America, he made his debut at the Metropolitan Opera on Jan. 13, 1939 as Paolo in Simon Boccanegra. He quickly advanced in the favor of the public; sang baritone roles in Verdi's operas with excellent success; also toured in South America and Canada. He appeared at La Scala, Milan, in 1953 as Rigoletto (one of his best roles). In the spring of 1958 he made a successful tour in Russia.

Warren, Richard Henry, American organist and composer; son of G. W. Warren; b. Albany, N.Y. Sept. 17, 1859; d. South Chatham, Mass., Dec. 3, 1933. He was organist and choirmaster in various churches in N.Y.; founded (1886) the Church Choral Society, which he conducted until 1895 and again from 1903 to 1907, producing many important works, including the American premières of choral compositions by Dvořák, Liszt, Gounod, Saint-Saëns, etc. Horatio Parker wrote his Hora Novissima for this society, and Warren brought it out on May 3, 1893. Among Warren's own compositions are the operettas Igala (1880), All on a Summer's Day (1882), Magnolia (1886), The Rightful Heir (1899); a 'romantic opera,' Phyllis (N.Y., May 7, 1900); a cantata, Ticonderoga (1894); services; anthems; songs.

Warren, Samuel Prowse, organist; b. Montreal, Feb. 18, 1841; d. New York, Oct. 7, 1915. He studied organ with Haupt in Berlin, piano with Gustav Schumann, and theory with Wieprecht. After filling various positions in N.Y. churches, he inaugurated a series of organ recitals, which were greatly appreciated, and created for him a reputation as one of the foremost concert organists in the U.S. He publ. many organ pieces and songs; also made excellent transcriptions for organ of works by Weber, Beethoven, Schumann, and Wagner.

Wartel (vähr-tèhl'), Pierre-François, noted French singer and teacher; b. Versailles, April 3, 1806; d. Paris, Aug. 3, 1882. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Nourrit; was engaged as tenor at the Paris Opéra (1831-46), but became known chiefly as an experienced singing teacher; Christine Nilsson was one of his many famous pupils. He also gave song recitals, in which he performed songs by Schubert for the first time in France. His wife, Atale Thérèse Annette Wartel (née Adrien; b. Paris, July 2, 1814; d. there, Nov. 6, 1865), was a talented pianist; she also composed piano studies and other pieces.

Wasielewski (väh-së-lëhf-skë), Wilhelm Joseph von, eminent German music scholar; b. Gross-Leesen, near Danzig, June 17, 1822; d. Sondershausen, Dec. 13, 1896. He studied violin as a private pupil of Ferdinand David in Leipzig, and also had lessons with Mendelssohn (1843-45). He joined the Gewandhaus Orch. (until 1850); went to Düsseldorf, where he was concertmaster under Schumann (1850-52); then was choral conductor in Bonn (1852-55); in 1855 he settled in Dresden as a writer, in which capacity he greatly distinguished himself. He was music critic for the 'Signale' and wrote for the 'Leipziger Zeitung' and the 'Dresdner Journal'; in 1869 he became town music director in Bonn, remaining in that position until 1884, when he went to Sondershausen. —Writings: Robert Schumann (1858; 4th ed., 1906; English transl., 1871), with important supplementary matter in Schumanniana (1883); Die Violine und ihre Meister (1869; 2nd augmented ed., 1883; 7th ed., 1927); Die Violine im 17. Jahrhundert und die Anfänge der Instrumentalkomposition (1874; 2nd ed., 1905); Geschichte der Instrumentalmusik im 16. Jahrhundert (1878); Beethoven (1888; 2 vols.); Das Violoncell und seine Geschichte (1889; 3rd ed. by his son Waldemar, 1925; in English, 1894); Carl Reinecke, sein Leben, Wirken und Schaffen (Leipzig, 1892); and Aus 70 Jahren, memoirs (Stuttgart, 1897). To Waldersee's 'Sammlung musikalischer Vorträge' he contributed Musikalische Fürsten vom Mittelalter bis zum Beginne des 19. Jahrhunderts (1879) and Goethes Verhältniss zur Musik (1880).

Wassermann, Heinrich Joseph, German conductor and composer; b. Schwarzbach, near Fulda, April 3, 1791; d. Riehen, near Basel, Sept. 3, 1838. He was a pupil of Spohr; became an orchestral conductor in Switzerland. He wrote a Thème original varié for string quartet; a quartet for flute, violin, viola, and cello; Air varié for bassoon and string orch.; Divertissement (on the Tyrolian 'Alma-Lied') for violin and orch.; a number of orchestral dances; pieces for guitar.

Waters, Edward N(eighbor), American musicologist; b. Leavenworth, Kansas, July 23, 1906. He studied piano and theory at the Eastman School of Music (B.M., 1927); M.M. in musicology, 1928. In 1931 he joined the staff of the Music Division, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., becoming assistant chief; president of the Music Library Association (1941-46); was program annotator for the concerts of the National Symph. Orch., Washington (1934-43); 1937-38, taught bibliography at the Catholic Univ. of Washington; contributed valuable papers to various musical periodicals; publ. a definitive biography of Victor Herbert (N. Y., 1955).

Watson, Henry, English composer; b. Burnley, Lancashire, April 30, 1846; d. Salford, Jan. 8, 1911. He studied with private teachers; then was organist in various churches. In 1867 he founded (with Henry Wilson) the Manchester Vocal Union, becoming its conductor in 1885 (after Wilson's death); also taught the choral class at the Royal College of Music, Manchester. In 1899 he presented his valuable library (some 30,000 vols.) to the Corporation of Manchester. He composed an opera, Fair Rosine (Manchester, 1882); A Shakespearian Cantata; The Deliverance of Israel, oratorio for solo voices, chorus, and orch.; many part-songs. See the article on him in the 'Mus. Times' (June, 1909).

Watson, William Michael, English composer and poet; b. Newcastle-on-Tyne, July 31, 1840; d. London, Oct. 3, 1889. He established the West End School of Music in London in 1883; composed a cantata, Aladdin (1885), part-songs, piano pieces, etc.

Watts, Wintter, American composer; b. Cincinnati, March 14, 1884. He studied at the Institute of Musical Art, N.Y.; in 1919 received the Morris Loeb Prize of $1000 for his symph. poem Young Blood; won the Pulitzer Prize in 1923, and the Prix de Rome, which enabled him to study at the American Academy in Rome (1923-25). He lived for some time in Europe, returning to N.Y. in 1931. Among his larger works are a Bridal Overture (1916), an orchestral suite, Etchings (1921), etc., but he is chiefly known as a composer of fine songs: Wings of Night, Joy, With the Tide, Wild Tears, Alone; a cycle of 9 songs to poems by Sara Teasdale, Vignettes of Italy; etc. —Cf. W. T. Upton, Art-Song in America (N.Y., 1930; pp. 182-97).

Waxman, Franz, composer; b. Königshütte, Germany, Dec. 24, 1906. He studied in Dresden and Berlin; went to the U.S. in 1934, and settled in Hollywood, where he took lessons with Arnold Schoenberg; became a successful composer for films; his musical score for Sunset Boulevard won the Academy Award for 1950; other works include a Sinfonietta for string orch. and timpani (1955); a fantasy on Carmen for violin and orch.; etc.

Weaver, Powell, American pianist and composer, b. Clearfield, Pa., June 10, 1890; d. Kansas City, Dec. 22, 1951. He studied organ with Pietro Yon in N.Y., and composition with Respighi in Rome. Returning to the U.S., he was engaged as accompanist to prominent singers; also gave organ recitals. —Works: for orch.: Plantation Overture (1925), The Little Faun (1925; Boston Women's Symph. Orch., April 14, 1929), The Vagabond, symph. poem (Minneapolis, March 6, 1931), Dance of the Sand-Dune Cranes, for piano and orch. (1941); choral works: Boating Song, Spirit of God, Moon-Marketing, The Humming-Bird, also a Sabbath Evening Service (Hebrew); chamber music: An Ode, for piano and strings, a violin sonata, etc.

Webb, Daniel, English writer on music; b. Taunton, 1735; d. Bath, Aug. 2, 1815. He publ. the important paper, Observations on the Correspondence between Poetry and Music (London, 1769; reprinted in his 'Miscellanies,' 1803).

Webb, Frank Rush, American organist and bandmaster; b. Covington, Ind., Oct. 8, 1851; d. Baltimore, Oct. 20, 1934. He studied at the New England Cons. in Boston; then was church organist in Indianapolis and piano teacher in Ohio; from 1883 to 1910, he was director of the School of Music in the Virginia Female Institute, Staunton, Va.; from 1883 to 1892, bandmaster of the Stonewall Brigade Band. He publ. nearly 200 pieces for military band; also much salon music for piano, aggregating to 108 op. numbers; church music; songs.

Webb, George James, organist and magazine editor; b. Rushmore Lodge, near Salisbury, England, June 24, 1803; d. Orange, N. J., Oct. 7, 1887. He settled in Boston in 1830, becoming organist of the Old South Church, a founder of the Boston Academy of Music in 1836, and president of the Handel and Haydn Society in 1840. In 1870 he settled in Orange, N. J., but continued musical activities in N. Y. as teacher. He edited two periodicals: 'The Musical Library' (1835-36), with L. Mason; and 'The Musical Cabinet' (1841-42), with T. B. Hayward; also brought out the 'Young Ladies' Vocal Class Book' (Boston, 1853); 'The Glee Hive' and 'The New Odeon' (both with L. Mason); and 'Cantica laudis' (N. Y., 1850; also with Mason); publ. Vocal Technique and Voice Culture (with C. G. Allen). His hymn tune, known simply as Webb, retains its popularity.

Webbe, Samuel, famous English composer of catches and glees; b. London, 1740; d. there, May 25, 1816. He began his career as a copyist for the London publisher Welcker, who enabled him to study music with the organist Barbandt; was appointed organist and choirmaster at the Chapel of the Portuguese Embassy in 1776, and later obtained a similar appointment at the Sardinian Embassy (holding both positions concurrently); from 1784 until his death he was secretary of the Catch Club, also librarian of the Glee Club (from 1787). In 1766, his canon O that I had wings won the prize of the Catch Club, and subsequently he carried off 26 other prizes with various catches and glees. Publ. 9 vols. of catches and glees (reprinted later with 3 additional vols.), a Cecilian Ode for 6 voices, a concerto for harpsichord, a Diversissement for wind band, and several collections of Masses and motets.

Webbe, Samuel, Jr., English composer, son of the preceding; b. London, 1770; d. there, Nov. 25, 1843. He was a pupil of his father, and also received instruction from Clementi. He wrote many glees and catches, obtaining several prizes from the Catch Club; also produced his musical comedy, The Speechless Wife (Covent Garden, May 22, 1794). He lived in Liverpool from 1798 until 1817; returned to London, where he taught at Logier's School of Music and served as organist at the Spanish Embassy. Besides glees, duets, hymn-tunes, organ voluntaries, sonatas for harpsichord, etc., he wrote L'Amico del principiante (28 short solfeggi) and Harmony Epitomised, or Elements of the Thorough-bass; also ed. 'Convito Armonico' (4 vols.; a collection of madrigals, glees, catches, canons, etc., by prominent composers).

Webber, Amherst, English composer; b. Cannes, France, Oct. 25, 1867; d. London, July 25, 1946. He studied in Oxford, Dresden, and Paris. His first professional occupation was that of an opera coach at Covent Garden in London and at the Metropolitan Opera in New York. He wrote a short comic opera Fiorella (London, June 7, 1905), and many songs to French and English words. His symphony had several performances in Europe and America.

Weber, Alain, French composer; b. Château-Thierry, Dec. 8, 1930; studied with Tony Aubin at the Paris Cons.; won 2nd prize in composition; in 1952 received the Premier Grand Prix de Rome. In his works he emulates Ravel and Honegger. He has written a ballet, Le petit jeu (Paris, 1953); concertino for flute and orch.; string quintet and many miniatures for various instruments.

Weber, Ben, American composer; b. St. Louis, July 23, 1916. He studied medicine at the Univ. of Illinois; then music at De Paul Univ.; held a Guggenheim Fellowship twice. From his early steps in composition he adopted an atonal melodic style and a highly coloristic harmonic idiom, while adhering to basic forms and shunning representational music. Works: ballet, The Pool of Darkness, for flute, violin, trumpet, bassoon, cello, and piano (1949); Sinfonia for cello and orch. (also cello and piano); Symphony on Poems of William Blake (N. Y., Oct. 28, 1952); violin concerto (1954); Prelude and Passacaglia for orch. (Louisville, Feb. 19, 1955); 2 pieces for string orch.; chamber music: Pastorale and Scherzo for woodwind instruments, fantasy for violin and piano, 2 violin sonatas, Lyric Piece for string quartet, Pastorale for violin and piano, Variations for violin, clarinet, cello, and piano, concertino for violin, clarinet, and cello, 5 pieces for cello and piano, divertimento for 2 solo cellos, Chorale and Variations for viola and piano, Sonata da Camera for violin and piano, concerto for piano solo, cello, and woodwind quintet, Colloquy for brass septet, serenade for harpsichord, flute, oboe, and cello, ballade for cello and piano, Aubade for flute, cello, and harp, 2 string quartets, 2 violin sonatas, 2 string trios, 2 dances for cello and piano; Closing Piece for organ solo; songs; piano pieces. —Cf. 'Bulletin of American Composers Alliance' (1955, No. 2).

Weber, Bernhard Anselm, German pianist and composer; b. Mannheim, April 18, 1766; d. Berlin, March 23, 1821. He studied with Abbé Vogler and Holzbauer; also took courses in theology and law at the Univ. of Heidelberg; then traveled as performer on the Xänorphica, a keyboard instrument invented by Röllig. In 1787 he became music director of Grossmann's opera troupe; went to Stockholm in 1790; in 1792 was appointed conductor of the Königsstadt Theater in Berlin, remaining in this capacity after its union with the Italian Opera. A great admirer of Gluck, he was the first to introduce Gluck's operas in Berlin, and his own works closely followed Gluck's style. He produced in Berlin 2 of his operas: Mudarra (March 10, 1800) and Die Wette (Jan. 21, 1805). Some of his songs were popular for a time. —Cf. H. Fischer, B. A. Weber (dissertation; Berlin, 1923).

Weber, Bernhard Christian, German organist and composer; b. Wolferschwenda, Dec. 1, 1712; d. Tennstedt, Feb. 5, 1758. He settled in Tennstedt as town organist in 1732. Inspired by Bach's example, and at the instigation of Bach's pupil G. H. Noah, Weber composed for organ a work containing 24 preludes and fugues in all keys, and entitled it Das wohltemperierte Klavier

(new ed. by Max Seiffert in the 'Neue Bachgesellschaft,' 1933).

Weber (vā'-bēhr), Carl Maria (Friedrich Ernst), Freiherr von, celebrated German composer; the founder of the German Romantic school; b. Eutin, Oldenburg, Nov. 18, 1786; d. London, June 5, 1826. His father, Franz Anton von Weber (1734-1812), was an army officer and a good musical amateur, who played the violin and served as town musician in Eutin. It was his fondest wish to see one of his children become a great musician; Constanze Weber, Mozart's wife, was his niece (so that Carl Maria was Mozart's first cousin by marriage), and Mozart was constantly the family's ideal to follow. Carl Maria's mother was a singer of some ability; she died when he was 12 years old. Franz Anton von Weber led a wandering life as musical director of a traveling theatrical troupe, and he took his family with him. Although this mode of life interfered with Weber's regular education, it gave him practical knowledge of the stage, and stimulated his imagination as a dramatic composer. Weber's first teacher was his stepbrother Fritz, a pupil of Haydn; at Hildburghausen, where he found himself with his father's company in 1796, he received piano instruction from J. P. Heuschkel. The next year he was in Salzburg, where he attracted the attention of Michael Haydn, who taught him counterpoint. As his peregrinations continued, he was taught singing by Valesi (J. B. Wallishauser), and composition by J. N. Kalcher, in Munich (1798-1800); by that time he had already publ. his first work, 6 fuguetas for piano (1798). At the age of 13, he wrote an opera, Die Macht der Liebe und des Weins; it was never performed, and the MS is lost. He also appeared as a pianist. Through a meeting with Aloys Senefelder, the inventor of lithography, he became greatly interested in engraving; still a mere boy, he acquired considerable skill in the process, and even worked out some improvements; engraved his variations for piano, op. 2, himself, in 1800. His father, too, became interested in the business possibilities of lithography, and set up a workshop with him in Freiberg, Saxony; the venture did not succeed, and Carl Maria turned again to music; wrote a 2-act opera, Das Waldmädchen, which was produced in Freiberg 6 days after his 14th birthday, on Nov. 24, 1800; performances followed in Chemnitz (Dec. 5, 1800) and, 4 years later, in Vienna. In 1801 the family was once more in Salzburg, where

Weber studied further with Michael Haydn, and wrote another opera, Peter Schmoll und seine Nachbarn; after a stay in Hamburg (1802), they proceeded to Augsburg (1803) and finally to Vienna. There, Weber made a serious study of the works of the great masters under the guidance of Abbé Vogler, at whose recommendation he secured the post of conductor of the Breslau City Theater (1804); in 1806 he became Musik-Intendant to Duke Eugen of Württemberg at Schloss Karlsruhe in Silesia; in Sept. 1807 he was engaged as private secretary to Duke Ludwig at Stuttgart, and music master to his children. This employment was abruptly terminated when Weber became innocently involved in a scheme of securing a ducal appointment for a rich man's son in order to exempt him from military service, and accepted a loan of money; as a result of the disclosure of this affair, Weber was arrested and kept in prison for 2 weeks, after which he was expelled from Stuttgart. He went to Darmstadt, where he rejoined his old teacher Abbé Vogler, for whom he did some editorial and analytic work in publishing an edition of Bach's chorales. On Sept. 16, 1810, Weber's opera Silvana was successfully presented in Frankfurt; on June 4, 1811, he brought out in Munich a new opera, Abu Hassan. In the meantime, he appeared as pianist, giving concerts in Frankfurt, Würzburg, Nuremberg, Bamberg, Weimar, Gotha, and other German towns. In 1813 he received his first important appointment, that of conductor of the German Opera in Prague; there he presented a distinguished repertory, which included Beethoven's Fidelio; traveled to Vienna to engage a company of singers; among them was Caroline Brandt, his future wife. His reputation as music director and composer rose considerably, and the King of Saxony called him to Dresden to take charge of the German Opera Theater there. He opened his Dresden season on Jan. 30, 1817; became friendly with Friedrich Kind, a Dresden lawyer and writer, and suggested to him the idea of writing a libretto on a typically German subject. They agreed on Der Freischütz, a fairy tale from J. A. Apel's and F. Laun's collection of ghost stories, Gespensterbuch. The composition of this work, which was to prove his masterpiece, occupied him fully 3 years; the overture was finished in May 1820; interrupting his work, he wrote (in 3 weeks) several musical numbers to Preciosa, a play in 4 acts with spoken dialogue; it was produced in Berlin on March 14, 1821; another stage work, Die drei Pintos, which Weber started at about the same time, was left unfinished. Finally, Der Freischütz was completed, and accepted for performance at the new Berlin Opera Theater. There existed an undercurrent of rivalry with Spontini, director of the Berlin Opera and an almost absolute master of operatic policy in Berlin; the challenge was that of rising German nationalism against the Italian-French tradition. Weber conducted the première on June 18, 1821; the work's success surpassed all expectations; the cause of new Romantic art was won; Der Freischütz was soon staged by all the major opera houses of Europe. In English, it was given first in London, on July 22, 1824; translations into other languages followed. Weber's next opera was Euryanthe, produced in Vienna, on Oct. 25, 1823, with only moderate success. Meanwhile, Weber's health was affected by incipient tuberculosis, and he was compelled to go to Marienbad for a cure (1824). He recovered sufficiently to begin the composition of Oberon, commissioned from him by Covent Garden, London; the English libretto was by J. R. Planché, based on a translation of C. M. Wieland's Oberon. Once more, illness interrupted Weber's progress on his work; he spent some time in Ems to recuperate, and then embarked on the voyage to England, early in 1826. He rehearsed the opera thoroughly, and conducted the première at Covent Garden on April 12, 1826, obtaining tremendous success with the London audience. Despite his greatly weakened condition, he conducted eleven more performances of Oberon, and participated also in various London concerts, playing for the last time a week before his death. He was buried in London; his remains were removed to Dresden on Dec. 15, 1844; on that occasion Richard Wagner delivered an oration and conducted a funeral march on motifs from Euryanthe, as well as a funeral ode for double chorus expressly written for the service. Weber's role in music history is epoch-making; in his operas, particularly in Der Freischütz, he opened the era of musical Romanticism, in decisive opposition to the established Italianate style. The highly dramatic and poetic portrayal of a German fairy-tale, with its aura of supernatural mystery, appealed to the public, whose imagination had been stirred by the emergent Romantic literature of the period. Weber's melodic genius and his mastery of the craft of composition made it possible for him to break with tradition and to start on a new path, at a critical time when individualism and nationalism began to emerge as sources of creative artistry. His instrumental works, too, possess a new quality which signalizes the transition from Classical to Romantic music. For piano he wrote pieces of extraordinary brilliance, introducing some novel elements in chord writing and passage work. He was himself an excellent pianist; his large hands gave him an unusual command of the keyboard—he could stretch the interval of a twelfth. Weber's influence on the development of German music was very great. The evolutionary link to Wagner's music drama is evident in the coloring of the orchestral parts in Weber's operas and in the adumbration of the principle of leading motifs. —A complete edition of Weber's works was undertaken in 1926 under the general editorship of H. J. Moser; only the following vols. were published: vols. I-II, early operas, ed. by A. Lorenz and W. Kaehler; vol. III, the Salzburg Mass, ed. by C. Schneider; Preciosa, ed. by L. K. Mayer. Previously unpublished works are found in L. Hirschberg's Reliquienstein des Meisters C. M. von Weber (Berlin, 1827). A complete thematic catalogue of Weber's works was publ. by F. W. Jähns, C. M. von Weber in seinen Werken (Berlin, 1871).

WORKS

OPERAS: Das Waldmädchen (Freiberg, Nov. 24, 1800); Peter Schmoll und seine Nachbarn (Augsburg, March, 1803); Rübezahl (1805; unfinished); Silvana (Frankfurt, Sept. 16, 1810); Abu Hassan (Munich, June 4, 1811); Preciosa (Berlin, March 14, 1821); Der Freischütz (Berlin, June 18, 1821); Die drei Pintos (1821; unfinished; completed by Gustav Mahler after Weber's sketches and produced in Leipzig, Jan. 20, 1888); Euryanthe (Vienna, Oct. 25, 1823); Oberon, or The Elf King's Oath (London, April 12, 1826); incidental music to Gozzi's Turandot (1809), Moreto's Donna Diana (1817), Adolf Müllner's König Yngurd (1817), Theodor Hell's Das Haus Anglade (1818), Grillparzer's Sappho (1818), Gehe's Heinrich IV (1818), Rublack's Lieb' um Liebe (1818), Houwald's Der Leuchtturm (1820), Ludwig Robert's Den Sachsensohn vermählet heute (1822).

OTHER VOCAL WORKS: The cantata Der erste Ton, for declamation, chorus, and orch. (1808); op. 36, In seiner Ordnung schafft der Herr, for soli, chorus, and orch. (1812); op. 44, Kampf und Sieg, cantata on the battle of Waterloo (1815); L'Accoglienza for 6 solo voices, chorus, and orch. (1817); op. 58, Jubel-Kantate for soli, chorus, and orch. (1818); op. 61, Natur und Liebe, cantata for 2 sopranos, 2 tenors, and 2 basses, with piano (1818); other occasional cantatas; 2 Masses (Eb, G), also 2 offertories, for soli, chorus, and orch.; 6 part-songs for men's voices, op. 42 (to Th. Körner's Leyer und Schwert; achieved great popularity with students); 5 part-songs for men's chorus, op. 53b; 6 part-songs for men's chorus, op. 68; 5 scenes for soprano with orch. (op. 16, 'Il Momento s'avvicina'; op. 50, 'Misera me,' for Atalia, 1811; op. 51, 'Non paventar, mia vita,' for Ines de Castro, 1816; op. 52, 'Ah, se Edmondo fosse l'uccisor,' for Méhul's Hélène, 1815; op. 56, 'Was sag' ich? Schaudern macht mich der Gedanke,' for Cherubini's Lodoiska); op. 53, scena for tenor, double chorus, and orch., 'Signor, se padre sei,' for Ines de Castro; scena and aria for tenor, men's chorus, and orch., 'Qual altro attendi'; recitative, 'Doch welche Töne steigen jetzt hernieder,' for Spontini's Olympie; many songs (op. 13, 15, 23, 25, 29, 30, 41, 43, 46, 47, 54, 64, 66, 71, 80); 8 part-songs for mixed voices, with and without accompaniment; 6 canons for 3 and 4 voices; duets (op. 31); 10 Scotch folksongs arranged with accompaniment of flute, violin, cello, and piano.

INSTRUMENTAL WORKS. FOR ORCHESTRA: Op. 27, Der Beherrscher der Geister, overture (to the unfinished opera, Rübezahl); op. 59, Jubel-Ouverture; 2 symphonies, both in C major; march for wind instruments; waltz for wind instruments.—CONCERTED PIECES: 2 piano concertos (op. 11, C major; op. 32, Eb major) and a Konzertstück in F major (op. 79); concertino for clarinet and orch. in Eb major (op. 26) and 2 clarinet concertos (op. 73, F minor; op. 74, Eb major); Andante und Rondo in C minor for bassoon and orch. (op. 35); concerto in F major for bassoon and orch. (op. 75); concertino in E minor for horn and orch. (op. 45); Romanza siciliana for flute and orch.; 6 variations on a German folksong for cello and orch.; Potpourri for cello and orch.; Andante and variations in D minor for cello and orch.; Adagio and Rondo for 'Harmonichord' and orchestra. —CHAMBER MUSIC: Op. 8, piano quartet in Bb major; op. 13, 6 sonatas for violin and piano (F major, G major, D minor, Eb major, A major, C major); op. 22, variations on a Norwegian theme for violin and piano, in D minor; op. 33, variations for clarinet and piano in Bb major; op. 34, clarinet quintet in Bb major; op. 48, Duo concertant in Eb major for clarinet and piano; op. 63, piano trio in G minor. —FOR PIANO SOLO: 4 sonatas (op. 24, C major; op. 39, Ab major; op. 49, D minor; op. 70, E minor); op. 1, Sechs Fuguetten; op. 2, variations on an original theme; op. 4, Douze Allemandes; op. 5, variations on an Air de ballet from Vogler's Castor et Pollux; op. 6, variations on an air from Vogler's Samori; op. 7, variations on Bianchi's Vien qu'à Dorina; op. 9, variations on an original theme; op. 12, Momento capriccioso; op. 21, Grande Polonaise in Eb major; op. 28, variations on a theme from Méhul's Joseph; op. 40, variations on a Russian theme; op. 50, Polonaise brillante in E major; op. 53, caprice and variations on a theme from Preciosa; op. 55, variations on a Gypsy theme; op. 62, Rondo brillant in Eb major; op. 65, Aufforderung zum Tanz (Invitation to the Dance; in 2 orchestral versions, by Berlioz and Weingartner, and in innumerable arrangements for various instruments); op. 72, Polacca brillante (arranged for piano and orch. by Liszt); op. 81, Les Adieux, fantasy; 6 Écossaises; 18 Valses favorites de l'Impératrice de France. —FOR PIANO 4 HANDS: Op. 3, Sechs leichte Stücke; op. 10, Six sonates progressives et agréables; op. 60, Acht leichte Stücke. A popular piece publ. under the title Weber's Last Waltz (or Weber's Last Thought) is a composition of K. G. Reissiger, not Weber.

Writings: An unfinished novel, criticisms, explanatory remarks on new works produced by him in Dresden, poems, etc., were publ. by Th. Hell as Hinterlassene Schriften von C. M. von Weber (3 vols.; Dresden, 1828; 2nd ed., 1850). A more complete and a better ed. is that of G. Kaiser, Sämtliche Schriften von C. M. von Weber (Berlin, 1908). R. Kleinecke publ. Ausgewählte Schriften von K. M. von Weber (Leipzig, 1892); a more recent collection was publ. by W. Altmann, Weber's Ausgewählte Schriften (Regensburg, 1928). Ein Brevier was ed. by H. Dünnebeil (Berlin, 1949).

BIBLIOGRAPHY —A. BIOGRAPHY: W. Neumann, Weber. Eine Biographie (Kassel, 1855); Max M. von Weber (son of the composer), C. M. von Weber. Ein Lebensbild (3 vols., Leipzig, 1864-66; English adaptation by J. P. Simpson as Weber: The Life of an Artist, 2 vols., London, 1865; new abridged ed. by R. Pechel, Berlin, 1912; still the standard biography); F. W. Jähns, Weber. Eine Lebensskizze nach authentischen Quellen (Leipzig, 1873); J. Benedict, Weber (London and N.Y., 1881; 5th ed., 1899; in the series 'Great Musicians'); L. Nohl, Weber (Leipzig, 1883); A. Reissmann, Weber, sein Leben und seine Werke (Berlin, 1886); H. Gehrman, Weber (Berlin, 1899); G. Servières, Weber (Paris, 1906; new ed., 1925; in the series 'Musiciens célèbres'); H. von der Pfordten, Weber (Leipzig, 1919); A. Cœuroy, Weber (Paris, 1925; in the series 'Les Maîtres de la musique'; new ed., 1953); J. Kapp, Weber. Eine Biographie (Berlin, 1922; 5th revised ed., 1931); E. Kroll, Weber (Potsdam, 1934); L. P. and R. P. Stebbins, Enchanted Wanderer: The Life of C. M. von Weber (N. Y., 1940); W. Saunders, Weber (London and N.Y., 1940); H. J. Moser, C. M. von Weber. Leben und Werk (Leipzig, 1941; 2nd ed., 1955); P. Raabe, Wege zu Weber (Regensburg, 1942); W. Zentner, C. M. von Weber. Sein Leben und sein Schaffen (Olten, 1952); H. Schnoor, Weber: Gestalt und Schöpfung (Dresden, 1953); H. Dünnebeil, Webers Leben und Wirken in chronologischen Tafeln (Berlin, 1953); F. Grüniger, C. M. von Weber: Leben und Werk (Freiburg-im-Breisgau, 1954). See also Weber's Autobiographische Skizze, in Kaiser's ed. of Weber's Sämtliche Schriften (pp. 3-8). —B. CRITICISM, APPRECIATION: A. Jullien, Weber à Paris en 1826 (Paris, 1877); G. F. Kaiser, Beiträge zu einer Charakteristik Webers als Musikschriststeller (Leipzig, 1910); G. Servières, Le 'Freischütz' de Weber (Paris, 1913); W. Georgii, Weber als Klavierkomponist (dissertation; Halle, 1914); H. W. von Waltershausen, Der Freischütz. Ein Versuch über die musikalische Romantik (Munich, 1920); H. Altekotte, Webers Messen (Bonn, 1913); E. J. Dent, A Weber Centenary, in 'Music & Letters' (July, 1921); F. Hasselberg, Der Freischütz. Friedrich Kinds Operndichtung und ihre Quellen (Berlin, 1921); M. Degen, Die Lieder von Weber (Basel, 1923); A. Cœuroy, Le Problème d'Euryanthe, in 'Le Correspondent' (Oct. 25, 1923); A. Cœuroy, Weber as Writer, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1925); E. Reiter, Webers künstlerische Persönlichkeit aus seinen Schriften (Leipzig, 1926); H. Abert, Weber und sein 'Freischütz', in 'Jahrbuch der Musikbibliothek Peters' (1927; reprinted in Abert's Gesammelte Schriften, Halle, 1929); J. G. Prod'homme, The Works of Weber in France, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1928); A. Sandt, Webers Opern in ihrer Instrumentation (Frankfurt, 1932); G. Kinsky, Was Mendelssohn Indebted to Weber? in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1933); G. Abraham, Weber as Novelist and Critic (ib., Jan., 1934); P. Listl, C. M. von Weber als Ouvertürenkomponist (dissertation; Würzburg, 1936); A. Einstein, C. M. Weber, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1937); H. Schnoor, W. auf dem Welttheater; ein Freischütz buch (Dresden, 1942); P. R. Kirby, Weber's Operas in London 1824 to 1826, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1946). Wagner's articles on Weber are found in vol. VII of his complete works (English transl., London, 1898); also in C. F. Glasenapp's Wagner-Encyklopädie, II, pp. 259-80 (Leipzig, 1891). —C. CORRESPONDENCE: L. Nohl, Musiker-Briefe (Leipzig, 1867; 2nd ed., 1873; English transl. by Lady Wallace as Letters of Distinguished Musicians, London, 1867); L. Nohl, Mosaik für musikalisch-gebildete (Leipzig, 1882); A. von Weber (grandson of the composer), Reise-Briefe von Weber an seine Gattin Caroline (Leipzig, 1886); E. Rudorff, Briefe von Weber an Heinrich Lichtenstein (Brunswick, 1900); G. Kaiser, Webers Briefe an den Grafen Karl von Brühl (Leipzig, 1911); L. Hirschberg, 77 bisher ungedruckte Briefe Webers (Hildburghausen, 1926); G. Kinsky, Ungedruckte Briefe Webers, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musik' (1926). —D. WEBER AND HIS CONTEMPORARIES: J. C. Lobe, Gespräche mit Weber, in his Fliegende Blätter für Musik (Leipzig, 1853; reprinted in his Consonanzen und Dissonanzen, 1869); M. Runze, Loewe und Weber, in his Loewe Redivivus (Berlin, 1888); II. A. Krüger, Pseudoromantik, Friedrich Kind und der Dresdener Liederkreis (Leipzig, 1904); II. B. and C. O. E. Cox, Leaves from the Journal of Sir G. Smart (London, 1907); K. Huschke, Webers Beziehungen zu Ludwig van Beethoven und Franz Schubert, in 'Deutsche Revue' (May-June, 1919); E. Kroll, E. T. A. Hoffmann und Weber, in the 'Neue Musik-Zeitung' (1921); K. Huschke, Spohr und Weber, in 'Allgemeine Musik-Zeitung' (1934); E. Kroll, Beethoven und Weber, in 'Neues Beethoven-Jahrbuch' (Augsburg, 1935); O. Kroll, Weber und Bärmann, in the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik' (1936). —E. MISCELLANEOUS: R. Haas, Ein Notizen-Buch C. M. von Webers aus Prag, in 'Der Merker' (1916); A. Maccklenburg, Der Fall Spontini-Weber, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1923-24); O. Hellinghaus, Weber. Seine Persönlichkeit in seinen Briefen und Tagebüchern und in Aufzeichnungen seiner Zeitgenossen (Freiburg-im-Breisgau, 1924); E. Kroll, Weber. Sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1936); F. Rapp, Ein unbekanntes Bildnis Webers (Stuttgart, 1937); G. Hauswald, ed., Weber: Eine Gedenkschrift (Dresden, 1951).

Weber, Franz, German organist and conductor; b. Cologne, Aug. 26, 1805; d. there Sept. 18, 1876. He studied with Bernhard Klein in Berlin; in 1838 was appointed organist of the Cologne Cathedral. He wrote a Kriegsgesang der Rheinpreussen for male chorus and orch.; publ. several song books ('Kommersbuch,' 'Turner-Liederbuch,' 'Des deutschen Soldaten Liederbuch,' etc.).

Weber, Friedrich August, German physician and composer; b. Heilbronn, Jan. 24, 1753; d. there, Jan. 21, 1806. He wrote numerous oratorios and cantatas with orch.; also symphonies, chamber music, piano sonatas for 4 hands; contributed articles on music to various journals.

Weber, Friedrich Dionys, Bohemian composer and writer on music; b. Velichov, Oct. 9, 1766; d. Prague, Dec. 25, 1842. He studied with Abbé Vogler; in 1811 was one of the founders of the Prague Cons., and its first director; among his pupils were Moscheles and Kalliwoda. He wrote several operas, 18 cantatas, a number of military marches, a sextet for 6 trombones, a sextet for 6 cornets, quartets for 4 cornets, variations for violin and cello, numerous popular quadrilles, Ländler, etc., for piano; publ. Das Konservatorium der Musik zu Prag (1817), Allgemeine theoretisch-praktische Vorschule der Musik (1828), Theoretisch-praktisches Lehrbuch der Harmonie und des Generalbasses (1830-41; 4 parts).

Weber, Georg Viktor, German ecclesiastic and choral conductor; b. Ober-Erlenbach, Feb. 25, 1838; d. Mainz, Sept. 24, 1911. He took holy orders in 1863; in 1866 was appointed music director and organist at the Cathedral of Mainz, where he presented fine concerts of a cappella music of the 15th and 16th centuries with his excellent choir. He was also an expert on organ building. He publ. Manuale cantus ecclesiastici juxta ritum S. Rom. ecclesiae (1878; 2nd ed., 1897); Orgelbuch zum Mainzer Diocesan-Gesangbuch (1880; 3rd ed., 1896); Über Sprachgesang (1883); Über Orgeldispositionen (1890); Die Verbesserung der 'Medicae' (1901); articles in Böckeler's 'Gregorius-Blatt' and Haberl's 'Cäcilien-Kalender'; also Masses, motets, psalms, etc.

Weber (vā'-hēhr), Gottfried, eminent German theorist and composer; b. Feinsheim, near Mannheim, March 1, 1779; d. Kreuznach, Sept. 21, 1839. He studied law at Heidelberg and Göttingen, and filled positions as judge in Mannheim (1802), Mainz (1814), and Darmstadt (1818); was appointed public prosecutor for the state of Hesse in 1832. He was an excellent amateur pianist, and also played the flute and the cello; conducted a musical society in Mannheim, and founded the Mannheim Cons.; in Mainz he was active as opera director; in 1824 began to publish the magazine 'Cäcilia' and edited it until his death. He made a thorough study of the theoretical works of Marpurg, Kirnberger, Abbé Vogler, and others, and then brought out his important treatise, Versuch einer geordneten Theorie der Tonsetzkunst (3 vols., 1817-21; 2nd ed. in 4 vols., 1824; 3rd ed. in 4 vols., 1830-32), in which he introduced the now widely accepted symbols for designating the major keys with capital letters and minor keys with small letters, Roman figures for degrees of the scale, etc. It was publ. in English in Boston (1846) and London (1851). His other theoretical publications include Über chronometrische Tempobezeichnung (1817); Beschreibung und Tonleiter der G. Weber'schen Doppelposaune (1817); Versuch einer praktischen Akustik der Blasinstrumente (in Ersch and Gruber's 'Encyclopädie'; Allgemeine Musiklehre zum Selbstunterrichte (1822; 3rd ed., 1831; in English, Boston, 1842); Über Saiteninstrumente mit Bündeln (in 'Berliner Musikzeitung,' 1825); Die Generalbasslehre zum Selbstunterrichte (1833); many essays for the 'Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung' and for his own paper, 'Caecilia.' He questioned the authenticity of Mozart's Requiem (in 'Caecilia,' 1826). As a composer, he wrote 3 Masses, a Requiem, and a Te Deum (all with orch.); variations for guitar and cello; some chamber music; part-songs.

Weber, Henry (George), American conductor; b. Berlin (of American parents), Dec. 9, 1900. He was brought to the U.S. in 1901, but returned to Europe for study in Vienna; subsequently attended the Univ. of Chicago. He conducted the Chicago Civic Opera Co. (1924-29); in 1940 became artistic director of the Chicago City Opera Co.; also conducted symph. concerts in Chicago. At various times he was in charge of music festivals in Chicago; also active on the radio.

Weber, Josef Miroslaw, Czech violinist and composer; b. Prague, Nov. 9, 1854; d. Munich, Jan. 1, 1906. He was taught by his father, and played violin in public as a child; then studied at the Prague Cons. He subsequently occupied posts as concertmaster in Sondershausen (1873-75), Darmstadt (1875), and Wiesbaden (until 1893); finally became concertmaster of the Court Opera in Munich, where he remained until his death. He wrote the operas Der selige Herr Vetter (Wiesbaden, 1894) and Die neue Mamsell (Munich, 1896); a ballet, Die Rheinnixe (Wiesbaden, 1884); a violin concerto; septet for violin, viola, cello, clarinet, bassoon, and 2 horns; a string quintet; etc.

Weber, Karl Gustav, Swiss composer; b. Münchenbuchsee, Oct. 30, 1845; d. Zürich, June 12, 1887. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. and with Tausig in Berlin; his symphonic poem Zur Iliade was presented by Liszt at the Beethoven Centennial Festival in 1870. In 1872 he settled in Zürich as church organist, teacher at the Cons., and choral conductor. He publ. a group of waltzes for piano 4 hands; piano quartet; piano trio; violin sonata; Prinz Carneval, an album of children's pieces; many choruses; choral arrangements of old German songs. For several years he was editor of the 'Schweizerische Musikzeitung.' — Cf. A. Schneider, G. Weber (Zürich, 1888); A. Steiner, Gustav Weber (Zürich, 1910).

Weber, Ludwig, German composer; b. Nuremberg, Oct. 13, 1891; d. Borken, June 30, 1947. Until 1925 he was a school teacher in Nuremberg, and was self-taught in music, except for some private instruction with Hermann Abendroth and Courvoisier. After occupying some minor posts as music teacher, he became conductor of the municipal chorus in Mülheim; associated himself with the musical youth movement, and wrote a number of choral and other works in the folksong manner.—Works: a symph. in B minor; Hymnen an die Nacht for chorus and orch.; a quintet for wind instruments; 2 string quartets; Der Natur for chorus and orch.; Heilige Namen for chorus and orch.; Fröhlich soll meinem Herze (4-16 voices unaccompanied); 3 one-act operas: Midas, Christgeburt, and Totentanz. —Cf. F. W. Herzog, Ludwig Weber (Wolfenbüttel, 1929); K. Ziebler, Ludwig Weber (1939).

Weber, Wilhelm, German choral conductor and composer; b. Bruchsal, Nov. 16, 1859; d. Augsburg, Oct. 14, 1918. After studying at the Stuttgart Cons. he went to Augsburg, where he taught at the Musikschule from 1884, becoming its director in 1905. From 1892 he was conductor of the 'Oratorienverein,' notable for its numerous German premières of works by foreign composers; he also conducted at various festivals in Germany. He publ. 2 books of Landsknechtslieder and other songs; choruses; piano pieces. Author of Beethovens Missa solemnis (1897; 2nd ed., 1903) and Händels Oratorien, übersetzt und bearbeitet von F. Chrystander (3 vols.; 1898; 1900; 1902).

Webert, Anton von, remarkable Austrian composer; b. Vienna, Dec. 3, 1883; d. Mittersill, Sept. 15, 1945 (accidentally killed by an American military policeman). He studied musicology with Guido Adler at the Univ. of Vienna (Dr. phil., 1906, with a dissertation on Isaac's Choralis Constantinus); composition with Schoenberg, whose ardent disciple he became. From 1908 till 1914 he conducted theater orchestras in Vienna, in Prague, and in Germany. After the end of World War I he settled in Mödling, near Vienna, where he taught composition; was closely associated with the 'Society for Private Musical Performances' organized in Vienna by Schoenberg with the intention of promoting modern music without being exposed to reactionary opposition (music critics were not admitted to these performances); Webern supervised the programs during its existence (1918-21). He subsequently conducted the orch. of the workers' concerts and the workers' chorus in Vienna (1922-24); also appeared as guest conductor with the BBC orch. in London (1929) and in Barcelona (1932). Throughout World War II he remained in Vienna; after his son was killed in an air bombardment of a train in Feb. 1945, Webern and his wife fled from Vienna, and went to live with their married daughter in Mittersill, near Salzburg. He was mortally wounded by a member of the U. S. military police when he stepped out of the house in the evening, unaware of the curfew established by the U.S. occupation troops. Webern left relatively few works, and most of them are of short duration (the 4th of his Five Pieces for Orch., op. 10, scored for clarinet, trumpet, trombone, mandolin, celesta, harp, drum, violin, and viola, takes only 19 seconds to play); but in his music he achieves the utmost subtilization of expressive means. He adopted the 12-tone method of composition almost immediately after its definitive formulation by Schoenberg (1924), and extended the principle of non-repetition of notes to tone colors, so that in some of his works (e.g., symph., op. 21) no instrument is allowed to play 2 successive thematic notes. Dynamic marks are also greatly diversified. Harmonic concepts are all but obliterated; counterpoint (always dissonant) is deprived of imitation or canon; single motifs are extremely brief, and stand out as individual particles or lyric ejaculations. The impact of these works on the general public and on the critics was usually disconcerting, and upon occasion led to violent demonstrations; however, the extraordinary skill and novelty of technique, as well as inherent poetic quality, made this music endure beyond the fashions of the times; performances of Webern's works multiplied after his death, and began to influence increasingly larger groups of modern musicians; Stravinsky acknowledged the use of Webern's methods in his latest works; jazz composers have professed to follow Webern's ideas of tone color; analytical treatises have been publ. in several languages. —Works: for orch.: Passacaglia, op. 1 (1908); 6 Orchestral Pieces, op. 6 (Vienna, March 31, 1913); 5 Orchestral Pieces, op. 10 (1913; Zürich Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 23, 1926); symph. for chamber orch., op. 21 (1928; N.Y., League of Composers, Dec. 18, 1929); Variations, op. 30 (1940); choral music: Entflieht auf leichten Kähnen, op. 2, for unaccompanied chorus (1908); 2 songs, to words by Goethe, op. 19, for chorus, celesta, guitar, violin, clarinet, and bass clarinet (1926); Das Augenlicht for chorus and orch., op. 26 (1935; London Festival, June 17, 1938); 2 cantatas, op. 29 and op. 31 (1940 and 1943); chamber music: 5 movements for string quartet, op. 5 (1909); 6 Bagatelles for string quartet, op. 9 (1913); trio for violin, viola, and cello, op. 20 (1927); quartet for violin, clarinet, saxophone, and piano, op. 22 (1930); concerto for 9 instruments, op. 24 (Prague Festival, Sept. 4, 1935); string quartet, op. 28 (1938); 4 Pieces for violin and piano, op. 7 (1910); 3 Little Pieces for cello and piano, op. 11 (1914); variations for piano solo, op. 27 (1926); song cycles with instrumental accompaniment, op. 8, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18; songs with piano accompaniment, op. 3, 4, 12, 23, 25; arrangements for orch. of Schubert's Deutsche Tänze, of Bach's Ricercare a 6 from Das musikalische Opfer; publ. Der Weg zur Komposition mit 12 Tönen (Vienna, 1932); Der Weg zur neuen Musik (Vienna, 1933); edited a vol. of compositions from Isaac's Choralis Constantinus in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 32). —Bibliography: E. Stein, Anton von Webern, in 'Chesterian' (Oct., 1923); W. Reich, Anton von Webern, in 'Die Musik' (1930); T. Wiesengrund-Adorno, Berg and Webern — Schönberg's Heirs, in 'Modern Music' (1931); a special issue of the Vienna magazine '23' (1934); H. Searle, Webern's Last Works, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (Dec., 1946); R. Leibowitz, Schoenberg et son école (Paris, 1947; English transl., N.Y., 1949); L. Rognoni, Espressionismo e dodecafonia (Turin, 1954); R. Craft, Anton Webern, in 'The Score' (Sept., 1955); R. Vlad, Storia della dodecafonia (Milan, 1958). See also the compendium, Anton Webern, Dokumente, Bekenntnisse, Erkenntnisse, Analysen (Vienna, 1955).

WEBERN

Webster, Beveridge, American pianist; b. Pittsburgh, May 30, 1908. He studied music with his father, who was director of the Pittsburgh Cons. of Music; at the age of 13, he was sent to Paris to study with Isidor Philipp at the Cons.; graduated in 1926, winning the Grand Prix for piano playing. He gave concerts in Europe; returned to the U.S. in 1934, and developed a successful concert career, appearing with major symph. orchestras; also continued to give concerts in Europe.

Wecker, Georg Kaspar, German organist and composer; b. Nuremberg, April 2, 1632; d. there, April 20, 1695. He studied organ with Erasmus Kindermann, and soon obtained a position as church organist in Nuremberg; his last appointment was at the Sebaldkirche there (1686-95). He also was a respected teacher; Johann Krieger and Pachelbel were among his pupils. Several of his sacred songs were publ. in hymn books in Nuremberg; 3 sacred choral works are reproduced in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vol. VI, 1).

Weckerlin, Jean-Baptiste-Théodore, eminent French music scholar and composer; b. Gebweiler, Alsace, Nov. 29, 1821; d. there, May 20, 1910. He was trained for his father's business of cotton-dyeing; but went over to music in 1844, studying under Ponchard (singing) and Halévy (composition) at the Paris Cons., producing a heroic symphony, Roland, for soli, chorus, and orch., in 1847; on leaving the Cons. in 1849, he gave music lessons, took part with Seghers in the direction of the Société Sainte-Cécile, which brought out some of his works; and achieved success in 1853 with a 1-act comic opera, L'Organiste dans l'embaras (100 performances at the Théâtre-Lyrique). This was followed by 2 comic operas in Alsatian dialect, Die drifach Hochzitt im Bäsethal (Colmar, 1863) and D'r verhäxt' Herbst (Colmar, 1879), and the 1-act opera Après Fontenoy (Théâtre-Lyrique, 1877). Meantime he had become an assistant librarian at the Paris Cons. (1869); in 1876 succeeded Félicien David as librarian, and in 1885 publ. a bibliographical catalogue; was also chosen librarian of the Société des Compositeurs, for whose bulletins he wrote important articles. He retired in 1909. He won distinction as a composer of grand choral works; also wrote choruses a cappella, songs, and a grand Symphonie de la forêt, for orch.; but his greatest achievement was the compilation of old French songs. His 'Échos du temps passé' (1853-55) and 'Souvenirs du temps passé' (1864) are collections of chansons, Noël's, madrigals, etc., from the 12th-18th centuries; the 'Musicianna' (3 vols.; 1877, 1890, 1899) is a collection from rare and curious works on music, with anecdotes, etc.; other collections are 'Les Échos d'Angleterre' (1877; folksongs with piano); 'Chansons et rondes populaires' (children's songs with piano); 'Les Poètes français mis en musique' (1868); 'Chansons populaires des provinces de la France'; L'ancienne chanson populaire en France (1886); 'Chansons populaires du Pays de France' (2 vols.; 1903). A catalogue of his private library was publ. at Leipzig in 1910.

Weckmann (vek'-mahn), Matthias, German organist and composer; b. Niederdorla, near Mühlhausen, Thuringia, 1619; d. Hamburg, Feb. 24, 1674. He was the son of a schoolmaster; was a chorister in the Dresden court chapel, where he was a pupil of Heinrich Schütz. In 1637 he was sent to Hamburg for further study with Reinken, Jakob Praetorius, and H. Scheidemann, by whom he was trained in the organ method of Sweelinck. In 1641 he became organist for the crown prince in Dresden, and in 1642 was appointed to a similar post in Copenhagen; he returned in 1647 to Dresden, where he became a friend of J. J. Froberger; in 1655 he went to Hamburg as organist at the Jacobikirche, and there founded, with Christoph Bernhard, the 'Collegium musicum,' a concert-society for the performance of new works (it was discontinued after Weckmann's death). Weckmann's solo cantatas and choral works with instrumental accompaniment were publ. by Max Seiffert in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vol. 6); instrumental pieces and songs in the 'Erbe deutscher Musik' (series 2, vol. 4); 2 numbers are reproduced in A. Schering's 'Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen' (Nos. 212 and 213); etc. — Cf. M. Seiffert, Matthias Weckmann und das Collegium Musicum in Hamburg, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (II, 1900); G. Ilgner, Matthias Weckmann. Sein Leben und seine Werke (Wolfenbüttel, 1939).

Wedge, George (Anson), American organist and educator; b. Danbury, Conn., Jan. 15, 1890. He studied organ, piano, and composition at the Institute of Musical Art in N.Y.; subsequently occupied various teaching positions: at N.Y. Univ. (1920-27); at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia (1924-26); dean of the Institute of Musical Art and of the Juilliard School of Music (1938-46); director of the Juilliard Summer School (1932-47). He publ. Ear-training and Sight-singing (1921); Advanced Ear-training and Sight-singing (1922); Keyboard Harmony (1924); Rhythm in Music (1927); Applied Harmony, in 2 vols. (1930-31); The Gist of Music (1936).

Weede, Robert, American baritone; b. Baltimore, Feb. 22, 1903. He studied singing with George Castelle in Baltimore; in 1927 won the competition of the National Federation of Music Clubs; received a scholarship of the Caruso Memorial Foundation, and went to Italy, where he studied with Oscar Anselmi in Milan. Returning to America, he was engaged as a radio singer. He was a member of the Metropolitan Opera in 1937-42 and 1944-45. In 1956 he obtained great success in the leading role of Frank Loesser's musical comedy The Most Happy Fella.

Weelkes, Thomas, English composer; b. c. 1575; d. London, Nov. 30, 1623. In 1597 he publ. a book of madrigals for 3-6 voices; in 1598, he publ. 'Balletts and Madrigals' for 5 voices, dedicated to Edward Darcy, Groom of the Privy Chamber; in 1600, he brought out two more books, containing madrigals for 5 and 6 voices; served as organist at the College of Winchester (1600-02). He was a friend of Morley, to whose collection 'The Triumphes of Oriana' (1601-03) he contributed a fine madrigal for 6 voices, As Vesta was from Latmos Hill Descending. In 1602 he was granted the degree of B. Mus. at the New College, Oxford, and was appointed organist of Chichester Cathedral. A subsequent publication was 'Ayres; or, Phantasticke Spirits for 3 voices' (1608; reprinted by Arkwright in the 'Old English Edition'). Weelkes was one of the greatest English madrigalists, possessing remarkable power in melodic characterization of the text; he occasionally used chromatic progressions in harmony that were well in advance of his time. He wrote a considerable amount of church music (services and anthems); also instrumental works (2 pavanes and other pieces, for 5 viols). His madrigals and other vocal works are reprinted in 'The English Madrigal School,' ed. by E. H. Fellowes (vols. 9-13); anthems in the series 'Tudor Church Music.' —Cf. E. H. Fellowes, The English Madrigal Composers (London, 1921; 2nd ed., 1948); D. M. Arnold, Thomas Weelkes and the Madrigal, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1950).

Weerbecke (Weerbeke, Werbecke), Gaspar van, Flemish composer; b. Audenarde, Flanders, c. 1445. Pupil of Ockeghem; in 1472, organizer of the ducal court chapel at Milan, his singers including Josquin des Prez; from 1481 to 1489, singer in the papal chapel at Rome, a post he resumed from 1500 to 1509 after sojourns in Milan and Flanders; there is no trace of him after 1514. Masses, motets, and Lamentations by Weerbecke were publ. by Petrucci (1505-09). —Cf. G. Cesari, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1922); G. Croll, Gaspar van Weerbeke, in 'Musica Disciplina' (vol. 6, 1952; with a list of works). See also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N.Y., 1954, pp. 218-19).

Wegeler (väh'-gēh-lēhr), Franz Gerhard, German physician and music amateur; b. Bonn, Aug. 22, 1765; d. Coblenz, May 7, 1848. He was a practicing physician in Bonn and Coblenz, and knew Beethoven as a youth. With Ries, he publ. Biographische Notizen über Ludwig van Beethoven (1838; supplement, 1845; reprinted by A. Kalischer, 1906). —Cf. S. Ley, ed., Beethoven als Freund der Familie Wegeler -v. Breuning (Bonn, 1927).

Wegelius (vā-gā'-lē-ōös), Martin, eminent Finnish composer and pedagogue; b. Helsinki, Nov. 10, 1846; d. there, March 22, 1906. He studied philosophy, taking his master's degree in 1869; studied music with Rudolph Bibl in Vienna (1870-71), and with Richter and Paul in Leipzig (1871-73); he went to Leipzig for further study in 1877-78. Returning to Finland, he became operatic coach at the Helsinki National Theater. In 1882 he was appointed director of the newly-founded Helsinki Cons., holding this post until his death. Under his guidance, the institution became one of the finest schools in Europe, with excellent teachers. Sibelius was one of the pupils of Wegelius; others were Järnefelt, Melartin, and Palmgren. Wegelius emphasized the cultivation of national Finnish music, and thus was mainly responsible for the magnificent development of Finland as a musical nation. —Works: overture Daniel Hjort (1872); Divertissement à la hongroise (1880); Rondo quasi fantasia for piano and orch. (1872); Mignon, 6 songs with orch., after Goethe's Westöstlicher Diwan (1875); a Christmas cantata (1877), a festival cantata, The 6th of May (1878); a violin sonata; piano pieces; songs. He publ. (in Swedish) a number of manuals and books on music history: Lärobok i allmän musik- lära och analys (2 vols., 1888-89); Hufvuddragen af den västerländska musikens historia (3 vols., 1891-93); Kurs i tonträffning (3 vols., 1893-95); Kurs i homofon sats (2 vols., 1897-1905); etc.—Cf. K. T. Flodin, Martin Wegelius (in Swedish, Stockholm, 1916; in Finnish, Helsinki, 1922); Martin Wegelius (letters; 2 vols.; Helsinki, 1918-19); Arvi Karvonen, Martin Wegelius, in Suomen Säveltäjiä, ed. by Sulho Ranta (Helsinki, 1945; pp. 169-83).

Wehle, Gerhard Fürchtegott, German musicologist; b. Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, Oct. 11, 1884. He studied in Germany, and settled in Berlin in 1907. He publ. Die Kunst der Improvisation, in 3 vols. (1925, 1926, 1932; 5th ed. of vol. 3, on organ improvisation, 1953); manuals on theory; composed much vocal music.

Wehle (vā'-lē), Karl, Bohemian pianist; b. Prague, March 17, 1825; d. Paris, June 3, 1883. Trained for a mercantile career, he abandoned it for music; studied piano with Moscheles at Leipzig and Kullak in Berlin; made extended tours to Asia, Africa, America, and Australia, but resided chiefly in Paris. He publ. a number of brilliant compositions for piano, among them a Sérénade napolitaine, an Allegro à la hongroise, 3 Tarentelles, 2 Impromptus, Berceuse javanaise, Marche cosaque, Fête bohémienne, Un Songe à Vaucluse, etc.

Wehrli (vēhr'-lē), Werner, Swiss composer; b. Aarau, Jan. 8, 1892; d. Lucerne, June 27, 1944. He studied at the Zürich Cons. with Hegar and in Frankfurt with Knorr; wrote a number of 'festival operas' in a Romantic vein; cantatas and chamber music. His oratorio Wallfahrt (1939) enjoyed a modicum of success. His opera Das heisse Eisen, after Hans Sachs, was produced in Bern on Dec. 11, 1918.—G. H. Leuenberger, Werner Wehrli, in 'Schweizerische Musikzeitung' (May, 1952).

Weidig (vī'-dig), Adolf, American music teacher and composer; b. Hamburg, Nov. 28, 1867; d. Hinsdale, Ill., Sept. 23, 1931. He studied at the Hamburg Cons. with Bargheer (violin) and later with Hugo Riemann (theory); then in Munich with Rheinberger (composition). In 1892 he settled in Chicago; played the violin in the Chicago Symphony Orch. (1892-96); in 1898 joined the faculty of the American Cons. of Music; conducted his own works in Chicago, Minneapolis, and also in Germany. He was greatly esteemed as a teacher; publ. Har- monic Material and its Uses (1923); composed 2 symphonies; a symph. poem, Semiramis; Drei Episoden for orch.; a string quintet; 3 string quartets; a piano trio; songs.—See 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Weidt (vidt), Lucy, German soprano; b. Troppau, Silesia, 1880; d. Vienna, July 28, 1940. She studied piano and singing with her father, and then with Rosa Papier in Vienna, where she made her début as Elisabeth in 1904. She sang in Germany, appearing at the Wagner festival in 1908-10. On Nov. 18, 1910 she made her first American appearance as Brünnhilde in Die Walküre, at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y.; after a season there, she sang in Italy (mostly in Wagnerian parts). In 1909 she married Baron Joseph von Urményi. Her voice was of unusual attractiveness and power, enabling her to perform Wagnerian parts with distinction.

Weigel, Eugene, American composer; b. Cleveland, Oct. 11, 1910. He was instructed in early years by his father, an organist; then studied violin at the Cleveland Institute of Music with Maurice Hewitt; composition with Arthur Shepherd at Western Reserve Univ. From 1929 to 1941 he was organist and choirmaster at a Franciscan church in Cleveland; in 1943 took a course of study with Hindemith at Yale; also studied viola with Hugo Kortschak; became 1st violist of the New Haven Symph. Orch., and director of music for Thomas More Chapel at Yale; B.M., Yale, 1946; in 1947 was appointed artist in residence at the Univ. of Illinois, as violist with the Walden String Quartet; participated in many performances by this quartet; was chairman of the theory dept. at the Univ. of Illinois Music School (1950-56); in 1956 appointed composer in residence and prof. at Montana State Univ.; held a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1954-55. Works: operas: The Lion Makers, a Hindu fable (1953), The Mountain Child, a ballad opera in one act (Montana State Univ., Missoula, July 29, 1958); for orch.: Sonata for Strings (1948), Prairie Symphony (1953); Requiem Mass for chorus and orch. (Univ. of Illinois, Urbana, March 27, 1956); quintet for clarinet and strings (1946); Short, Slow, and Fast, for woodwind quintet (1949); 3 Pieces for 4 Trombones (1953); piano pieces and songs.

Weigl (vīgl), Bruno, writer on music and composer; b. Brno, June 16, 1881; d. there, Sept. 25, 1938. He studied with O. Kitzler and R. von Mojsisovics; publ. Die Geschichte des Walzers, nebst einem Anhang über die moderne Operette (1910), Handbuch der Violoncell-Literatur (1911; 3rd ed., 1929), Harmonielehre (2 vols.; 1925), and Handbuch der Orgelliteratur (1931); composed a comic opera, Mandragola (Brno, 1912); Serenade for orch.; Fasching, song cycle for baritone and orch.; many organ pieces.

Weigl (vigl), Joseph, Austrian composer; b. Eisenstadt, March 28, 1766; d. Vienna, Feb. 3, 1846. His father, Joseph Franz Weigl (1740-1820), was a cellist in the service of Prince Esterházy with Haydn; his mother was a singer; he was a godson of Haydn. Brought up in a musical environment, he wrote an operetta, Die unnütze Vorsicht, at the age of 16 for a puppet show; Salieri accepted him as a pupil; he also studied with Albrechtsberger. He was assistant conductor to Salieri at the Vienna Court Theater from 1790 till 1823. Altogether, Weigl wrote 14 operas in Italian and 19 in German. The most successful were La Principessa d'Amalfi (Vienna, Jan. 12, 1794; Haydn described it as a masterpiece in a letter to Weigl after the performance) and Die Schweizerfamilie (Vienna, March 14, 1809; produced in Paris, Feb. 6, 1827 as Emmeline, ou la famille suisse; also staged in opera houses all over Europe until about 1900, when it disappeared from the repertory). The following operas by Weigl were produced in Vienna with varying success: Il Pazzo per forza (Nov. 14, 1788), La Caffettiera bizzarra (Sept. 15, 1790), L'Amor marinaro (Oct. 15, 1797); Das Dorf im Gebürge (April 17, 1798), Die Uniform (Feb. 15, 1805), Vestas Feuer (Aug. 10, 1805), Kaiser Hadrian (May 21, 1807), Adrian von Ostade (July 3, 1807), Das Waisenhaus (Oct. 4, 1808), Nachtigall und Rabe (April 20, 1818), Margarethe von Anjou (March 16, 1819), Baals Sturz (April 13, 1820), König Waldemar (May 11, 1821), Edmund und Caroline (Sept. 21, 1821), Die eiserne Pforte (Feb. 27, 1823). Three operas were produced at La Scala, Milan: Cleopatra (Dec. 19, 1807); Il Rivale di se stesso (April 18, 1808), and L'Imboscata (Nov. 8, 1815). Weigl also wrote 18 ballets; 2 oratorios; 22 cantatas; 11 Masses and other church music.—Cf. W. Neumann, Joseph Weigl (Kassel, 1855); A. Eisner-Eisenhof, Joseph Weigl, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1904); W. Bollert, Joseph Weigl und das deutsche singspiel, in his Aufsätze zur Musikgeschichte (Bottrop, 1938); for details of productions of Weigl's operas, see A. Loewenberg's Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943; 2nd ed., Geneva, 1955).

Weigl (vigl), Karl, composer; b. Vienna, Feb. 6, 1881; d. New York, Aug. 11, 1949. He studied piano with A. Door and theory with R. Fuchs at the Vienna Cons., graduating in 1902; later studied composition with Zemlinsky, and musicology with Guido Adler at the Vienna Univ. (Ph. D., 1903). Was a coach at the Vienna Opera (1904-06); in 1910 won the Beethoven Prize of the 'Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde' for a string quartet; and (1924) the prize of the City of Vienna for the symphonic cantata World Festival. In 1938 he settled in New York as a teacher. Weigl was a prolific composer; wrote 6 symphonies; several overtures; an orch. suite, Tänze aus dem alten Wien (1939; renamed City That Was); 8 string quartets, etc. His 1st symphony (1908) was published and performed in Zürich, 1910; most of his other works remain in manuscript.

Weigl (vigl), Thaddäus, Austrian composer and publisher; brother of Joseph Weigl; b. Vienna, 1776; d. there, Feb. 10, 1844. He wrote the Singspiele, Die Marionettenbude (Vienna, March 17, 1795) and Idoli (Vienna, March 12, 1796); and 13 ballets. In 1801 he established in Vienna a publishing firm, which issued several works by Schubert. He retired in 1826.

Weil (vil), Hermann, German baritone; b. Karlsruhe, May 29, 1877; d. (drowned in Blue Mountain Lake, N. Y.), July 6, 1949. He studied at the Cons. of Karlsruhe and in Frankfurt (with Adolf Dippel); made his début as Wolfram at Freiburg, Baden (Sept. 6, 1901); then appeared in Stuttgart and other German cities; also sang in Vienna, Brussels, Amsterdam, Milan, London, etc.; participated in the Bayreuth festivals every summer from 1909 till 1912. On Nov. 17, 1911 he made his first American appearance as Kurvenal in Tristan und Isolde, at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., under Toscanini. He remained with the Metropolitan until 1917, when he returned to Germany. He came back to the U. S. in 1938. The unusual compass (3 full octaves) of his voice enabled him to undertake bass as well as baritone parts; he had about 100 roles in his repertory; excelled in Wagnerian parts, and was also successful as a recital singer.

Weill (vil), Kurt, outstanding composer of modern operas; b. Dessau, March 2, 1900; d. New York, April 3, 1950. He was a pupil of Albert Bing in Dessau; in 1918 studied for one semester at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik under Humperdinck and Krasselt. He was then engaged as opera coach in Dessau, and was also theater conductor at Lüdenscheld. In 1921 he moved to Berlin, and became a student of Busoni. Under the impact of new ideas in the theater, calling for bold portrayal of contemporary themes, and cultivating social satire, he began writing short operas in a modernistic manner: Der Protagonist (Dresden, March 27, 1926) and Royal Palace (Berlin, March 2, 1927). His next work was a 'Singspiel,' Aufstieg und Fall der Stadt Mahagonny, a satire on life in America, to a libretto by Bert Brecht. Its première was given at the Baden-Baden Festival on July 17, 1927; Weill subsequently remodeled the play, and it was presented in an extended version at Leipzig (March 9, 1930). He then wrote an opera buffa Der Zar lässt sich photographieren (Leipzig, Feb. 18, 1928). His first striking success came with a modernistic version of The Beggar's Opera, to a pungent libretto by Bert Brecht; it was staged under the title Die Dreigroschenoper in Berlin, on Aug. 31, 1928, and soon became the rage all over Germany; also produced in translations in Poland, Holland, Denmark, Hungary, Russia, France, and England; given in N. Y. on April 13, 1933, as The Threepenny Opera; Marc Blitzstein made a new libretto, versified in a modern American style, and in this form the work was presented for the first time at the Brandeis Univ. Festival, Waltham, Mass., on June 14, 1952. Other stage works by Weill produced in Germany were a school opera Der Jasager (1930), Die Bürgschaft (Berlin, March 10, 1932), and Der Silbersee (1933). After the establishment of the Nazi government, Weill and his wife, the actress and singer Lotte Lenya, who appeared in many of his musical plays, were driven out of Germany; he went to Paris, where he wrote an opera, Marie galante (1933), and to London, where he produced a satirical musical play, A Kingdom for a Cow (1935). In 1935 he settled in America, remaining there until his death. Quickly absorbing the modes and fashions of American popular music, he succeeded, with amazing fidelity, in creating American-flavored musical plays; this stylistic transition was facilitated by the fact that in his European productions he had already injected elements of American popular songs and jazz rhythms. His highly developed assimilative faculty enabled him to combine this Americanized idiom with the advanced techniques of modern music (atonality, polytonality, polyrhythms), and present the product in a pleasing and yet sophisticated and challenging manner. For the American theater he wrote the scores for the operas Street Scene (by Elmer Rice; N. Y., Jan. 9, 1947) and Lost in the Stars (by Maxwell Anderson; N. Y., Oct. 30, 1949); the musical comedies Knickerbocker Holiday (book and lyrics by Maxwell Anderson; Hartford, Conn., Sept. 26, 1938; contains the popular September Song); Lady in the Dark (by Moss Hart), and One Touch of Venus (by S. J. Perelman and Ogden Nash); music for The Firebrand of Florence (by E. J. Mayer and Ira Gershwin) and A Flag Is Born (by Ben Hecht); also for several films. He achieved a signal success with the production of his 'folk opera' Down in the Valley (Indiana Univ., Bloomington, July 15, 1948), based on Kentucky mountain songs; many performances were given all over the U. S. Other works include the ballet Die sieben Todsünden (1933); the radio cantata Lindberghflug (in collaboration with Bert Brecht; commemorating Lindbergh's transatlantic flight, 1927; Berlin, Dec. 5, 1929); The Ballad of Magna Carta, modern historical drama with text by Maxwell Anderson (Columbia network broadcast, Feb. 4, 1940); Der neue Orpheus, cantata; Vom Tod im Walde, ballade for bass voice and 10 wind instruments; Recordare for chorus a cappella; Rilke-Lieder, for voice with orch. For orch.: Fantasie, Passacaglia und Hymnus (1923) and Quodlibet (1924); Frauentanz for soprano, viola, flute, clarinet, horn, and bassoon (Salzburg Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Aug. 6, 1924); concerto for violin and woodwind instruments (Zürich Festival, June 23, 1926); a string quartet and other chamber music; piano pieces; songs. A Berliner Symphonie, written in 1921 and regarded as lost, was rediscovered in 1958. —Cf. Paul Bekker, Briefe an zeitgenössische Musiker (1932); V. Thomson, Most Melodious Tears, in 'Modern Music' (Nov.-Dec., 1933); H. W. Heinsheimer, Kurt Weill, in 'Tomorrow' (March, 1948); H. Strobel, Erinnerung an Kurt Weill, in 'Melos' (May, 1950); D. Drew, Topicality and the Universal: The Strange Case of Weill's 'Die Bürgschaft', in 'Music & Letters' (July, 1958). For details on performances of Weill's operas see A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943; 2nd ed., Geneva, 1955).

Weinberg, Jacob, pianist and composer; b. Odessa, July 5, 1879; d. New York, Nov. 2, 1956. He studied at the Moscow Cons. with Igumnov (piano), S. Taneyev and Ippolitov-Ivanov (composition); was a private pupil of Leschetizky in Vienna (1910-11); taught piano at the Odessa Cons. (1915-21); then went to Palestine, where he stayed for 5 years (1921-26). In 1926 he came to the U. S.; taught piano at Hunter College and the N. Y. College of Music. He composed an opera on a modern Hebrew subject, Hechalutz (The Pioneers); fragments were performed in Jerusalem, in a Hebrew transl., on April 4, 1925; the complete opera was performed in N. Y. on Nov. 25, 1934, under the title The Pioneers of Israel, in an English transl.; he also wrote the oratorios Isaiah (1948) and The Life of Moses (1952); The Gettysburg Address, ode for chorus and orch. (N. Y., 1936); Sabbath Liturgy for baritone, chorus, and organ; a piano concerto; a piano trio; a string quartet; a violin sonata; contributed essays on Russian music to the 'Mus. Quarterly' and other periodicals.

Weinberger (vin'-bër-gër), Jaromir, notable Czech composer; b. Prague, Jan. 8, 1896. He studied with Křička and Hofmeister at the Prague Cons., then briefly with Max Reger in Berlin. In 1922 he visited the U. S., and taught for a semester at the Cons. of Ithaca, N. Y. Returning to Europe, he was active as conductor and teacher in Bratislava, Prague, Vienna, and also in Moscow; lived mostly in Prague until 1937, when he went to London; in 1939 he settled permanently in the U. S., living in St. Petersburg, Fla. Weinberger achieved sudden fame with the production of his opera in a popular Bohemian style, Švanda dudák (Schwanda, the Bagpiper), at the Czech Opera in Prague, on April 27, 1927. Its success was immediate, and performances followed all over Europe in several languages; it was produced in German (as Schwanda der Dudelsackpfeifer) at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., on Nov. 7, 1931; the Polka and Fugue from this opera has become a popular number in the orchestral repertory. His other operas include Die geliebte Stimme (Munich, Feb. 28, 1931); Lidé z Pukerlatu (The Outcasts of Poker Flat), after Bret Harte; Brno, Nov. 19, 1932; A Bed of Roses, light opera (Prague, 1934); and Wallenstein, lyric tragedy after Schiller (Vienna, Nov. 18, 1937). He wrote for orch. Marionette Overture (1913), 6 Bohemian songs and dances (1929), Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree, variations and fugue (N. Y., Oct. 12, 1939); Song of the High Seas (N. Y., Nov. 9, 1940); Lincoln Symphony (Cincinnati, Oct. 17, 1941); Czech Rhapsody (Washington, D. C., Nov. 5, 1941); A Bird's Opera (Detroit, Nov. 13, 1941); Préludes religieuses et profanes (1953); Ecclesiastes, for soprano, baritone, mixed chorus, and organ (1945); other choral works; violin pieces; piano pieces; a song cycle of Jewish melodies; etc.

Weiner, Lazar, composer and conductor; b. Cherkassy, near Kiev, Oct. 27, 1897. He studied at the Kiev Cons.; at the age of 17, came to the U. S., where he took courses in composition in N. Y., with Frederick Jacobi, R. R. Bennett, and Joseph Schillinger; conducted various choral societies in N. Y. and Brooklyn. His works include the cantatas Legend of Toil (1933), Man in the World (1939), Fight for Freedom (1943), To Thee, America (1944); several Jewish ballets for the N. Y. stage; chamber music. His son, Yehudi Weiner (b. N. Y., June 1, 1929), a student of Richard Donovan at Yale, is a gifted composer; in 1952 he went to Rome on a stipend.

Weiner (vī'-ner), Leo, outstanding Hungarian composer; b. Budapest, April 16, 1885. He was a pupil of Hans Koessler at the Budapest Academy of Music, winning several prizes for excellence; in 1906 he won the 'Franz-Josef Jubiläumspreis,' which enabled him to study further in Germany and in Paris. Returning to Budapest, he became prof. at the Academy (1908); pensioned in 1949. In his works he adopted a characteristic Hungarian style, within the framework of Romanticism, stemming from Brahms. —Works: for orch.: Scherzo (1905); Serenade (Budapest, Oct. 22, 1906; his most successful work); Carnival, a humoresque (1907); Katonásdi (Soldatenspiel), 1924; Hungarian Folk Dances (1933); 3 divertimentos on old Hungarian tunes, for string orch. (1933, 1939, 1950); Pastorale, phantasie et fugue, for strings (1941); concertino for piano and orch.; chamber music: 3 string quartets (1908, 1922, 1949), string trio (1909), Ballade for clarinet and piano (1912), Romanze for cello and piano (1925), 2 violin sonatas; a number of piano pieces: Változatok, Caprice, Miniatures; 6 Hungarian peasant dances; Lakodalmas (wedding dance); children's pieces (1948); incidental music for Vörösmarty's play Csongor and Tünde (1913). He publ. didactic works on musical form (1911), on harmony (1917), and on analytical harmony (1944); arranged for orch. a number of Bach's works, of which the Toccata and Fugue in C major is widely performed.

Weingartner (vin'-gart-nähr), (Paul) Felix, Edler von Münzberg, famous conductor, b. Zara, Dalmatia, June 2, 1863; d. Winterthur, Switzerland, May 7, 1942. After his father's death (1867), his mother moved to Graz, where Weingartner studied under W. A. Remy. As a pupil, he began to write piano pieces, songs, dramatic scenes with orch., etc., and publ. his early piano pieces at the age of 16. For these he received, on the recommendation of Brahms, a stipend from the state, enabling him to continue his studies at the Leipzig Cons. (1881-83) under Reinecke, Jadassohn, and Paul. Having graduated as winner of the Mozart prize, he went to Liszt, who recommended his opera Sakuntala for production at Weimar (March 23, 1884). Then began his brilliant career as conductor; he held positions in Königsberg (1884), Danzig (1885-87), Hamburg (1887-89), and Mannheim (1889-91). In 1891 he was engaged as 1st conductor at the Berlin Opera, and conductor of the symph. concerts of the Royal Orch. there; he left the Berlin Opera in 1898, but retained the conductorship of the symph. concerts; from 1898 to 1903 he also conducted the Kaim Orch. in Munich; extended tours with the Berlin orch. established his fame as one of the world's foremost conductors; at the same time he won a fine reputation as an ensemble player; formed the Weingartner Trio, with himself as pianist, R. Rettich as violinist, and H. Warnke as cellist, visiting the principal German cities. In 1908 he succeeded Mahler as director of the Vienna State Opera (until 1910) and conductor of the symph. concerts of the opera orch. From 1912 to 1914 he was in Hamburg as conductor of the Municipal Opera; from 1914 to 1919, conductor of the court orch. in Darmstadt, and director of the Darmstadt Cons. He was musical director of the Vienna Volksoper (1919-24), and conducted the Vienna Philharmonic until 1927, when he became director of the Basel Cons. and conductor of the concerts of the Allgemeine Musikgesellschaft there; was music director of the Vienna State Opera in 1935-36. He appeared as conductor with many European orchestras, and also in the U. S.; made his American debut with the N. Y. Philharmonic on Feb. 10, 1905; then conducted the N. Y. Symph. Society (Jan.-March, 1906). He appeared as opera conductor with the Boston Opera Company on Feb. 12, 1912, conducting Tristan und Isolde; he and his 3rd wife, the mezzo-soprano Lucille Marcel, were engaged for a season with the same company in 1913. (His 1st wife was Marie Juillerat, whom he married in 1891; his 2nd wife was the Baroness Feodora von Dreifus, whom he married in 1903.) In 1936 he visited Japan; returning to Europe, he settled in Interlaken, Switzerland; established a summer conducting school; his classes attracted students from all parts of the world. His musical scholarship was very high. He was one of the editors of the complete works of Berlioz (from 1899) and of Haydn (from 1907); also edited Weber's Oberon, Wagner's Der fliegende Holländer, and Méhul's Joseph. Weingartner was a prolific composer; besides his early opera Sakuntala, he wrote several others: Genesius (Berlin, Nov. 15, 1892); Orestes, a trilogy (Leipzig, Feb. 15, 1902); Kain und Abel (Darmstadt, May 17, 1914); Dame Kobold (Darmstadt, Feb. 23, 1916); Die Dorfschule (Vienna, May 13, 1920); Meister Andrea (Vienna, May 13, 1920). For most of these he wrote his own librettos, and conducted the first performances. His orchestral works include 6 symphonies and the symph. poems King Lear and Frühling; he also wrote 5 string quartets; piano sextet (with double-bass); string quintet; quintet for clarinet, violin, viola, cello, and piano; octet for clarinet, horn, bassoon, 2 violins, viola, cello, and piano; 2 violin sonatas; a number of orchestral arrangements of piano works, including Beethoven's Hammerklavier sonata, op. 106, and Weber's Aufforderung zum Tanz. — Writings: Die Lehre von der Wiedergeburt und das musikalische Drama (1895); Über das Dirigieren (1895; 5th ed., 1913; a fundamental essay on conducting); Bayreuth 1876-1896 (1897; 2nd ed., 1904); Die Symphonie nach Beethoven (1897; 4th ed., 1901; English transl., 1904); Ratschläge für Aufführung der Sinfonien Beethovens (1906; 3rd ed., 1928; English transl., 1908); Ratschläge für Aufführung der Sinfonien Schuberts und Schumanns (1918); Ratschläge für Aufführung der Sinfonien Mozarts (1923); Musikalische Walpurgisnacht (1907, a satirical comedy); Akkorde (1912; collected essays); Bo Yin Ra (1927); Lebenserinnerungen (vol. I, 1923; vol. II, 1929; English version as Buffets and Rewards, a Musician's Reminiscences, London, 1937); Unwirkliches und Wirkliches (1936); Franz Liszt as Man and Artist, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1936); also a polemical pamphlet, Erlebnisse eines kgl. Kapellmeisters in Berlin (1912; an attack upon the Berlin intendency; a rebuttal was publ. by A. Wolff, in Der Fall Weingartner, 1912). — Cf. E. Krause, Felix Weingartner als schaffender Künstler (Berlin, 1904); P. Riesenfeld, Felix Weingartner. Ein kritischer Versuch (Breslau, 1906); W. Hutschenruyter, Levensschets en portret van Felix Weingartner (Haarlem, 1906); Paul Stefan, Gustav Mahlers Erbe (Munich, 1908); J. C. Lustig, Felix Weingartner. Persönlichkeiten (Berlin, 1908); P. Raabe, Felix Weingartner, in 'Die Musik' (Jan., 1908); F. Günther, Felix Weingartner (1917); W. Jacob, Felix Weingartner (Wiesbaden, 1933); also 'Festschrift für Dr. Felix Weingartner' (for his 70th birthday; Basel, 1933).

Weinlig (vin'-lih), Christian Ehregott, German organist and composer, b. Dresden, Sept. 30, 1743; d. there, March 14, 1813. He studied with Homilius, at the Kreuzschule; in 1767, organist at the Evangelical Church, Leipzig; in 1773, at Thorn; in 1780, accompanist at the Italian Opera, Dresden, and organist at the Frauenkirche; in 1785, succeeded his teacher Homilius as cantor of the Kreuzschule. He publ. sonatas for piano with flute and cello; brought out several oratorios; also light theater pieces.

Weinlig (vin'-lih), (Christian) Theodor, noted German music theorist and teacher; nephew and pupil of preceding; b. Dresden, July 25, 1780; d. Leipzig, March 6, 1842. After a period of study under his uncle, he became a pupil of Stanislao Mattei in Bologna; returning to Dresden, he was cantor at the Kreuzschule (1814-17); in 1823, succeeded Schicht as cantor of the Thomaschule, Leipzig. He enjoyed high repute as a teacher of theory and composition; Richard Wagner was his pupil. His own works include a Deutsches Magnificat for soli, chorus, and orch.; vocalises; publ. a practical manual, Theoretisch-praktische Anleitung zur Fuge, für den Selbstunterricht (1845; 2d ed., 1852). — Cf. A. Kurz, Geschichte der Familie Weinlig von 1580-1850 (Bonn, 1912); R. Roch, Theodor Weinlig (Leipzig, 1917).

Weinmann (vin'-mahn), Karl, German musicologist, authority on church music; b. Vohenstrauß, Upper Palatinate, Dec. 22, 1873; d. Pöhlhofen, near Regensburg, Sept. 26, 1929. He was a pupil of Haberl and Haller at the Kirchenmusikschule in Regensburg; after further study under Peter Wagner in Freiburg, Switzerland, he obtained the degree of Dr. phil. with the dissertation Das Hymnarium Parisiense (1905). After his ordination to the priesthood, he became prof.

at the Kirchenmusikschule in Regensburg; in 1910 succeeded Haberl as its director; in 1917, he was made Dr. theol. He was editor of the 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (from 1908), of 'Musica Sacra' (from 1911), and of the 'Cäcilienvereinsorgan' (from 1926). He ed. for Pustet (after the 'Editio vaticana') Römisches Gradualbuch (1909; 4th ed., 1928); Graduale (1910); Kyriale (1911); Totenoffizium (1912; 2nd ed., 1928); Graduale parvum (1913); Römisches Vesperbuch mit Psalmenbuch (1915); Karwochenbuch (1924); Feier der heiligen Karwoche (1925); Sonntagsvesper und Komplet (2nd ed., 1928). Was also ed. of the collection 'Kirchenmusik,' for which he wrote Geschichte der Kirchenmusik (1906; 4th ed., 1925; English transl., 1910; also transl. into French, Italian, Polish, and Hungarian), and monographs on Leonhard Paminger (1907) and Karl Proske (1909). Other writings include Palestrinas Geburtsjahr (Regensburg, 1915); Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht: die Geschichte des Liedes zu seinem 100. Geburtstag (1918; 2nd ed., 1920); Das Konzil von Trient und die Kirchenmusik (1919); Zur Geschichte der Missa Papae Marcelli, in 'Peters-Jahrbuch' (1916); etc. He publ. a new ed. of the 4th chapter of Tinctoris' De inventionis et usu musicae, in the 'Riemann-Festschrift' (1909; also separately, 1917), and ed. the 'Peter Wagner-Festschrift' (1926).

Weinrich, Carl, American organist; b. Paterson, N.J., July 2, 1904. After graduation from N.Y. Univ. (B.A., 1927), he studied at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia (1927-30); also studied organ privately with Lynnwood Farnam and Marcel Dupré, and piano with Abram Chasins. In 1930 he became successor of Lynnwood Farnam as organist at the Holy Communion Church, N. Y.; taught organ at the Westminster Choir School, Princeton, N.J. (1934-40) and at Columbia Univ. (1942-52); in 1943, appointed director of music at the Princeton Univ. Chapel; was visiting lecturer at Harvard Univ. in 1950; appeared in numerous recitals; also with orchestras.

Weinstock, Herbert, American writer on music; b. Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 16, 1905; educated in his native town; later took courses at the Univ. of Chicago. He publ. the following books: Tchaikovsky (1943; also publ. in French, Portuguese, Spanish, and German); Handel (1946; also in German); Chopin: The Man and His Music (1949; also in German); Music as an Art (1953); co-author, with Wallace Brockway, of Men of Music (1939; revised and enlarged, 1950) and The Opera: A History of Its Creation and Performance (1941). Weinstock is an executive editor of Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., N. Y., publishers.

Weinwurm (vin'-vöörn), Rudolf, Austrian choral conductor; b. Schaidldorf-on-the-Thaja, April 3, 1835; d. Vienna, May 26, 1911. He was trained musically as a chorister in the Imperial Chapel, Vienna; conducted the Vienna Singakademie (from 1864) and the Männergesangverein (from 1866); in 1880 he became musical director of Vienna Univ. He publ. the manuals Allgemeine Musiklehre (1870); Musikalische Lehrmittel (1873); Methodik des Gesangunterrichts (1876); composed a Deutsches Requiem for male chorus a cappella, and one for female chorus with organ; also other church music.

Weinzierl (vin'-tsärl), Max, Ritter von, conductor and composer, b. Bergstadt, Bohemia, Sept. 16, 1841; d. Mödling, near Vienna, July 10, 1898. He served as conductor at various theaters in Vienna; from 1882, was chorusmaster of the Männergesangverein. He wrote the operas Don Quixote (Vienna, Feb. 15, 1879; with L. Roth), Die weiblichen Jäger (Vienna, May 5, 1880), Moclemos (Vienna, June 5, 1880), Fioretta (Prague, 1886), Page Fritz (Prague, 1889), Der Schwiegerpapa (Berlin, 1893); the oratorio Hiob (Vienna, 1870); the choral works with orch.: Nachtgruss, Liedesweihe, Gesang der Nixen, Die Sphinx, Der Zigeuner, Donausage, Hubertus, etc.; many male choruses a cappella.

Weinzwieg, John Jacob, Canadian composer; b. Toronto, March 11, 1913. He studied at the Univ. of Toronto with Healey Willan and at the Eastman School, Rochester, with Bernard Rogers. In 1934 he organized the Univ. of Toronto Symph. Orch., and conducted it until 1937; then was appointed teacher of composition at the Toronto Cons. On Feb. 3, 1951, he organized the Canadian League of Composers, of which he is chairman. —Works: ballet: The Red Ear of Corn (Toronto, March 2, 1949); a symph. (1940); symph. poems: The Enchanted Hill (1938) and A Tale of Tuamotu (1939); Spectre, for kettledrums and strings (1928); violin concerto (1951); 2 string quartets (1937; 1946); divertimento No. 1, for flute and strings (1946); divertimento No. 2, for oboe and strings (1947); violin sonata (1941); cello sonata (1949); piano pieces; choruses: songs.

Weis, Flemming, Danish composer; b. Copenhagen, April 15, 1898. He studied organ in Copenhagen and composition in Leipzig. Returning to Denmark, he became active as music teacher. He wrote an oratorio, Det forjættede Land (The Promised Land; Copenhagen, Dec. 8, 1949); 2 symphonies (1946; 1948); a symph. poem, In temporis vernalis (1945); a serenade for wind quintet; 3 string quartets; Diuerterende musik, for flute, violin, viola, and cello; other chamber music; choruses; songs.

Weis, Karel, Czech conductor and composer; b. Prague, Feb. 13, 1862; d. there, April 4, 1944. He studied violin at the Prague Cons.; also organ with Skuherský and composition with Fibich at the Organ School in Prague; subsequently filled various posts as organist and conductor in Prague and other towns in Bohemia. He devoted much of his time to collecting Bohemian folksongs, and publ. them in 15 vols. (1928-41). —Works: the operas Viola, after Shakespeare's Twelfth Night (Prague, Jan. 17, 1892), Der polnische Jude (Prague, March 3, 1901; very successful; produced in English at the Metropolitan Opera House, March 9, 1921), Die Dorfmusikanten (Prague, Jan. 1, 1905), Der Revisor (after Gogol; 1907), Útok na mlýn (after Zola's L'Attaque du Moulin; Prague, March 29, 1912), Lešetinský kovář (The Blacksmith of Lešetín; Prague, June 6, 1920); a symph.; a string quartet; piano pieces; songs. —Cf. L. Firkušný, Karel Weis (Prague, 1949).

Weisbach, Hans, German conductor; b. Glogau, July 19, 1885. He studied at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; then became an opera coach in Munich; subsequently conducted in various provincial towns in Germany; held the post of music director and conductor at Düsseldorf (1926-33); then conducted the Leipzig Radio Orch. (1933-39) and the Municipal Orch. of Vienna (1938-45); in 1947 he was appointed music director at Wuppertal. He made several appearances in London; also conducted in Russia. —Cf. C. Heinzen, Hans Weisbach, in 'Die Musik' (Feb., 1931).

Weisgall, Hugo, composer; b. Ivančice, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 13, 1912. His family settled in Baltimore in 1920; there he studied theory at the Peabody Cons. with Louis Cheslock; later with Roger Sessions in N.Y., and Rosario Scalero at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia. He was a cultural attaché at the American embassy in Prague (1946-47); then returned to Baltimore, where he taught and lectured at various music schools; in 1951 founded the Baltimore Chamber Music Society; appeared as guest conductor in Baltimore, Washington, etc. — Works: operas: Night (1932), Lillith (1934), The Tenor (Baltimore, Feb. 11, 1952), The Stronger, after Strindberg (Westport, Conn., Aug. 9, 1952), 6 Characters in Search of an Author, after Pirandello (1953-56); ballets: Quest (Baltimore, May 17, 1938), One Thing Is Certain (Baltimore, Feb. 25, 1939), Outpost (1947); Overture in F (London, July 29, 1943); A Garden Eastward, cantata for high voice and orch. (Baltimore, Jan. 31, 1953); Soldier Songs for baritone and orch. (1946); 2 Choral Etudes (1937, 1953); a number of songs. — Cf. G. Rochberg, Hugo Weisgall, in the 'Bulletin of American Composers Alliance' (1958, No. 2).

Weismann (vis'-man), Julius, German composer; b. Freiburg-im-Breisgau, Dec. 26, 1879; d. Singen (Bodensee), Dec. 22, 1950. He studied in Munich with Rheinberger and Thuille; devoted himself mainly to the composition of operas, the most important of which was Leonce und Lena (Freiburg-im-Breisgau, June 21, 1925). Other operas: Schwanenweiss, after Strindberg (Duisburg, Sept. 29, 1923); Ein Traumspiel (Duisburg, 1925); Regina del Lago (Karlsruhe, 1928); Die Gespenstersonate, after Strindberg (Munich, Dec. 19, 1930); Landknechte (Essen, 1936); Die pfeifige Magd, after Holberg (Leipzig, Feb. 11, 1939); a symph., Über einem Grabe, for chorus and orch.; Fingerhütchen, fairy ballad for baritone solo, female chorus, and orch.; Macht hoch die Tür, cantata; Tanzfantasie for orch.; a piano concerto; a violin concerto; much chamber music, including 2 piano trios, 2 violin sonatas, etc. — Cf. W. Thomas-San Galli, Julius Weismann, in vol. 2 of 'Monographien moderner Musiker' (Leipzig, 1907); F. Doldinger, Julius Weismann, in 'Neue Musikzeitschrift' (Dec., 1947); H. J. Moser, Julius Weismann, in 'Musica' (June, 1955).

Weismann, Wilhelm, German composer; b. Alfdorf, Sept. 20, 1900. He studied at the Stuttgart Cons. with Karg-Elert, and in Leipzig with M. Ludwig; in 1948 was appointed prof. at the Hochschule für Musik in Leipzig. He wrote a number of choral works, both secular and sacred; Italian and German madrigals; several piano suites in the Baroque style; publ. numerous arrangements of old vocal music; brought out Das kleine Volksliederbuch; also active as editor for German publishing firms.

Weiss, Adolph, American composer and bassoonist; b. Baltimore, Sept. 12, 1891 (of German parents). He studied piano, violin, and the bassoon; at the age of 16, was engaged as 1st bassoonist of the Russian Symph. Orch. of N. Y.; then played in the N. Y. Philharmonic under Mahler; for many years was with the N. Y. Symph. under Walter Damrosch. In the meantime he studied composition with Cornelius Rybner at Columbia Univ. In 1916 he joined the Chicago Symph. Orch. as bassoonist; studied theory with Adolf Weidig and Theodore Otterstrom there; then was bassoonist with the Rochester, N. Y., Orch. In 1925 he went to Europe to study with Arnold Schoenberg, whose influence was decisive in the formation of his musical style, which is in the 12-tone idiom. In 1931 he received a Guggenheim Fellowship. Returning to the U.S., he played in the San Francisco Symph. Orch.; then moved to Hollywood, where he settled. — Works: Fantasie for piano (1918); I Segreti for orch. (1922; Rochester, May 1, 1925); 3 string quartets (1925, 1926, 1932); chamber symph. for 10 instruments (1927); 12 preludes for piano (1927); American Life, 'Scherzoso Jazzoso' for large orch. (N. Y., Feb. 21, 1930); Sonata da Camera for flute and viola (1929); 7 songs for soprano and string quartet (1928); The Libation Bearers, choreographic cantata, for soloists, chorus, and orch. (1930); quintet for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and horn, a 12-tone piece (1931); piano sonata (1932); Theme and Variations for large orch. (1933); Suite for orch. (1938); Petite Suite for flute, clarinet, and bassoon (1939); violin sonata (1941); Passacaglia for horn and viola (1942); 10 pieces for low instrument and orch. (1943); Ode to the West Wind for baritone, viola, and piano (1945); Protest for 2 pianos (1945); sextet for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn, and piano (1947); trio for clarinet, viola, and cello (1948); concerto for bassoon and string quartet (1949); Pulse of the Sea, an étude for piano (1950); concerto for trumpet and orch. (1952); trio for flute, violin, and piano (1955); 5 fantasies for violin and piano (1956); Tone Poem for brass and percussion (1957); Rhapsody for 4 French horns (1957); Vade Mecum for a group of wind instruments (1958). — Cf. W. Riegger, Adolph Weiss and Colin McPhee, in H. Cowell, ed., American Composers on American Music (Stanford Univ., 1933); 'Bulletin of American Composers Alliance' (1958, No. 3).

Weiss, Amalie. See Joachim, Amalie.

Weiss, Franz, viola player; b. Silesia, Jan. 18, 1778; d. Vienna, Jan. 25, 1830. When Prince Razumovsky formed his string quartet in Vienna (1808), Franz Weiss was engaged as viola player, with Schuppanzigh as 1st violin, Prince Razumovsky as 2nd violin, and Linke as cellist. Weiss composed some chamber music; Variations brillantes for violin and orch.; several piano sonatas; as a symph. for flute, bassoon, and trumpet; etc.

Weiss, Johann, Austrian hymnologist; b. St. Ruprecht-on-Raab, Styria, Nov. 20, 1850; d. there, Sept. 7, 1919. He studied theology; in 1881 appointed teacher of hymnology at the Graz Seminary; was organist at the Graz Cathedral (1884-91); from 1902 was co-editor of the 'Gregorianische Rundschau.' He publ. Die musikalischen Instrumente in den heiligen Schriften des Alten Testaments (1895).

Weiss, Julius, German violinist; b. Berlin, July 19, 1814; d. there, June 30, 1898. He studied with Henning; wrote music criticism; publ. instructive works for violin; was also active in music publishing.

Weiss, Sylvius Leopold, German lute player and composer; b. Breslau, Oct. 12, 1686; d. Dresden, Oct. 15, 1750. He learned to play the lute from his father; served as lutenist at the court of Düsseldorf (1706); then with Alexander Sobieski, Prince of Poland, in Rome (1708-14); and at Hesse-Kassel (1715-16). In 1717 he went to Dresden, where he remained for the rest of his life, with the exception of a few months in Berlin (1728). He was regarded as one of the greatest lute players of his time; in 1728, publ. a treatise on the lute. 6 of his suites are reprinted in vol. XII of the 'Reichsdenkmale' (Brunswick, 1939). — Cf. H. Neemann, Die Lautenhand-schriften von S. L. Weiss in der Bibliothek Dr. Werner Wolfheim, Berlin, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 10; 1928); H. Neemann, Die Lautenistenfamilie Weiss, in 'Archiv für Musikforschung' (vol. 4; 1939).

Weissberg (vis'-berg), Yulia Lazarevna, Russian composer; b. Orenburg, Dec. 25, 1878; d. Leningrad, March 1, 1942. She studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Rimsky-Korsakov, and married his son Andrey; in 1907 took a course with Max Reger in Germany; was a co-editor of the periodical 'Musikalnyi Sovremennik' (1915-17). — Works: operas: Mermaid, after Andersen (1923), Gulnara (1935), The Dead Princess (1937); 2 children's operas: Little Rabbit's House (1935) and Geese and Swans (1937); The Twelve, to the poem of Alexander Blok, for chorus and orch. (1928); symph. poem,

In the Night (1929); Sailor's Dance, for orch. (1936); several song cycles for voice with instruments; children's choruses; a number of solo songs; transcriptions of folksongs.

Weisse, Hans, Austrian music theorist and composer; b. Vienna, March 31, 1892; d. New York, Feb. 10, 1940. He studied with Schenker and became an exponent of his theory. In 1931 he came to the U. S. and gave courses in theory at the Mannes Music School, in N. Y. He wrote mostly chamber music: 3 string quartets (1920-36); string sextet (1924); quintet for clarinet and strings (1928); octet for strings and winds (1929); concerto for flute, oboe, and harpsichord (1937); Choral Partita, for strings and winds (1938).

Weissenböck (vī-sēn-bäk), (Franz) Andreas, Austrian choral conductor and composer; b. St. Lorenzen, Styria, Nov. 26, 1880. He studied in Graz; in 1899, entered the monastery at Klosterneuburg, near Vienna; became a Catholic priest in 1904; then took up musicology under Guido Adler at the Univ. of Vienna (Dr. phil., 1912); was for many years choirmaster at Klosterneuburg. He was co-founder and co-editor of the review 'Musica Divina'; publ. Sacra Musica, a lexicon of Catholic church music (1937); collaborated in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich'; contributed valuable papers to various publications, particularly on Gregorian Chant; also was an expert on church bells. He composed a German Mass for male chorus; publ. many sacred works; also a Mass for mixed chorus and 7 wind instruments, including 2 saxophones (first use of saxophones in liturgical music).

Weissheimer (vis'-hī-mēr), Wendelin, conductor and composer; b. Osthofen, Alsace, Feb. 26, 1838; d. Nuremberg, June 16, 1910. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. and later took lessons in composition with Liszt at Weimar. He was opera conductor at Würzburg, at Mainz, and at Strasbourg; then lived in various towns on the Rhine and in Bavaria. As a composer, he followed the Wagnerian vogue; wrote 2 music dramas, Theodor Körner (Munich, May 28, 1872) and Meister Martin und seine Gesellen (Karlsruhe, April 14, 1879); also 18 songs to words by Goethe; 5 Geistliche Sonette for voice, flute, oboe, clarinet, and harmonium. His book of reminiscences, Erlebnisse mit Richard Wagner, Franz Liszt und vielen anderen Zeitgenossen, nebst deren Briefen (Stuttgart, 1898), quotes many letters from Wagner, with whom he maintained an intimate friendship.

Weissmann (vis'-man), Adolf, German writer on music; b. Rosenberg, Silesia, Aug. 15, 1873; d. Saïda, near Haifa, April 23, 1929. He studied in Berlin, Breslau, Florence, etc.; Dr. phil., 1914. He was critic for the 'Berliner Tageblatt' (1900-15) and from 1916 for the 'Berliner Zeitung am Mittag'; also wrote for German music magazines; went on a lecture tour in Palestine and died there. —Books: Berlin als Musikstadt (1740-1911) (1911); G. Bizet (1907; in the collection 'Die Musik,' ed. by Richard Strauss); Chopin (1912; 3rd ed., 1919); Der Virtuose (1918); Die Primadonna (1920); Der klingende Garten. Impressionen über das Erotische in der Musik (1920); the 3 preceding titles together as Die Musik der Sinne (1925); Giacomo Puccini (1922); Die Musik in der Weltkrise (1922; English transl. as The Problems of Modern Music, London, 1925); Verdi (1922); Der Dirigent im 20. Jahrhundert (1925); Die Entgötterung der Musik (1928; English transl., as Musik Come to Earth, London, 1930). —Cf. E. Preussner, Adolf Weissmann, in 'Die Musik' (vol. 21; 1929).

Weissmann, Frieder, conductor; b. Langen, Germany, Jan. 23, 1898. He studied law and music at the Univ. of Munich; conducted at the Berlin State Opera (1920-25); then at Münster and Königsberg; was subsequently conductor of the Dresden Philharmonic (1927-31) and of the Berlin Symph. Orch. (1931-33); made a South American tour (1934-37); made his U.S. début with the Cincinnati Symph. Orch. during the season of 1937-38; was conductor of the Scranton, Pa., Philharmonic (1943-50); from 1950 conducted the Havana Philharmonic.

Weissmann, John (János), musicologist; b. Budapest, July 10, 1910. He studied at the Budapest Cons.; was opera coach at the Municipal Theater (1932-34); then assistant conductor there (1935-37). In 1937 he settled in London, where he attended classes of conducting at the Royal Academy of Music. Subsequently he devoted his attention mainly to musicology; has contributed numerous valuable essays to various periodicals; publ. a monograph on Goffredo Petrassi (Milan, 1957; in English); wrote the articles on Hungarian music and musicians for the 5th ed. of Grove's Dictionary (1954).

Weitzmann (vitt'-man), Karl Friedrich, noted German theorist and composer; b. Berlin, Aug. 10, 1808; d. there, Nov. 7, 1880. He studied violin with Henning and theory with Klein; later, at Kassel, was a pupil of Spohr and Hauptmann. He then held the post of concertmaster in Riga (1832-34), Reval (1834-36), and St. Petersburg (1836-46). After sojourns in Paris and London (1846-48), he settled in Berlin as a teacher of composition. He was an ardent disciple and friend of Wagner and Liszt; among his posthumous papers was found the original MS of a double fugue for piano by Wagner, with corrections in the handwriting of Weinlig (Wagner's teacher). The piece was publ. by E. Istel in 'Die Musik' (July, 1912). Weitzmann was an original thinker in his harmonic theories; made an investigation of the modulatory functions of the whole-tone scale, and interested Liszt in its use. He composed a 4th variation to Liszt's Todtentanz. A full exposition of his theories is found in a book by his American pupil, E. M. Bowman, K. F. Weitzmann's Manual of Musical Theory (N.Y., 1877). Weitzmann's theoretical works in German include Der übermässige Dreiklang (1853); Der verminderte Septimenakkord (1854); Geschichte des Septimen-Akkordes (1854); Geschichte der Harmonie und ihrer Lehre (in the 'Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung,' 1849); Harmoniesystem (1860); Die neue Harmonielehre im Streit mit der alten (1861); Geschichte des Klavierspiels und der Klavierliteratur (1863, as Part III of the Lebert-Stark piano method; 2nd ed., 1879, printed separately, with an added Geschichte des Klaviers; in English, N.Y., 1894, with a biographical sketch by Otto Lessmann; 3rd German ed., Leipzig, 1899, as Geschichte der Klaviermusik, edited by Max Seiffert, with a supplement, Geschichte des Klaviers, by Otto Fleischer); Der letzte der Virtuosen (on Tausig; 1868); many essays in various musical periodicals. As a composer, he followed the fashionable Romantic trends; wrote the operas Räuberliebe (1834), Walpurgisnacht (1835), and Lorbeer und Bettelstab (1836), which he brought out in Reval; 3 books of Valses nobles for piano; Preludes and Modulations for piano, in 2 parts, 'Classic' and 'Romantic'; also wrote 2 books of ingenious canonic Rätsel for piano 4 hands, and 2 books of Kontrapunkt-Studien for piano.

Welch, Roy Dickinson, American pianist and music educator; b. Dansville, N.Y., Jan. 19, 1885; d. Princeton, N.J., Jan. 8, 1951. He studied at the Univ. of Michigan (B.A., 1909); then went to Berlin, where he took piano lessons from Josef Lhévinne (1910-12). From 1914 to 1935 he was chairman of the music dept. of Smith College, Northampton, Mass.; went to Europe on a Guggenheim Fellowship (1930-32); in 1935 was appointed chairman of the music dept. of Princeton Univ. He publ. The Study of Music in the American College (Northampton, Mass., 1925) and The Appreciation of Music (N.Y., 1927; revised ed., 1945).

Weld, Arthur Cyril Gordon, American conductor; b. Boston, March 4, 1862; d. near West Point, N.Y., Oct. 11, 1914 (of apoplexy, while driving an automobile). He studied in Dresden, in Berlin, and in Munich. Upon returning to America, he became general director of the H. W. Savage Opera Co., and conducted the first performance of the famous musical comedy Floradora (N. Y., 1900). Some of his songs were publ.

Weldon, George, English conductor; b. Chichester, June 5, 1906. He studied at the Royal College of Music with Malcolm Sargent; conducted various provincial orchestras; traveled as guest conductor in North Africa, Turkey, and Yugoslavia. He was conductor of the Birmingham City Orch. from 1943 to 1950. —Cf. Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (London, 1951; pp. 221-23).

Weldon, Georgina (née Thomas), English soprano; b. London, May 24, 1837; d. Brighton, Jan. 11, 1914. She took up singing after her marriage to Capt. Weldon in 1860, and did not appear in public until 1870. She organized an orphan asylum for the purpose of musical education, and also dabbled in music publishing. Special interest attaches to her because of her romantic friendship with Gounod, who during his London sojourn (1870-75) lived at her residence, and whom she assisted in training the 'Gounod Choir.' She translated his autobiography (which goes only as far as 1859) into English (1875). Their relationship deteriorated, leading to a legal entanglement in connection with her claims regarding the copyright of Gounod's choral works; she wrote numerous and highly acrimonious letters to the press, defending her stand. She also publ. some songs of her own (to French texts) and the didactic manuals Hints for Pronunciation in Singing (1872) and Musical Reform (1875).

Welitsch, Ljuba (real name, Velitchkova), Bulgarian soprano; b. Borisovo, near Varna, July 10, 1913. She played the violin as a child; then entered high school; subsequently took courses in philosophy at the Univ. of Sofia; then went to Vienna, where she studied voice with Lierhammer. She made her operatic début as Nedda in I Pagliacci at the Graz Opera (1936); from 1941 to 1943, sang in Hamburg and Berlin; in 1943-46, was in Munich. On June 11, 1944 she made her first appearance as Salome (later to become her most famous role) in Vienna, under the direction of Richard Strauss himself, on his 80th birthday. She made her début in London with the Vienna State Opera as Donna Anna in Don Giovanni on Sept. 20, 1947. Her American début, at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., in Salome (Feb. 4, 1949) was greatly acclaimed. She remained a member of the Metropolitan Opera until 1952.

Wellek (věl'-lěk), Albert, Austrian musicologist; b. Vienna, Oct. 16, 1904. He studied at the Universities of Prague, Vienna, and Leipzig (Dr. phil., Vienna, 1928), and the Prague Cons.; in 1933 he became assistant to Felix Krueger in the psychology dept. of the Univ. of Leipzig; in 1943 was appointed prof. of psychology at Breslau; subsequently at the Univ. of Mainz. From 1938 he was co-editor of the 'Neue psychologische Studien.' —Writings: Das absolute Gehör und seine Typen (Leipzig, 1938); Typologie der Musikbegabung im deutschen Volke (Munich, 1939); numerous articles on musical psychology in various German periodicals; Quarter-Tones and Progress, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1926); etc.

Wellesz (věhl'-ěs), Egon, eminent Austrian composer and musicologist; b. Vienna, Oct. 21, 1885. He studied harmony with Carl Frühling, musicology with Guido Adler, and counterpoint and composition with Schoenberg; obtained the degree of Dr. phil. in 1908 with a thesis on Giuseppe Bonno, publ. in the 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. XI, 1910). From 1911 to 1915 he taught music history at the Neues Conservatorium in Vienna; in 1913 was engaged as lecturer on musicology at the Univ. of Vienna, and was prof. there from 1930 to 1938, when the annexation of Austria by Nazi Germany compelled him to leave. He went to England and joined the music dept. of Oxford Univ., which in 1932 had conferred upon him the degree of Mus. Doc. (hon. c.). In 1943 he became lecturer in the history of music at Oxford Univ.; in 1946, appointed to the editorial board of the 'New Oxford History of Music,' to which he then contributed, and in 1948, elected Univ. Reader in Byzantine music at Oxford. In 1956-57 he lectured in the U.S. A scholar and a musician of extraordinary capacities, Wellesz has distinguished himself as an early disciple and biographer of Schoenberg, as a composer of highly complex musical scores, and as an authority on Byzantine music. —Works: operas: Die Prinzessin Gernara (Hanover, May 15, 1921; revised version, Mannheim, Sept. 2, 1928); Alkestis (Mannheim, March 20, 1924); Opferung des Gefangenen (Cologne, April 10, 1926); Scherz, List und Rache (Stuttgart, March 1, 1928); Die Bakchantinnen (Vienna, June 20, 1931); Incognita (Oxford, Dec. 5, 1951); ballets: Das Wunder der Diana (Mannheim, March 20, 1924); Persisches Ballet (Donaueschingen, 1924); Achilles auf Skyros (Stuttgart, March 4, 1927); Die Nächtlichen (Berlin, Nov. 20, 1924); for orch.: 5 symphonies (1945, 1948, 1951, 1952, 1957); symph. poem, Vorfrühling (1912); Festlicher Marsch (1929); Proserpina Beschwürungen, after Shakespeare's The Tempest (1936-38); piano concerto (1935); chamber music: 7 string quartets; 2 pieces for clarinet and piano; suite for violin and piano; sonata for unaccompanied violin; sonata for unaccompanied cello; Little Suite for flute unaccompanied; octet for clarinet, bassoon, horn, and strings (1948); a number of piano pieces; vocal works: Gebete der Mädchen zu Maria, after Rilke, for soprano, chorus, and orch. (1909); cantata, Mitte des Lebens, for soprano, chorus, and orch. (1932); Mass, for chorus and organ (1934); Short Mass for chorus and chamber orch. (1937); several motets; Proprium (1953); arias for voice with orch.; 5 sonnets by Elizabeth Browning, for soprano and string quartet (1935); The Leaden Echo and the Golden Echo, for soprano, violin, clarinet, cello, and piano (1942); several song cycles. — Writings: Cavalli und der Stil der venetianischen Oper (1640-60), in Adler's 'Studien' I (1913); Schönberg and Beyond, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1916); Die Grundlagen der musikgeschichtlichen Forschung, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (1919); Arnold Schönberg (1921; English transl., 1925); Der Beginn des musikalischen Barock und Die Anfänge der Oper in Wien (1922); Aufgaben und Probleme aus dem Gebiete der byzantinischen und orientalischen Kirchenmusik (1923); Byzantinische Musik (1927); Die neue Instrumentation (2 vols.; 1928, 1929); Eastern Elements in Western Chant (Oxford, 1947); A History of Byzantine Music and Hymnography (Oxford, 1949); Essays on Opera (London, 1950); The Origin of Schoenberg's Twelve-Tone System (Washington, 1958); numerous essays on a variety of subjects in German and English periodicals. He edited Fux's Costanza e Fortezza, in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 34-35); Trésor de Musique Byzantine, vol. I (Paris, 1934); Die Hymnen des Sticherarium für September (1936; vol. I of the 'Monumenta Musicae Byzantinae, Transcripts'); and vol. I of the

New Oxford History of Music, 'Ancient and Oriental Music' (1957). — Cf. O. F. Beer, Egon Wellesz und die Oper, in 'Die Musik' (Sept., 1931); H. F. Redlich, Egon Wellesz, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1940); R. Reti, Egon Wellesz, Musician and Scholar, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1956).

Wels, Charles, pianist and composer; b. Prague, Aug. 24, 1825; d. New York, May 12, 1906. After studying in Prague, he went to America in 1849, and settled in N.Y.; filled various positions as church organist and teacher; retired in 1901. He composed about 170 op. numbers, including 5 Masses; a piano concerto; fantasias, other pieces, transcriptions, and arrangements for piano, 2 or 4 hands; several male quartets; songs.

Welsh, Thomas, English singer and composer; b. Wells, c. 1780; d. Brighton, Jan. 24, 1848. He was a chorister at Wells Cathedral, and a pupil of J. B. Cramer and Baumgarten. He made his opera début in London at the age of 12; after his voice changed he became a bass, and sang in oratorio. He was particularly distinguished as a vocal teacher; publ. Vocal Instructor, or the Art of Singing Exemplified in 15 Lessons leading to 40 Progressive Exercises (1825); piano sonatas; glees, duets, and part-songs; also wrote several musical pieces for the theater. His wife and pupil Mary Anne, née Wilson (1802-67), was a noted soprano who made her début at Drury Lane, Jan. 18, 1821, in Arne's Artaxerxes.

Welte, Michael, German manufacturer of musical instruments; b. Unterkirnach, Black Forest, Sept. 29, 1807; d. Freiburg-im-Breisgau, Jan. 17, 1880. Having served an apprenticeship with Josef Blessing, a maker of musical clocks, he established himself at Vochrenbach (1832); exhibited his first 'orchestration' at Karlsruhe in 1849; later took his sons (Emil, Berthold, and Michael, Jr.) into partnership. His instruments obtained 1st prizes at London (1862), Paris (1867), Munich (1885), Vienna (1892), Chicago (1893), St. Louis (1904), Leipzig (1909), and Turin (1911); in 1872 the factory was removed to Freiburg-im-Breisgau. — His oldest son, Emil Welte (b. Vochrenbach, April 20, 1841; d. Norwich, Conn., Oct. 25, 1923), established a branch in N.Y. (1865); he improved the then newly invented paper roll (taking the place of the earlier wooden cylinders), and was the first to use it, in connection with a pneumatic action, in a large orchestration built for Theiss' Alhambra Court (N.Y. City). A son of Berthold Welte, Edwin (b. Freiburg, 1875; d. there, Jan. 4, 1958), applied the paper roll to the piano, producing the 'Welter-Mignon Reproducing Piano' (first exhibited in Freiburg, 1904); the application of the same principle to the organ resulted in the invention of the 'Philharmonic Organ' (1912).

Wen Chung, Chou. See Chou Wen Chung.

Wendel, Ernst, German violinist and conductor; b. Breslau, March 26, 1876; d. Jena, May 20, 1938. He studied violin with Joachim in Berlin; theory with Bargiel. In 1896 he went to America, and was a member of the Chicago Symph. Orch. for 2 seasons; returning to Germany, was conductor of the 'Musikverein' in Königsberg (1898-1909); then conductor in Bremen, Berlin, Frankfurt, and Nuremberg. He composed Das Grab im Busento and Das deutsche Lied, both for men's chorus with orch.; also men's choruses a cappella and songs.

Wendland, Waldemar, German composer; b. Liegnitz, May 10, 1873; d. Zeitz, Aug. 15, 1947. He studied for a short time with Humperdinck, while acting as an assistant conductor at the Frankfurt Opera; then settled in Berlin. He wrote the operas Das kluge Felleisen (Magdeburg, 1909), Das vergessene Ich (Berlin, 1911), Der Schneider von Malta (Leipzig, 1812), Peter Sukoff (Basel, 1921), Die vier Temperamente (Freiburg, 1927), Koreanisches Märchen (Altenburg, May 11, 1946); several ballets; orchestral works; chamber music; about 200 songs.

Wendling, Johann Baptist, German flutist and composer; b. Alsace, c. 1720; d. Munich, Nov. 27, 1797. He was active in Mannheim as a flutist from 1754; accompanied Mozart to Paris in 1778; then was with the Mannheim court in Munich. He composed a number of flute concertos and other flute music. His wife, Dorothea Wendling (1737-1811), was an opera singer; Mozart wrote an aria for her.

Wendling, Karl, German pianist; b. Frankenthal, Nov. 14, 1857; d. Leipzig, June 20, 1918. He studied at the Leipzig Cons.; made a specialty of the Jankó keyboard, on which he became highly proficient; also taught piano at the Leipzig Cons.; publ. 'Meisterwerke aus der Etüden-Literatur' (4 books; in progressive order).

Wendt, Ernst Adolf, German pianist and composer; b. Schwiebus, Prussia, Jan. 6, 1806; d. Neuwied, Feb. 5, 1850. He was a pupil of Zelter in Berlin; then became instructor at the Teachers' Seminary there. He publ. variations for piano and orch.; a piano trio; a 4-hand piano sonata; a collection of his organ pieces was publ. by Karl Becker as Wendt Album.

Wennerberg, Gunnar, Swedish writer and composer; b. Linköping, Oct. 2, 1817; d. Leckö, Aug. 22, 1901. He studied at the Univ. of Upsala, and entered the Swedish Parliament. He learned music by himself; began to write songs for male voices, which became very successful in Sweden; publ. the collections 'Frihetssånger' (1847) and 'Glungtarne' (1849-51; reprinted, Upsala, 1949); also composed a Christmas oratorio, and settings of the Psalms of David for solo voices, chorus, and piano. His literary works were publ. in 4 vols. (1881-85). — Cf. S. Almquist, Om Gunnar Wennerberg: hans tid och hans gärning (Stockholm, 1917); C. F. Hennerberg, Förteckning över G. Wennerbergs Tonverk (Stockholm, 1918); G. Jeanson, G. Wennerberg som Musiker (Stockholm, 1929).

Wenzel (vĕn'-tsĕl), Ernst Ferdinand, German pianist and writer on music; b. Walddorf, near Löbau, Jan. 25, 1808; d. Bad Kösen, Aug. 16, 1880. A student of philosophy at Leipzig Univ., he also had private piano lessons with Fr. Wicck, became a fast friend of his fellow-pupil Schumann, and was a frequent contributor to the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik' during Schumann's editorship (till 1844). He was also an intimate friend of Mendelssohn; taught piano at the Leipzig Cons. from its foundation in 1843 until his death; the majority of English-speaking students there were in his classes, or had private instruction from him.

Wenzel, Leopold, Italian violinist, conductor, and composer; b. Naples, Jan. 31, 1847; d. Asnières, near Paris, Aug., 1925. He studied at the Cons. S. Pietro a Majella, Naples, but left it at the age of 13, traveling as a violinist in Greece, Turkey, Egypt, eventually going to Paris as theater conductor there. From 1889 to 1914 he was in London, conducting at the Empire Theatre and the Gaiety Theatre. He wrote about 20 ballets, the most successful being Dream of Wealth, Katrina, and The Girl I Left behind Me; the operettas Le Chevalier Mignon (Paris, 1884), L'Elève du Conservatoire (Paris, 1894); also many songs.

Wenzinger, August, Swiss cellist and music editor; b. Basel, Nov. 14, 1905. He studied cello in Basel; took a course in composition with Jarnach in Cologne (1927-29); then was orchestral cellist in Bremen and other German cities; in 1934 returned to Basel, where he gave concerts on the viola da gamba; was active in old music societies there. He publ. Gambenübung (2 vols.; 1935, 1938) and Gambenfibel (with Marianne Majer; 1943); edited Haydn's cello concerto in D major and Bach's unaccompanied suites for cello; publ. various papers in music magazines.

Werba, Erik, Austrian composer; b. Baden, near Vienna, May 23, 1918. He studied with J. Marx (theory), with Lach, Wellesz, and Schenk (musicology); Dr. phil., 1940, Univ. of Vienna. In 1948 appointed prof. at the Vienna State Academy. He composed several Singspiele, chamber music, songs.

Werckmeister, Andreas, German organist and theorist; b. Beneckenstein, Nov. 30, 1645; d. Halberstadt, Oct. 26, 1706. He studied organ with his uncles, Christian and Victor; was organist at Hasselfelde (1664-74), at Quedlinburg (1675-96), and finally at Halberstadt, from 1696 to his death. He publ. the important treatise Orgelprobe . . . (1681; 2nd ed., 1698; 3rd ed., 1716; 4th ed., 1764; English transl. in 'Organ Institute Quarterly', vol. 6, 1956); Musicae mathematicae Hodegus curiosus, oder richtiger musikalischer Weg-Weiser . . . (1686; 2nd ed., 1698); Der edlen Music-Kunst Würde, Gebrauch und Mißbrauch . . . (1691); Musikalische Temperatur . . . (1691; the earliest treatise on equal temperament); Hypomnemata musica, oder musikalisches Memorial . . . (1697); Die notwendigsten Anmerkungen und Regeln wie der Bassus continuus . . . könne tractiret werden . . . (1698); Harmonologia musica, oder kurtze Anleitung zur musikalischen Composition . . . (1702); Organum Gruningense redivivum, oder kurtze Beschreibung des in der grüningischen Schloss-Kirchen berühmten Orgel-Wercks . . . (1705); Musikalische Paradoxal-Discourse . . . (posthumous; 1707). A facsimile reprint of the Orgelprobe (ed. of 1698) was publ. in Kassel in 1927; the Organum Gruningense was republ. in Mainz, in 1932. — Cf. W. Serauky, Andreas Werckmeister als Musiktheoretiker, in the 'Max Schneider Festschrift' (Halle, 1935); R. Dammann, Zur Musiklehre des Andreas Werckmeister, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 11; 1954).

Wermann, Friedrich Oskar, German organist and composer; b. Neichen, near Trebsen, April 30, 1840; d. Oberloschwitz, near Dresden, Nov. 22, 1906. He was a pupil of Fr.

Wieck (piano); later of Reinecke, Hauptmann, and Richter at the Leipzig Cons. He occupied various positions as organist in Alsace, before settling in Dresden (1868) as teacher and church organist; also conducted the Lehrergesangverein there. He composed a Christmas fairy tale, Die Wunderglocke; a symph. poem, König Witichis; several overtures; a Reformationskantate; a Passionskantate; 2 Masses; several psalms for double chorus a cappella; numerous organ works; études for piano; part-songs.

Werner, Arno, German organist and musicologist; b. Prititz, Weissenfels, Nov. 22, 1865; d. Bitterfeld, Feb. 15, 1955. He studied at the Royal Institute for Church-Music in Berlin (1889-90); in 1890 became municipal organist at Bitterfeld; in 1894 was appointed music teacher at the Gymnasium there, retiring in 1931; continued his activities as musicologist until his death; contributed articles to 'Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart' (1953). — Writings: Samuel und Gottfried Scheidt (1900); Geschichte der Kantorei-Gesellschaften im Gebiete des Kurfürstentums Sachsen (1902); Die Kantorei zu Bitterfeld (1903); Städtische und fürstliche Musikpflege in Weissenfels . . . (1911); Städtische und fürstliche Musikpflege in Zeitz (1922); Zur Geschichte der Kantorei in Zörbig (1927); Musikpflege in Stadt und Kreis Bitterfeld (1931); Vier Jahrhunderte im Dienste der Kirchenmusik. Geschichte der Kantoren, Organisten und Stadtpfeifer seit der Reformation (1932); Der deutsche Kantor (1933); Freie Musikgemeinschaften im mitteldeutschen Raum (1940).

Werner, Eric, musicologist; b. Lundenberg, near Vienna, Aug. 1, 1901. He studied composition with Kornauth in Vienna, and Schreker and Busoni in Berlin; also took courses at the universities of Graz, Vienna, Prague, Berlin, Göttingen, and Strasbourg; Dr. phil. (1928); held teaching positions in Saarbrücken (1926-33) and Breslau (1935-38). In 1938 he settled in the U.S.; was engaged as lecturer at the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati; prof., 1946; chairman of faculty at Hebrew Union School of Sacred Music, N.Y., 1948; since 1955 chairman of graduate department there. Received a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1957. He is an authority on Jewish and early Christian music; publ. In the Choir Loft (N.Y., 1957); The Sacred Bridge (London, 1958); contributed articles to the 'Mus. Quarterly' and other publications; composed a Symphony-Requiem; chamber music; various other pieces.

Werner, Gregor Joseph, Austrian music director and composer; b. 1695; d. Eisenstadt, March 3, 1766. In 1728 he was appointed Kapellmeister to Prince Esterházy at Eisenstadt (was succeeded after his death by Haydn). He wrote a number of works, including 40 Masses, 18 oratorios, instrumental pieces. His fugues for string quartet were arranged by Haydn. Modern reprints, ed. by E. F. Schmid, include Hirtenkantate (1934); Hirtenmusik (1934; 1938); Kleine Hirtenmusik (1940); Pastorella in D; works for 2 violins and harpsichord ed. by Fritz Stein in 'Das Erbe deutscher Musik' vol. 31; etc.

Werner, Heinrich, German composer; b. Kirchholfeld, Oct. 2, 1800; d. Brunswick, May 3, 1833. His song Haidenröslein became a perennial favorite in Germany; he also publ. male quartets and light piano music. —Cf. Fr. Mecke, Heinrich Werner (dissertation; Bonn, 1913); P. Egert, Festschrift zur Einweihung des Denkmals für Werner in Kirchholfeld (1913).

Werner, Johann Gottlob, German organist and teacher; b. Grossenhain, 1777; d. Chemnitz, July 19, 1822. After holding minor positions as organist in provincial towns, he was appointed cathedral organist and music director at Merseburg, but died 3 years later. He publ. organ methods which were much in use: Orgelschule (1805; Part II as Lehrbuch, das Orgelwerk . . . kennen . . . zu lernen, 1823; both often republ.); Musikalisches ABC for beginners on the piano (1806; often republ.); Choralbuch zum holländischen Psalm- und Gesangbuch (1814); Choralbuch zu den neuern sächsischen Gesangbüchern (Leipzig); Versuch einer kurzen und deutlichen Darstellung der Harmonielehre (2 parts, 1818, 1819); many chorale-preludes; 40 organ pieces for beginners; etc.

Werner, Josef, German cellist; b. Würzburg, June 25, 1837; d. Munich, Nov. 14, 1922. He studied at the Würzburg Cons.; became a teacher at the Munich Musikschule; publ. a Praktische Violoncell-Schule (with 7 supplements); Der erste Anfang im Violoncellspiel; several books of Übungen für Violoncell; numerous pieces for cello with piano; also a quartet for 4 cellos.

Werner, Theodor Wilhelm, German writer on music; b. Hanover, June 8, 1874; d. Salzburg, Dec. 6, 1957. He studied philology; then music with Draeseke and Noren in Dresden; musicology with Johannes Wolf in Berlin, Sandberger and Kroyer in Munich; Dr. phil., 1917. He became instructor at Hanover; also wrote music criticism; from 1945 lived in Salzburg. He publ. Musik in Frankreich (1927); ed. works by G. Benda ('Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' vol. 64), Telemann ('Das Erbe deutscher Musik' vol. 6), and others; composed 2 symphonies; 2 string quartets; choruses.

Werrekoren (Verecoren, Werrecore), Hermann Mathias, 16th-century German composer. He was maestro di cappella in Milan (1538-55); his principal work is a descriptive composition for 4 voices a cappella entitled Die Schlacht vor Pavia (The Battle of Pavia), publ. in Schmeltzl's collection 'Guter seltzamer . . . deutscher Gesang . . .' (Nuremberg, 1544) and reprinted by Gardano in Venice in 1549 as La Battaglia Taliana; also publ. a book of motets for 4 voices (1555); various other motets were publ. in the collections of the period. Werrekoren was mistakenly identified with Matthäus Le Maistre by Fétis and Kade; research by Haberl, Elsa Bienenfeld, and Cecie Stainer demonstrated the fallacy of this assumption. —Cf. Haberl's articles in the 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (1871 and 1873); Elsa Bienenfeld in the 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1904-05).

Werrenrath, Reinald, American baritone; b. Brooklyn, Aug. 7, 1883; d. Plattsburg, N.Y., Sept. 12, 1953. He was a pupil of his father, a tenor; then studied with David Bispham and Herbert Witherspoon. He began his career as a concert singer; also in oratorio; made his operatic debut on Feb. 19, 1919, at the Metropolitan Opera House, N.Y., as Silvio in I Pagliacci, and remained with the company until 1921; then devoted himself to teaching and concert singing; appeared in public for the last time at Carnegie Hall, N.Y., on Oct. 23, 1952. He edited 'Modern Scandinavian Songs' (2 vols.; Boston, 1925-26). He was married 3 times: to Ada Peterson (1909; divorced, 1927); to Verna True Nidig (1928; divorced, 1941); and to Frances M. Aston (1942).

Wersén, Louis G., American music educator; b. LaConner, Wash., Aug. 18, 1905. He took his B.A. in music at the State College of Washington (1927); M.A. (1938); Mus. Doc. at Waynesburg, Pa., College (1954); held numerous teaching posts in California; head of music education dept. of College of Puget Sound (1938-44); director, Division of Music Education, Philadelphia Public Schools (1944-55); conducted high school orchestras in Philadelphia and Urbana, Ill.; publ. Rhythmic Foundation Through Drumming; co-author of various songbooks.

Wert, Giaches de (Jakob van Wert), Flemish contrapuntist; b. Weert, between May 6 and Aug. 18, 1535; d. Mantua, May 6, 1596. He was a boy chorister in the retinue of Maria di Cardona, Marchesa della Padulla, and followed the household to Italy. At the age of 9 he entered the ducal choir at Novellara; while still a youth he joined the court chapel of the Duke of Mantua, who appointed him maestro di cappella in 1565. He held this position until his death, with an interval as vice-maestro at Novellara (1567-74); from 1565 to 1583 was also choirmaster of the Church of Santa Barbara in Mantua. He was a very industrious composer, and greatly esteemed by contemporary musicians; Palestrina praised him, and he was also mentioned favorably by Thomas Morley, Artusi, G. B. Doni, and Monteverdi. His compositions were included in many collections of sacred and secular music, beginning in 1558. He publ. 11 books of madrigals for 5 voices, one for 4 voices, and one for 5 and 6 voices; one book of canzonets, and 3 of motets for 5 and 6 voices; many other works are preserved in MS in European libraries. Modern reprints are found in S. Smith's 'Musica antiqua,' vol. I; Dehn's 'Sammlung älterer Musik,' vol. VI; Barclay Squire's 'Ausgewählte Madrigale,' No. 40; and Wüllner's 'Chorübungen' (new ed. by E. Schwickerath, Munich, 1931). —Cf. A.-M. Bautier-Regnier, Jacques de Wert, in the 'Revue Belge de Musicologie' (1950, nos. 1-2); G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N.Y., 1954; pp. 408-11); C. MacClintock, Some Notes on the Secular Music of Giaches de Wert, in 'Musica Disciplina' (vol. 10; 1956).

Wesembeck. See Burbure de Wesembeck.

Wesendonk, Mathilde (née Luckemeyer), German poetess, friend of Wagner; b. Elberfeld, Dec. 23, 1828; d. at her villa Traumblick, near Altmünster on the Traunsee, Austria, Aug. 31, 1902. Her first meeting with Wagner took place in Zürich, early in 1852, and soon developed into a deep friendship. She wrote the famous Fünf Gedichte (Der Engel, Stehe still, Träume, Schmerzen, Im Treibhaus), which Wagner set to music as studies for Tristan und Isolde. On May 19, 1848, she married Otto Wesendonk (b. March 16, 1815; d. Berlin, Nov. 18, 1896); in 1857 he gave Wagner the use of a beautiful house on his estate on Lake Zürich, where the 1st act of Tristan und Isolde was written, and the 2nd act sketched. —Cf. A. Heintz, Meine Erinnerungen (reminiscences of Mathilde Wesendonk), in the 'Allgemeine Musikzeitung' (Feb. 14, 1896); W. Golther, ed.,

Richard Wagner an Mathilde Wesendonk. Tagebuchblätter und Briefe (Berlin, 1904; many subsequent eds.; English transl., London, 1905); W. Golther, ed., Briefe Richard Wagners an Otto Wesendonk (Berlin, 8th printing, 1905; English transl., London, 1911); H. Béclart, Richard Wagners Liebes-tragödie mit Mathilde Wesendonk (Dresden, 1912); E. H. Müller von Asow, ed., Johannes Brahms und Mathilde Wesendonk; ein Briefwechsel (Vienna, 1943).

Wesley, Charles, English organist and harpsichord player; nephew of John Wesley; b. Bristol, Dec. 11, 1757; d. London, May 23, 1834. He was a pupil of Kelway and Boyce in London; then held various positions as church organist; publ. 'Six Concertos for the Organ or Harpsichord,' op. 1; anthems, hymns, etc.; 6 string quartets. He was the brother and teacher of Samuel Wesley. —Cf. R. Green, Works of John and Charles Wesley—A Bibliography (London, 1896).

Wesley, John, the founder of the Wesleyan Methodist Church; b. Epworth, June 17, 1703; d. London, March 2, 1791. He was educated at Christ Church, Oxford; in 1735 he came to America with his brother Charles to do missionary work, and 2 years later publ. his 1st 'Collection of Psalms and Hymns' (Charlestown, 1737). Returning to England, he spread the doctrine of Methodism and became famous as a preacher and writer. He has been called 'the father of Methodist hymnology.' —Cf. R. Green, Works of John and Charles Wesley—A Bibliography (London, 1896); J. T. Lightwood, Methodist Music in the 18th Century (London, 1927); J. L. Nuelsen, John Wesley und das deutsche Kirchenlied (Bremen, 1938).

Wesley, Samuel, English organist and composer; brother of Charles Wesley; nephew of John Wesley; b. Bristol, Feb. 24, 1766; d. London, Oct. 11, 1837. He studied with his brother, and began to compose at the age of 8; learned to play the violin as well as the organ. He publ. Eight Lessons for the Harpsichord when he was 11 (1777). Subsequently he developed his fine talent as an organist, and was generally regarded as the greatest performer and improviser of his time. Although he suffered from a skull injury as a result of a fall, which seriously interfered with his activities, he continued to give public concerts till the year of his death. He was an earnest student of the works of Bach, and did much to make them known in England. He wrote 11 organ concertos; voluntaries, preludes, and fugues for organ; 4 symphonies;

4 overtures; 2 string quartets; a string quintet; a trio for oboe, violin, and cello; a trio for 2 flutes and piano; much church music, including 4 Masses, motets, several services, anthems, and psalm-tunes; choral pieces; songs; vocal duets; a number of rondos for piano, based on popular songs and on operatic arias; also numerous glees, for 3 and 4 voices. —Cf. W. Winters, An Account of the Remarkable Musical Talents of Several Members of the Wesley Family (London, 1874); E. Wesley (his daughter), Letters of Samuel Wesley to Mr. Jacobs . . . relating to the Introduction into this Country of the Works of Bach (London, 1875; 2nd ed., 1878); G. J. Stevenson, Memorials of the Wesley Family (London, 1876); J. T. Lightwood, Samuel Wesley, Musician: The Story of His Life (London, 1937).

Wesley, Samuel Sebastian, English organist and composer; natural son of Samuel Wesley; b. London, Aug. 14, 1810; d. Gloucester, April 19, 1876. He was a boy chorister at the Chapel Royal; from the age of 16 he held appointments as organist in London churches; 1832, organist of Hereford Cathedral; 1835, at Exeter Cathedral; 1842, at Leeds Parish Church; 1849, at Winchester Cathedral; 1865, at Gloucester Cathedral. He received the degrees of B. Mus. and D. Mus. at Oxford (1839). His works include 4 church services; 2 psalms; 27 anthems; several glees; an Ode to Labour (1864); pieces for organ; and songs. He publ. A Few Words on Cathedral Music and the Musical System of the Church, with a Plan of Reform (1849). —Cf. G. J. Stevenson, Memorials of the Wesley Family (London, 1876).

Wessel, Mark, American composer and teacher; b. Coldwater, Mich., March 26, 1894. He studied at Northwestern Univ. (Mus. Bac., 1917; Mus. M., 1918), and with Schoenberg in Vienna (1922); was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1930; also won a Pulitzer Scholarship. Returning to America, he became instructor at Northwestern Univ.; then was appointed to the faculty of the Univ. of Colorado. —Works: Symphonic Concertante, for horn, piano, and orch. (1929); symphony (1932); Holiday, for orch. (1932); Song and Dance, for orch. (1932); 2 piano concertos; concertino, for flute and chamber orch. (1928); Ballade, for violin, oboe, and string orch. (1931); sextet, for flute, oboe, horn, bassoon, clarinet, and piano (1928); violin sonata (1930); piano trio (1931); string quartet (1931); Plains and Mountains, for piano and string quartet (1937); 2 cello sonatas (1937, 1943); a sonatina for trumpet and piano (1942); piano pieces.

West, John Ebenezer, English organist and composer; b. London, Dec. 7, 1863; d. there, Feb. 28, 1929. He was a nephew of Ebenezer Prout, and studied with him at the Royal Academy of Music; was organist and choir-master at various London churches; in 1884 was appointed to the editorial staff of Novello & Co. He wrote 2 cantatas, The Healing of the Canaanite's Daughter (1882) and Seed-time and Harvest (1892); several church services and anthems; an orchestral march, Victoria, Our Queen; organ music; publ. an important book, Cathedral Organists (London, 1899; new ed., 1921).

Westbrook, William Joseph, English organist and composer; b. London, Jan. 1, 1831; d. Sydenham, March 24, 1894. He was organist at several churches in London; in 1851 appointed to St. Bartholomew's, Sydenham, and held this post until his death. In 1862 he founded the periodical, 'Musical Standard' (with Hammond and Crowdy). He wrote an oratorio, Jesus; a cantata, The Lord Is My Shepherd; services, anthems, part-songs; sonatas and voluntaries for organ; several textbooks on the organ, etc.

Westergaard, Peter, American composer and teacher; b. Champaign, Ill., May 28, 1931. He studied at Harvard Univ. with Walter Piston (A.B., 1953) and at Princeton, with Roger Sessions (M.F.A., 1956); received a John Knowles Paine Travelling Fellowship (1953-54) and a Fulbright Student Grant (1956-57); was Fulbright Guest Lecturer at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Freiburg-im-Breisgau, Germany (1958); then appointed instructor, Columbia Univ. —Works: 2 cantatas: The Plot Against the Giant, to words by Wallace Stevens (1957), and A Refusal to Mourn the Death, by Fire, of a Child in London, to words by Dylan Thomas (1958); 5 Sätze für kleines Orchester (1958); chamber music.

Westerhout, Niccolò van. See Van Westerhout.

Westlake, Frederick, English pianist and composer; b. Romsey, Hampshire, Feb. 25, 1840; d. London, Feb. 12, 1898. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music with W. Macfarren (piano) and G. A. Macfarren (harmony); in 1862 was appointed to the faculty as piano teacher. He wrote several Masses, hymns, piano pieces, and a collection of part-songs, Lyra Studentium.

Westmorland, John Fane, Earl of (Lord Burghersh), English composer; b. London, Feb. 3, 1784; d. Apthorpe House, Northants, Oct. 16, 1859. He was in the British Army, fought in the Spanish campaign and in Egypt, attaining the rank of general in 1854; also occupied various diplomatic posts between wars. He studied music in Lisbon with Marcos Portugal (1809-12); was a founder of the Royal Academy of Music in London (1822). He wrote 7 Italian operas; the following were performed at his own palace in Florence (where he served as British Resident): Fedra (Nov. 17, 1824); L'Eroe di Lancastro (June 13, 1829); Lo Scompiglio teatrale (1830). Other works include several church services; some piano music; also a Sinfonia in D for orch. A list of his works is found in W. W. Cazelet's The History of the Royal Academy of Music (London, 1854).

Westphal, Rudolf (Georg Hermann), notable German music scholar; b. Oberkirchen, July 3, 1826; d. Stadthagen, July 11, 1892. He was a student of classical philology in Marburg; taught at the Univ. of Breslau (1858-62); then went to Moscow as teacher at a lyceum (1875-80); subsequently lived in Leipzig, Bückeburg, and Stadthagen. He wrote numerous learned papers on Greek music, and maintained that the Greeks employed polyphony, a theory that he himself eventually abandoned as untenable. —Writings: Metrik der griechischen Dramatiker und Lyriker (with Rossbach; 3 vols., 1854-65; 3rd ed. as Theorie der musischen Künste der Hellenen, 1885-89); Die Fragmente und Lehrsätze der griechischen Rhythmiker (1861); System der antiken Rhythmik (1865); Geschichte der alten und mittelalterlichen Musik (1865; unfinished; includes Plutarch über die Musik, 1864); Theorie der neuhochdeutschen Metrik (1870; 2nd ed., 1877); Elemente des musikalischen Rhythmus mit besonderer Rücksicht auf unsre Opernmusik (1872); Allgemeine Theorie der musikalischen Rhythmik seit J. S. Bach (1880); Die Musik des griechischen Altertums (1883); Allgemeine Metrik der indo-germanischen und semitischen Völker auf Grundlage der vergleichenden Sprachwissenschaft (1892; with addendum by R. Kruse, Der griechische Hexameter in der deutschen Nachdichtung); and Metrik und Rhythmik des klassischen Hellenentums, 2 vols. (1883-93). —Cf. H. Riemann, Handbuch der Musikgeschichte, Vol. I (1904).

Westrup, Jack Allan, English musicologist; b. London, July 26, 1904. He received his education at Dulwich College, London, and Balliol College, Oxford (B. Mus., 1926; M.A., 1929; D. Mus., 1944); assistant master at Dulwich College (1928-34); then became music critic of the London 'Daily Telegraph' (1934-39); editor of the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (1933-45). He was prof. of music at Birmingham Univ. (1944-47); in 1947 appointed prof. of music at Oxford Univ., succeeding Sir Hugh Allen. He edited Monteverdi's Orfeo (1925) and L'Incoronazione di Poppea (1927); is chairman of the editorial board of the New Oxford History of Music, to which he has contributed; publ. Purcell, in the 'Master Musicians' series (London, 1937); Handel (London, 1938) and Liszt (London, 1940), in the Novello series; Sharps and Flats, essays (London, 1940); British Music (London, 1943; new ed., 1949); An Introduction to Musical History (London, 1955). Edited Ernest Walker's A History of Music in England (3rd ed., Oxford, 1952).

Wettergren (née Palson), Gertrud, Swedish contralto; b. Eslöv, Feb. 17, 1897. She studied at the Stockholm Cons., and later in London; made her operatic début at the Royal Opera in Stockholm, 1922, and remained on its roster for 10 years. On Dec. 20, 1935, she appeared at the Metropolitan Opera House, as Amneris in Aida; remained with that company until the season of 1937-38; also sang with the Chicago City Opera (1936-38); made guest appearances at Covent Garden, London (1936 and 1939). She then returned to Sweden, as singer to the court. In 1925 she married Erik Wettergren (director of the National Museum of Stockholm).

Wetz, Richard, German composer and teacher; b. Gleiwitz, Feb. 26, 1875; d. Erfurt, Jan. 16, 1935. He studied with R. Hofmann in Leipzig and Thuille in Munich; in 1906 went to Erfurt as choral conductor and teacher; also taught in Weimar. He composed an opera, Das ewige Feuer (Düsseldorf, March 19, 1907); a Kleist-Ouverture; Traum-sommernacht, for women's chorus and orch.; Gesang des Lebens, for male chorus and orch.; Nicht geboren ist das Beste, for mixed chorus and orch.; Hyperion, for baritone solo, chorus, and orch.; about 100 songs. He publ. monographs on Bruckner (1922), Liszt (1925), and Beethoven (1927; 2nd ed., 1933). A Richard Wetz Society was founded in Gleiwitz in 1943. —Cf. G. Armin, Die Lieder von Richard Wetz (Leipzig, 1911); E. L. Schellenberg, Richard Wetz (Leipzig, 1911; 2nd ed., 1914); H. Polack, Richard Wetz. Sein Werk (Leipzig, 1935).

Wetzel, Justus Hermann, German composer and musicologist; b. Kyritz, March 11, 1879. He studied natural sciences, philosophy, and history of art (Dr. phil., 1901); then took up music, and was teacher at the Riemann Cons. in Stettin (1905-07); settled in Berlin in 1910; taught at the Academy for Church- and School-Music (from 1925; prof., 1935). He composed about 400 songs; choral works; chamber music; piano pieces; edited and arranged several collections of German songs; publ. an analysis of Beethoven's violin sonatas; other publications are Zur psychologischen Begründung des Rhythmus, in the 'Riemann-Festschrift' (1909); Elementartheorie der Musik (Leipzig, 1911); Die Liedformen, in Martens' Musikalische Formen in historischen Reihen (1931); etc. — Cf. F. Welter, Justus Hermann Wetzel (Berlin, 1931; with list of works).

Wetzler, Hermann Hans, German-American conductor and composer; b. Frankfurt, Sept. 8, 1870; d. New York, May 29, 1943. He was brought to the U.S. as a child, but in 1882 returned to Germany, where he studied at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt with Clara Schumann (piano), Iwan Knorr (counterpoint), and Humperdinck (instrumentation). In 1892 he came to N.Y.; was church organist for several years; in 1903 he established the Wetzler Symph. Concerts, which had considerable success; Richard Strauss conducted a series of 4 concerts of his own works with the Wetzler group (Feb.-March, 1904), including the world premiere of the Sinfonia Domestica. In 1905 Wetzler went to Europe again; conducted opera in Hamburg (until 1908), Elberfeld (1908-09), Riga (1909-13), Halle (1913-15), Lübeck (1915-19), Cologne (1919-23); remained in Cologne until 1930; then went to Basel; returned to the U.S. in 1940. He composed an opera, Die baskische Venus (Leipzig, Nov. 18, 1928); incidental music to Shakespeare's As You Like It (1917); a symph. suite, Visions (1923); Assisi, legend for orch. written in commemoration of the 700th anniversary of the death of St. Francis of Assisi (won a prize of $1,000 in a competition sponsored by the Chicago North Shore Festival Association, Evanston, Ill.; 1925; first performed there, May 30, 1925); Symphonic Dance in Basque Style (1927; from his opera Die baskische Venus); Symphonie Concertante, for violin and orch. (1932); chamber music; choral works; songs. Publ. Wege zur Musik, a collection of his lectures (Zürich, 1938).

Weweler (vĕh'-vĕh-lĕhr), August, German composer; b. Reike, Oct. 20, 1868; d. Detmold, Dec. 8, 1952. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Jadassohn and others; in 1898 settled in Detmold as a teacher. — Works: the operas Dornröschen (Kassel, 1903) and Der grobe Märker (Detmold, 1908); the oratorio Die Sintflut (Detmold, 1914); a ballet, Des Malers Traumbild; Sankt Hubertus, Vom Bäuerlein, das Alles in Gold verwandelte, and Frau Musika in Freud und Leid for declamation with chorus and piano; male choruses and piano pieces. Author of Ave Musica! Das Wesen der Tonkunst und die modernen Bestrebungen (1913; 2nd ed., 1919).

Weymarn, Pavel Platonovitch, Russian writer on music and composer; b. St. Petersburg, 1857; d. Narva, Sept. 22, 1905. He studied piano and theory at the St. Petersburg Cons.; in 1888-90 edited the music periodical 'Bayan'; publ. monographs on Napravnik (1889) and Cui (1897); was music critic for several Russian newspapers; collaborated in the Russian edition of Riemann's Musik-Lexikon (1904). He composed a string quartet and some piano pieces and songs.

Weyrauch (vī'-rowh), August Heinrich von, German song composer; b. Riga, April 30, 1788; date of death unknown. In 1824 he publ. (under his own name) a song, Nach Osten (words by Wetzel). About 1840 an anonymous Paris publisher reprinted it, with Schubert's name on the title page, as Adieu (French words by Bélanger); a piano transcription of it, also crediting the authorship to Schubert, was published by Döhler in Germany (1843); Schlesinger of Berlin reprinted the song, with a German transl. of the French text, as Schubert's in 1845; since then it has been reprinted many times, as Schubert's, by European and American publishers. — Cf. G. Nottebohm, Thematisches Verzeichnis der im Druck erschienenen Werke von Franz Schubert (Vienna, 1874; p. 254).

Weyse (vī'-sē), Christoph Ernst Friedrich, German-Danish composer; b. Altona, March 5, 1774; d. Copenhagen, Oct. 8, 1842. He was a pupil of his grandfather, a cantor at Altona; in 1789 he went to Copenhagen, where he studied with J. A. P. Schulz. In 1794 he was appointed organist at the Reformed Church; in 1805 became organist at the Fruekirke; in 1819 appointed court composer. Through the court conductor Kunzen he became interested in a movement for the establishment of a national school of Danish opera, for which his works (together with those of Kuhlau) effectively prepared the way. — Works: operas (all performed in Copenhagen): Sovedrikken (The Sleeping-Potion; April 21, 1809); Faruk (Jan. 30, 1812); Ludlams Hule (Ludlam's Cave; Jan. 30, 1816); Floribella (Jan. 29, 1825); Eventyr i Rosenborg Have (Adventure in Rosenborg Gardens; May 26, 1827); Balders Død (The Death of Baldur; Nov. 23, 1832); Festen paa Kenilworth (after Walter Scott; Jan. 6, 1836); about 30 cantatas; Miserere for double chorus and orch.; Te Deum for chorus and orch.; 4 symphonies; preludes and fugues for organ; piano pieces (including sonatas and études); songs. He collected 100 Danish folksongs, of which he harmonized 59; they were published by his pupil A. P. Berggreen as '100 gamle Kæmpevisemelodier' ('Old Ballad Melodies'). — Cf. A. P. Berggreen, C. E. F. Weyse's Biographie (Danish; Copenhagen, 1876); R. von Liliencron, Weyse und die dänische Musik seit dem vorigen Jahrhundert, in Raumer-Riehl's Historisches Taschenbuch (Leipzig, 1878); W. Behrend, Weyse und Kuhlau, in Die Musik (III, 22; 1904); J. P. Larsen, Weyses Romancer og Sange (Copenhagen, 1944).

White, Clarence Cameron, American Negro violinist and composer; b. Clarksville, Tenn., Aug. 10, 1880. He studied at the Oberlin Cons.; in London with Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, and in Paris with Laparra; won the Harmon Foundation Award and the Rosenwald Foundation Fellowship for composition; also the David Bispham Medal, for his opera Ouanga, to a libretto from a Haitian historic episode (1930-32; selections performed in Chicago, Nov. 13, 1932). His Elegy for orch. won the 1954 Benjamin Award for 'tranquil music' (New Orleans, March 16, 1954). He held various positions as violinist, in Boston and elsewhere; publ. technical exercises for violin; also American Negro Folk Songs (1928).

White, Eric Walter, English writer on music; b. Bristol, Sept. 10, 1905. He studied at Balliol College at Oxford; was a member of the Secretariat of the League of Nations (1929-33) and subsequently of the National Council of Social Service, London (1935-42), of the Council for the Encouragement of Music and Arts, London (1942-46), and of the Arts Council of Great Britain (from 1946). — Books: Stravinsky's Sacrifice to Apollo (London, 1930); Stravinsky (London, 1947); Benjamin Britten (London, 1948; new ed., 1954); The Rise of English Opera (London, 1951).

White, Felix Harold, English composer; b. London, April 27, 1884; d. there, Jan. 31, 1945. He was entirely self-taught, except for some piano lessons from his mother. His overture Shylock was performed in London in 1907; other works for orch. include the symph. poems Astarte Syriaca and The Deserted Village, a polonaise, 2 rhapsodies, etc.; he also wrote chamber music, choral works, about 250 songs, 60 part-songs, 80 piano pieces, etc. He publ. a Dictionary of Musical Terms; edited piano works of Scriabin for the Belaieff publ. firm.

White, John, American organist and composer; b. West Springfield, Mass., March 12, 1855; d. Bad Nauheim, July 18, 1902. He studied organ with Dudley Buck in N.Y. and August Haupt in Berlin; composition with Rheinberger in Munich. He was organist of the Church of the Ascension, N.Y., from 1887 to 1896; then went back to Germany. He publ. a Missa solennis, a Requiem, a Te Deum; many Latin hymns for mixed chorus a cappella; and an oratorio, Alpha and Omega.

White, Mary Louisa, English composer and teacher; b. Sheffield, Sept. 2, 1866; d. London, Jan., 1935. She studied in London and dedicated herself to teaching music to beginners; developed the 'Letterless Method' for this purpose. She wrote several children's operettas (Beauty and the Beast, The Babes in the Woods); also piano pieces (some for 4 hands); songs.

White, Maude Valérie, English composer; b. Dieppe, France (of English parents), June 23, 1855; d. London, Nov. 2, 1937. She studied with W. S. Rockstro; entered the Royal Academy of Music in 1876, was elected Mendelssohn Scholar in 1879 (the first woman to win this honor), then continued her studies under Sir G. Macfarren; later with R. Fuchs in Vienna. She traveled extensively through Europe and South America; lived in London, and for some years in Florence. She wrote a number of attractive songs to English, German, French, and Italian texts; a vocal quintet to Heine's poem, Du bist wie eine Blume; an album of piano pieces, Pictures from Abroad; Naissance d'amour, for cello and piano; etc. Publ. her memoirs, Friends and Memories (London, 1914) and My Indian Summer (London, 1932).

White, Paul, American composer, violinist, and conductor; b. Bangor, Maine, Aug. 22, 1895. He studied at the New England Cons. of Music with Chadwick; then went to Cincinnati, where he studied violin with Eugène Ysaÿe, at that time conductor of the Cincinnati Symph. Orch.; White then returned to Boston as violin teacher (1921-23); then went to Rochester as a member of the Rochester Philharmonic; studied conducting with Eugene Goossens; in 1929 was appointed associate conductor of the Rochester Civic Orch. — Works: for orch.: Variations (Bangor, April 20, 1925); symph. No. 1 (Rochester, March 28, 1934); Pagan Festival Overture (Rochester, April 28, 1936); Four Spokes from the Hub (Boston Pops, June 18, 1938); Lake Spray (Rochester, Nov. 22, 1939); College Caprice (1939); Sea Chanty, for harp and strings (Rochester, March 4, 1942); Lake Placid Scenes (1943); Idyl (1944); Andante and Rondo, for cello and orch. (1945); chamber music: a string quartet (1925); a violin sonata (1926); Fantastic Dance, for woodwinds (1922); also 5 Miniatures for piano, including the popular Mosquito Dance (also for orch.).

White, Robert, one of the most important English composers of the 16th century; b. c. 1530; d. London, Nov., 1574. He studied music for several years, obtaining the degree of Mus. Bac. at Cambridge Univ. on Dec. 13, 1560; appointed Master of the choristers at Ely Cathedral in 1561, retaining this post until 1565; then master of the choristers at Westminster Abbey, from 1570. He composed Latin services and motets, English anthems, etc. — Modern eds. and a biography are found in 'Tudor Church Music' vol. V (1926).

White, William, English composer of the 17th century; d. c. 1660. He wrote music for viols; most of his MSS are preserved at Oxford. He wrote fantasies, pavans, and other court dance tunes. Apparently he was held in some esteem, for his name is mentioned by Simpson in his Principles of Practicle Musick (1665); also by Thomas Mace, in Musick's Monument (1676).

Whitehill, Clarence Eugene, American bass; b. Marengo, Iowa, Nov. 5, 1871; d. New York, Dec. 19, 1932. He studied with H.D. Phelps in Chicago; earned his living as a clerk in an express office, and also sang in churches; then went to Paris in 1896, where he studied with Giraudet and Sbriglia; he was the first American male singer to be engaged at the Opéra-Comique (1900); then was a member of Henry Savage's 'Grand English Opera Co.' at the Metropolitan Opera House in the autumn of 1900; went for further study to Stockhausen in Frankfurt, and from there to Bayreuth, where he studied the entire Wagner repertory with Cosima Wagner; after engagements in Germany, he became a member of the Cologne Opera (1903-08); then at the Metropolitan Opera House (1909-10); with the Chicago Opera Co. (1911-15), and again with the Metropolitan Opera (1914-32).

Whitehouse, William Edward, English cellist; b. London, May 20, 1859; d. there, Jan. 12, 1935. He first studied violin; then turned to the cello; was a pupil of Piatti at the Royal Academy of Music (1877-81); joined its faculty in 1882; also held teaching posts at Cambridge Univ. and other educational institutions. In 1889 he formed the London Trio with Achille Simonetti (violin) and Amina Goodwin (piano); toured with it in England, France, and Italy until its dissolution in 1904. He was an eminent teacher; among his pupils were Felix Salmond and Beatrice Harrison. He wrote a number of pieces for cello and piano (Allegro perpetuo, Gedanken, Remembrance, Serenade, etc.) and edited much 18th-century cello music. Publ. Recollections of a Violoncellist (London, 1930).

Whiteman, Paul, American conductor of popular music; b. Denver, Col., March 28, 1890, where his father was supervisor of music for the public schools. Played viola in the Denver Symph. Orch. and later in the San Francisco People's Symph. Orch.; in 1917-18 he was conductor of a 40-piece band in the U. S. Navy. He then formed a hotel orch. in Santa Barbara, Calif., and began to develop a style of playing known as 'symphonic jazz,' which soon made him famous. On Feb. 12, 1924, he gave a concert in Acolian Hall, N. Y., at which he introduced Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, written for his orch. He gave other concerts throughout the U. S. and in 1926 made a tour in Europe. He established the Whiteman Awards, made annually for 'symphonic jazz' compositions written by Americans. Author of a book on Jazz (with M. M. McBride; N. Y., 1926), How to Be a Bandleader (with L. Lieber; N. Y., 1941), and Records for the Millions (N. Y., 1948).

Whithorne, Emerson, American composer; b. Cleveland, Sept. 6, 1884; d. Lyme, Conn., March 25, 1958. His name was Whittorn; he had it legally changed in 1918 to Whithorne (the original family name of his paternal grandfather). He studied in Cleveland with J. H. Rogers; embarked on a musical career at the age of 15, and appeared as pianist on the Chautauqua circuit for 2 seasons. In 1904 he went to Vienna and took lessons with Leschetizky (piano) and Robert Fuchs (composition). From 1905-07 he was a pupil of Artur Schnabel. In 1907 he married Ethel Leginska (q.v.), acting as her impresario in Germany until 1909; they were separated in 1912, and divorced in 1916. Between 1907 and 1915, Whithorne lived mainly in London as music critic; studied Chinese and Japanese music from materials in the British Museum, and wrote several pieces based on oriental tunes (Adventures of a Samurai; settings for The Yellow Jacket; The Typhoon). Returning to America, he became editor for the Art Publication Society of St. Louis, Mo. (1915-20); then settled in N. Y., and devoted himself entirely to composition; was active as a member of the League of Composers, N. Y. In his music, he assumed a militantly modernistic attitude; wrote several pieces in the fashionable 'machine music' style.—Works: for orch.: The Rain (Detroit, Feb. 22, 1913); The Aeroplane (Birmingham, England, Jan. 30, 1926; orchestral version of the piano piece written in 1920, one of the earliest examples of 'machine music'); Saturday's Child, to poems by Countess Cullen, for mezzo-soprano, tenor, and small orch. (N. Y., March 13, 1926); New York Days and Nights (Philadelphia, July 30, 1926; originally for piano); Poem for piano and orch. (Chicago, Feb. 4, 1927); Fata Morgana, symph. poem (N. Y., Oct. 11, 1928); incidental music to Eugene O'Neill's Marco Millions (1928); symph. No. 1 (1929; Cincinnati, Jan. 12, 1934); The Dream Pedlar, symph. poem (Los Angeles, Jan. 15, 1931); violin concerto (Chicago, Nov. 12, 1931); Fandango (N. Y., April 19, 1932); Moon Trail, symph. poem (Boston, Dec. 15, 1933); symph. No. 2 (Cincinnati, March 19, 1937); Sierra Morena (N. Y., May 7, 1938); also a piano quintet (N. Y., Dec. 19, 1926) and other chamber music, piano pieces, songs.—Cf. J. T. Howard, Emerson Whithorne (N. Y., 1929); R. Hammond, Emerson Whithorne, in 'Modern Music' (Jan.-Feb., 1931).

Whiting, Arthur Battelle, American composer and pianist; nephew of George E. Whiting; b. Cambridge, Mass., June 20, 1861; d. Beverly, Mass., July 20, 1936. He studied in Boston with Sherwood (piano), Maas (harmony), and Chadwick (composition). In 1883 he went to Munich for 2 years and took courses at the Cons. there with Rheinberger (composition) and others. He then lived in Boston until 1895, when he settled in N. Y.; from 1907, gave educational chamber music concerts at Yale, Harvard, Princeton, and Columbia; in 1911, inaugurated a series of concerts of early music, playing the harpsichord, other artists being Constance Edson (violin), Georges Barrère (flute), and Paul Kéfer (viola da gamba). He contributed papers on music to the 'Yale Review' and other publications.—Works: Concert Overture (Boston, Feb. 5, 1886); piano concerto (Boston, Nov. 16, 1888, composer soloist); Fantasia, for piano and orch. (Boston, March 5, 1897; composer soloist); suite for strings and 4 horns (Boston, March 13, 1891); The Golden Cage—A Dance Pageant, for small orch. (1926); a piano quintet; a string quartet; a piano trio; a violin sonata; etc.; a number of piano pieces: 6 Bagatelles, Suite moderne, 3 Characteristic Waltzes; also Melodious Technical Studies; Pianoforte Pedal Studies (with text in English and German); 3 songs for soprano, to poems by Christina Rossetti; Barrack Room Ballads (Kipling) for baritone; musical settings from the Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám for baritone; anthems; etc.—Cf. R. Hughes, Contemporary American Composers (Boston, 1900; pp. 283-91); D. G. Mason, Arthur Whiting, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1937); D. G. Mason, Music in My Time (N. Y., 1938, pp. 65-80). See also 'National Encyclopedia of American Biography' (vol. XXVII, pp. 46-47).

Whiting, George Elbridge, American organist and composer; b. Holliston, Mass., Sept. 14, 1840; d. Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 14, 1923. He began to study with his brother Amos, a church organist, and played in public at the age of 13; at 17 he became organist of the North Congregational Church at Hartford; studied with George W. Morgan in N.Y.; then went to England, where he became a pupil of W. T. Best of Liverpool (1863). Returning to America, he became organist at St. Joseph's in Albany, where the famous soprano Emma Albani sang in his choir. He then moved to Boston, where he was organist at King's Chapel; in 1874, he went to Berlin and studied harmony with Haupt and orchestration with Radecke. Settling finally in Boston, he taught the organ at the New England Cons. (until 1879, and again from 1883 to 1897). In the interim he was a teacher at the Cincinnati College of Music (1880-83). He was renowned as a teacher and composer of organ music; publ. The Organist (Boston, 1870) and The First 6 Months on the Organ (1871). He also wrote many sacred works: 2 Masses; Vesper Services; a Te Deum; the secular cantatas The Tale of the Viking, Dream Pictures, March of the Monks of Bangor, Midnight, Henry of Navarre; the 1-act opera Lenora, to an Italian libretto (1893); a symph.; an overture to Tennyson's The Princess; a piano concerto; a suite for cello and orch.; piano pieces; songs. —Cf. L. C. Elson, The History of American Music (N. Y., 1904; pp. 265-67).

Whitmer, Thomas Carl, American organist and composer; b. Altoona, Pa., June 24, 1873. He studied piano with C. Jarvis, organ with S. P. Warren, and composition with W. W. Gilchrist. He was director of the School of Music, Stephens College, Columbia, Mo. (1899-1909); director of music at the Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburgh (1909-16); organist and choirmaster of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh (1916-32); then taught privately in N. Y.; 1953, living at La Grangeville, N. Y. He publ. The Way of My Heart and Mind (Pittsburgh, 1920) and The Art of Improvisation: A Handbook of Principles and Methods (N. Y., 1934; revised ed., 1941). —Compositions: Poem of Life, for piano and orch. (1914); A Syrian Night, ballet suite for orch. (Philadelphia Orch., Pittsburgh, Feb. 17, 1919); When God Laughed, for chorus a cappella (1932); Radiations over a 13th Century Theme, for string orch. (1935); Supper at Emmaus, choral suite (Pittsburgh, Feb. 21, 1939); cantata, Chant Me the Poem that Comes from the Soul of America, after Walt Whitman (Pittsburgh, Feb. 19, 1942); 1-act opera, Oh, Isabel (1951); chamber music; piano pieces; songs.

Whitney, Myron William, American bass singer; b. Ashby, Mass., Sept. 5, 1836; d. Sandwich, Mass., Sept. 19, 1910. He was a pupil of E. H. Frost in Boston, Randegger in London, and Vannucini in Florence. He sang in concert and oratorio in America and Great Britain; was a member of the Boston Ideal Opera Co. (1879) and the American Opera Co. (1885-86); retired in 1900. His son, Myron Whitney, Jr. (1872-1954), a baritone, traveled as joint artist with Melba and Nordica; for many years taught singing at the New England Cons., Boston. —Cf. H. C. Lahee, Famous Singers of Today and Yesterday (Boston, 1898; pp. 322-23).

Whitney, Robert, American conductor; b. Newcastle-on-the-Tyne, England (of an American father and an English mother), July 6, 1904. The family settled in Chicago, where he took music lessons with Rudolph Reuter (piano) and Leo Sowerby (composition); organized a quintet with his four sisters; in 1931, he began to study conducting with Eric De Lamarter; made his debut as conductor in 1932, with the Chicago Civic Orch. In 1937 he was engaged as conductor of the Louisville Philharmonic (later renamed the Louisville Orch.). In 1948, at the suggestion of the Mayor of Louisville, Charles Farnsley, a music lover and champion of modernism, Whitney introduced a policy of presenting a new work at each concert. In April 1953, the Louisville Orch. obtained a grant of $400,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation for commissioning composers to write operatic and symphonic scores; about 130 world premières were given up to 1958, comprising works by foreign as well as American composers (Honegger, Milhaud, Malipiero, Petrassi, Krenck, Dallapiccola, Toch, Chávez, Villa-Lobos, Ginastera, Harris, Schuman, Thomson, Cowell, Piston, Sessions, Anthelil, Creston, Mennin, and others). Among Whitney's own works are Concerto Grosso (1934); a symph. (1936); a Sinfonietta (1939); and Sospiri di Roma for chorus and orch. (1941). —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U.S.A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 248-56).

Whittaker, William Gillies, English choral conductor and composer; b. Newcastle-on-the-Tyne, July 23, 1876; d. Orkney Islands, July 5, 1944. He studied organ and singing; conducted various choral societies in Newcastle and London; in 1929, appointed prof. at the Univ. of Glasgow. He edited North Country Folk Tunes, for voice and piano (2 vols.); Oxford Choral Songs; sonatas of John Blow; church cantatas of Bach; etc.; author of Fugitive Notes on Certain Cantatas and the Motets of J. S. Bach (London, 1924), Class Singing (London, 1925), Collected Essays (London, 1940); publ. Time Exercises for piano; received Carnegie Publication awards for his piano quintet, Among the Northumbrian Hills, and for his A Lyke Wake Dirge, for chorus and orch. (1924); also composed piano pieces and songs.

Whittall, Gertrude Clarke, American patron of music and literature; b. Bellevue, Neb., Oct. 7, 1867. Her maiden name was Clarke; she married Matthew John Whittall on June 4, 1906. In 1935 she donated to the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C., a quartet of Stradivari instruments—2 violins (including the famous 'Betts'), a viola, and a cello—together with 4 Tourte bows; she added another Stradivari violin (the 'Ward') and another Tourte bow in 1937. In 1936 she established an endowment fund in the Library of Congress to provide public concerts at which these instruments would be used, and in 1938 the Whittall Pavilion in the Library was built to house them and to serve other purposes in the musical life of the Library. In subsequent years, she continued to add to her gifts to the Library on behalf of both music and literature; one series enabled the Whittall Foundation to acquire many valuable autograph MSS of composers from Bach to Schoenberg, and in particular the finest single group of Brahms MSS gathered anywhere in the world. —Cf. W. D. Orcutt, The Stradivari Memorial at Washington (Washington, 1938); E. N. Waters, Autograph Musical Scores . . . in the Whittall Foundation Collection (Washington, 1951).

Whittlesey, Walter Rose, American librarian; b. Hartford, Conn., Jan. 5, 1861; d. Washington, D.C., April 9, 1936. Upon the opening of the new building of the Library of Congress (Sept. 1, 1897), he took charge of the musical copyright deposits which formed the basis of the present music collection; when O. G. Sonneck (q.v.) was appointed 1st chief of the Music Division, Whittlesey became his assistant; after Sonneck's resignation (1917) he was acting chief (until Dec. 31, 1921). He retired on June 30, 1932. He publ. Catalogue of First Editions of Stephen C. Foster (1915; with O. G. Sonneck).

Whythorne, Thomas, English song composer; b. c. 1528. He traveled abroad and acquired a liking for Italian (particularly Neapolitan) songs. Upon his return to London, he publ. a collection of 76 songs for 3, 4, and 5 voices, which was one of the earliest sets of secular vocal pieces publ. in England. In 1590 Whythorne brought out another collection, comprising 52 vocal duos. —Cf. Peter Warlock, Thomas Whythorne: an Unknown Elizabethan Composer (Oxford, 1927).

Wichmann, Hermann, German composer; b. Berlin, Oct. 24, 1824; d. Rome, Sept., 1905. He was a pupil of Taubert, Mendelssohn, and Spohr; lived most of his life in Berlin. —Works: 7 string quartets; a string quintet; a piano trio; a violin sonata; several piano sonatas; publ. a collection of essays, Gesammelte Aufsätze (2 vols.; 1884, 1887), and Frohes und Ernstes aus meinem Leben (Leipzig, 1898).

Wichtl, Georg, German violinist and composer; b. Trostberg, Feb. 2, 1805; d. Bunzlau, June 3, 1877. He studied in Munich; was a violinist and conductor in various orchestras in Silesia; wrote an opera, Almaida; an oratorio, Die Auferstehung und Himmelfahrt Jesu; symphonies and overtures; a string quartet; 6 trios for 2 violins and cello; 3 trios for 3 violins; 6 duets for violin and cello; many instructive pieces for violin.

Wickede, Friedrich von, German composer; b. Dömitz-on-Elbe, July 28, 1834; d. Schwerin, Sept. 11, 1904. He studied with J. Vieth; held various government posts; composition was his avocation. He wrote 2 operas, Ingo and Per aspera ad astra; piano pieces; songs (which were praised by the critics).

Wickenhauser, Richard, Austrian composer; b. Brünn, Feb. 7, 1867; d. Vienna, July 1, 1936. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Jadassohn and Paul; won a state stipend in 1894 (awarded by Brahms and Hanslick); conducted choral societies in Brünn, Graz, and Vienna; from 1907 was conductor of the Vienna Singakademie. He publ. Sang fahrender Schüler for male chorus and orch.; a suite for string orch.; a violin sonata; a cello sonata; 10 Choralvorspiele for organ; numerous male choruses a cappella and songs; also Anton Bruckners Symphonien (Leipzig, 1927).

Wickham, Florence, American contralto singer; b. Beaver, Pa., 1882. She studied in Philadelphia; then went to Germany, where she was a pupil of Franz Emerich in Berlin. After making appearances in Wiesbaden and Munich, she sang the role of Kundry in Parzifal in Henry W. Savage's touring opera troupe in America (1904-05). She was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Co. from 1909 to 1912. Subsequently she retired from the stage and took up composition; wrote an operetta, Rosalind, after Shakespeare's As You Like It (1938); also songs; lived mostly in New York.

Widmann, Benedikt, German music pedagogue; b. Bräunlingen, near Donaueschingen, March 5, 1820; d. Frankfurt, March 4, 1910. He was active in musical instruction in Frankfurt; publ. several manuals: Formenlehre der Instrumentalmusik (1862); Katechismus der allgemeinen Musiklehre (2nd ed., 1879); Grundzüge der musikalischen Klanglehre (1868); Praktischer Lehrgang für einen rationellen Gesangunterricht; Handbüchlein der Harmonie-, Melodie- und Formenlehre (5th ed., 1889); Generalbass-Übungen (1859; 5th ed., 1893); Die kunsthistorische Entwicklung des Männerchors (1884); Alberich Zwyssig als Komponist (1905); etc.

Widmann, Erasmus, German composer and theorist; b. Hall, Württemberg, 1572; d. Rotenburg, Oct. 1634. After serving as cantor in Graz and Weickersheim, he became a schoolmaster at Rotenburg (1614). He wrote church music and some instrumental dance suites; publ. a treatise, Praecepta musicae Latino-Germanica (Nuremberg, 1615). — Cf. G. Reichert, Erasmus Widmann: Leben und Werk (Tübingen, 1940).

Widmann, Joseph Viktor, Swiss writer and journalist; b. Nennowitz, Moravia, Feb. 20, 1842; d. Bern, Nov. 6, 1911. He was brought to Switzerland as a child; became engaged in the literary profession; was well known as a dramatist; from 1880 he was literary editor of the 'Berner Bund'; wrote librettos. He was a friend of Brahms, and publ. Johannes Brahms in Erinnerungen (Berlin, 1898; new ed., Basel, 1947). — Cf. E. and M. Widmann, Joseph Viktor Widmann (2 vols.; 1922, 1924); M. Waser, Josef Viktor Widmann (Leipzig, 1927).

Widor (vë-dohr'), Charles-Marie (-Jean-Albert), distinguished French organist, pedagogue, and composer; b. Lyons, Feb. 21, 1844; d. Paris, March 12, 1937. His father, an Alsatian of Hungarian descent, was organist at the church of St.-François, Lyons; as a boy, Widor was a skillful improviser on the organ; studied later in Brussels under Lemmens (organ) and Fétis (composition). Still a youth, he was appointed organist at his father's church in Lyons (1860), and gained high repute by concerts in provincial French cities. In 1869 he obtained the important post of organist at St.-Sulpice in Paris, holding it for more than 60 years, retiring in 1934. On April 19, 1934, he played at St. Sulpice his Pièce mystique, composed at the age of 90. In 1890 he succeeded César Franck as prof. of organ at the Paris Cons.; in 1896 became prof. of counterpoint, fugue, and composition. He was active also as a music critic for 'L'Estafette' under the pen-name 'Aulétés'; also conducted the oratorio society 'Concordia.' In 1910 he was elected a member of the Institute, of which he became permanent secretary in 1913. He had many distinguished pupils, including Albert Schweitzer, with whom he collaborated in editing the first 5 vols. of a definitive 8-vol. ed. of J. S. Bach's organ works (brought out by G. Schirmer, N. Y.); also edited the collection 'L'Orgue moderne.' As a composer he wrote copiously in many forms, but is known best for his organ music, especially his 8 'symphonies' (suites); also the Symphonie gothique (op. 70) and the Symphonie romaine (op. 73). — Works: operas (all produced in Paris): Maître Ambrose (Opéra-Comique, May 6, 1886); Les Pêcheurs de Saint-Jean (Opéra-Comique, Dec. 26, 1905; his most successful opera); Nerto (Opéra, Oct. 27, 1924); incidental music to Conte d'avril, after Shakespeare's Twelfth Night (Odéon, Sept. 22, 1885); Les Jacobites (Nov. 21, 1885); etc.; a ballet, La Korrigane (Opéra, Dec. 1, 1880); symph. poem, Une Nuit de Valpurgis (London, April 19, 1888, composer conducting); 3 symphonies; a Symphonie antique (with organ and final chorus); Sinfonia sacra (with organ); Ouverture espagnole; 2 piano concertos; cello concerto; Fantaisie for piano and orch.; Choral et variations for harp and orch.; chamber music: 2 piano quintets; a string quartet; a piano trio; Soirs d'Alsace for piano trio; 2 violin sonatas; suite for cello and piano; cello sonata; Trois Valses for violin and piano; Cavatina for violin and piano; Trois Pièces for cello and piano; for piano: Airs de ballet; La Prière; Caprice; Trois Valses; Impromptu; Six Morceaux; Prélude, andante et finale; Scènes de bal; Six Valses caractéristiques; Douze Feuilles d'album; Dans les bois; Romance; Suite polonaise; suite in B minor; Suite écossaise; vocal music: Mass for 2 choirs and 2 organs; Psalm 83 for chorus and string quintet; Psalm 112 for 2 choirs, 2 organs, and orch.; Tu es Petrus for double chorus and organ; Sacerdos et Pontifex for chorus and organ; other church music; Chant séculaire for soprano, chorus, and orchestra; several song cycles, duets, choruses a cappella. He edited Berlioz's Traité de l'instrumentation et d'orchestration modernes, and wrote a supplement, Technique de l'orchestre moderne (1904; 2nd ed., 1906; in English, London, 1906 and 1946); publ. La Musique grecque et les chants de l'Eglise latine, in 'Revue des Deux Mondes' (1895); Initiation musicale (1923); L'Orgue moderne (1929); etc. — Cf. H. Reynaud, L'Œuvre de Charles-Marie Widor (Lyons, 1900); J. F. E. Rupp, Charles-Marie Widor und sein Werk (Bremen, 1912); Isidor Philipp, Charles-Marie Widor, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1944).

Wiechowicz (vyă'-ho-vich), Stanislaw, Polish composer; b. Kroszyce, Nov. 27, 1893. He studied in Poland, Germany, and Russia; held various teaching posts in Poznan and later in Cracow. — Works: Babie lato, symph. poem (1922); Chmiel, symph. scherzo (1926); Kasia, folksong suite for orch. (1946); Serenada polska for orch. (1953); Concerto "Civita Vecchia" for string orch. (1954); Romantic Cantata (1930); Harvest Cantata (1948); numerous choral works on Polish themes.

Wieck (vëk), Alwin, German pianist, son of Friedrich Wieck; b. Leipzig, Aug. 27, 1821; d. there, Oct. 21, 1885. He studied piano with his father, and violin with David; was a member of the Italian Opera orch. at St. Petersburg; then taught piano in Dresden. He publ. Materialien zu F. Wiecks Pianoforte-Methodik und Vademecum perpetuum für den ersten Pianoforte-Unterricht nach F. Wiecks Methode; also piano pieces.

Wieck (vēk), Friedrich, German pianist, father-in-law of Schumann; b. Pretzsch, near Torgau, Aug. 18, 1785; d. Loschwitz, near Dresden, Oct. 6, 1873. He studied theology at Wittenberg, and at the same time pursued musical studies in private; established a piano factory and a circulating music library in Leipzig, but gave up both in order to devote himself to teaching the piano, in which profession he had extraordinary success. Among his pupils were his daughters, Clara and Marie, Hans von Bülow, Fritz Spindler, Isidor Seiss, and Gustav Merkel. He was also Schumann's teacher, but opposed bitterly Schumann's marriage to Clara. He settled in Dresden in 1840. In 1843 Mendelssohn offered him a professorship at the newly established Leipzig Cons., but Wieck declined. Wieck's first wife (née Tromlitz) was the mother of Clara Schumann and Alwin; after her divorce she married Bargiel, the father of Woldemar Bargiel (q.v.); Marie Wieck was the daughter by Wieck's second wife, Clementine Fechner. He publ. 2 books of piano studies, and also Clavier und Gesang (1853; 3rd ed., 1878; also in English) and Musikalische Bauernsprüche (2nd ed. 1875, by Marie Wieck). —Cf. A. von Meichsner, Friedrich Wieck und seine beiden Töchter Clara . . . und Marie (Leipzig, 1875); A. Kohut, Friedrich Wieck (Dresden, 1887); V. Joss, Friedrich Wieck und sein Verhältnis zu Robert Schumann (Dresden, 1900); V. Joss, Der Musikpädagoge Friedrich Wieck und seine Familie (Dresden, 1902); Marie Wieck, Aus dem Kreise Wieck-Schumann (Dresden, 1912; 2nd augmented ed., 1914).

Wieck, Marie, German pianist, daughter of Friedrich Wieck; b. Leipzig, Jan. 17, 1832; d. Dresden, Nov. 2, 1916. She studied with her father; at the age of 11 made her début at a concert of her sister, Clara Schumann; appointed court pianist to the Prince of Hohenzollern in 1858; after tours of Germany, England, and Scandinavia, she settled in Dresden as a teacher of piano and singing; made prof. in 1914. Her last public appearance was with the Dresden Philharmonic Orch. in Nov., 1915, playing the Schumann concerto. She publ. piano pieces and songs; edited her father's Pianoforte-Studien; and wrote Aus dem Kreise Wieck-Schumann (1912; 2nd augmented ed., 1914).

Wiedebein (vē-dě-bin), Gottlob, German organist and conductor; b. Eilenstadt, July 27, 1779; d. Brunswick, April 17, 1854. After studying in Magdeburg, he settled in Brunswick as organist. He enjoyed a great reputation; Schumann sought his advice. He wrote some excellent lieder; was in correspondence with Beethoven, Schumann, and other composers; part of this correspondence was publ. in various German sources: 'Die Musik' (1911), 'Zeitschrift für Bücherfreunde' (1913), etc.

Wiedemann (vē-deh-mahn), Ernst Johann, German composer and teacher; b. Hohengiersdorf, Silesia, March 28, 1797; d. Potsdam, Dec. 7, 1873. From 1818 to 1852 he was organist of the Roman Catholic Church in Berlin; founded and conducted 2 singing societies there; composed a Te Deum for soli, chorus, and orch., Masses, motets, and hymns.

Wiederkehr (vē-der-kehr), Jacob Christian Michael, Alsatian composer; b. Strasbourg, April 28, 1739; d. Paris, April, 1823. From 1783 he was in Paris; played cello at the Concert Spirituel; bassoon at the Théâtre-Lyrique; trombone at the Opéra; taught singing at the Cons. (1795-1802). —Works: 12 concertantes for wind instruments; 2 quintets and 10 quartets for strings; 6 quintets for piano and wind instruments; 6 piano trios; 6 violin sonatas; etc.

Wiegand (vē-gahnd), (Josef Anton) Heinrich, German bass; b. Fränkisch-Crumbach in the Odenwald, Sept. 9, 1842; d. Frankfurt, May 28, 1899. He studied voice privately in Paris; became a member of the opera at Zürich in 1870; then sang in Cologne, and from 1873 to 1877 was leading bass at Frankfurt. In 1877 he toured America with the Adams-Pappenheim troupe; then was in Leipzig (1878-82); sang at the Vienna Court Opera (1882-84); then was engaged at Hamburg. He also appeared in the Nibelung cycle in Berlin (1881) and London (1882).

Wiehmayr (vē-mī-ēr), (Johann) Theodor, German pianist; b. Marienfeld, Jan. 7, 1870; d. Starnberg, March 15, 1947. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. under Jadassohn (composition) and Reinecke (piano). After his début in Leipzig (1890) he undertook a successful tour in Sweden; then settled in Leipzig as a teacher, also giving concerts in other towns; 1902-06, teacher of piano in the Leipzig Cons.; from 1908 to 1925 at the Stuttgart Cons. Author of Musikalische Rhythmik und Metrik (1917) and Musik- ausche Formenlehre in Analysen (1927); publ. technical studies for piano.

Wiel (vël), Taddeo, Italian musicologist and composer; b. Oderzo, Treviso, Sept. 24, 1849; d. Venice, Feb. 17, 1920. He studied in Venice; became assistant librarian at San Marco; publ. valuable papers on Venetian music history: I Codici contariniani . . . nella R. Biblioteca di San Marco in Venezia (1888); I Teatri musicali veneziani del settecento (1897); Francesco Cavalli, in the 'Mus. Antiquary' (Oct., 1912; also separately, Venice, 1914).

Wielhorsky (v'yehl-gohr'-skē), Count Mikhail Yurievitch, Russian patron of arts; b. Volynia, Nov. 12, 1788; d. Moscow, Sept. 9, 1856. His home in St. Petersburg was the gathering place of the most eminent musicians of the time. He was a friend of Glinka, but his suggestions as to the necessity of cuts in Glinka's opera, Russian and Ludmila, were unfortunate. He publ. a string quartet and some songs, one of which, Autrefois, was arranged for piano by Liszt (1843). His brother, Matvey Wielhorsky (1794-1866), was a cellist; another brother, Joseph (1817-92), wrote piano pieces and songs (48 op. numbers).

Wieniawski (vyä-nyahv'-skē), Adam Tadeusz, Polish composer, nephew of Henri and Joseph Wieniawski; b. Warsaw, Nov. 27, 1879; d. Bydgoszcz, April 27, 1950. He studied in Warsaw with Melcer and Noskowski; then in Berlin with Bargiel, and in Paris with Vincent d'Indy, Fauré, and Gedalge. He fought in the French Army during World War I; returned to Warsaw in 1923; was appointed director of the Chopin School of Music in 1928. — Works: operas: Megae (Warsaw, Dec. 28, 1912); Wyzwoleny (Warsaw, 1928); Król Kochanek (Warsaw, March 19, 1931); the ballets Lalita and Le Festin chez Hérode (1927); symph. poems Kamar-almazan (Paris, 1910) and Princesse Baudour; Suite Polonaise for orch. (1913); Obrazki, piano suite (also for orch.); arrangements of folksongs.

Wieniawski (vyä-nyahv'-skē), Henryk (Henri), famous Polish violinist; b. Lublin, July 10, 1835; d. Moscow, March 31, 1880. His mother, Regina Wolff-Wieniawska, was a talented pianist; on the advice of her brother, Eduard Wolff, pianist and composer who lived in France, she took Henryk to Paris, where he entered the Cons. at the age of 8, first in Clavel's class, and the following year, in the advanced class of Massart. At the age of 11 he graduated with 1st prize in violin, an unprecedented event in the annals of the Paris Cons. He gave his 1st concert in St. Petersburg on March 31, 1848, and played 3 more concerts there; then played in Finland and the Baltic provinces; after several successful appearances in Warsaw, he returned in 1849 to Paris, where he studied composition with Hippolyte Collet at the Cons., graduating (again with 1st prize) in 1850. He then traveled with his brother Joseph in Russia (1851-53); in 1859, appointed solo violinist to the Czar; taught at the newly founded St. Petersburg Cons. (1862-67); played the viola in the Ernst String Quartet. In 1872 he went on a tour of the U. S. with Anton Rubinstein; one of the featured works was Beethoven's Kreutzer Sonata, which they performed about 70 times. When Rubinstein returned to Europe, Wieniawski continued his American tour, which included California. He returned to Europe in 1874, gave several concerts with Rubinstein in Paris, and in the same year succeeded Vicuxtemps as prof. of violin playing at the Brussels Cons., resigning in 1877 owing to an increasingly grave heart condition; suffered a heart attack during a concert in Berlin in 1878, but still agreed to play several concerts in Moscow, where he remained until his death at the age of 44. He was married to Isobel Hampton, an Englishwoman; their youngest daughter Irene wrote music under the pen-name Poldowski (q.v.). He was undoubtedly one of the greatest violinists of the 19th century; he possessed a virtuoso technique and an extraordinary range of dynamics. He was equally distinguished as a chamber-music player. Many of his compositions are in the repertory of every violinist; of these the most famous are concerto in D minor; Légende for violin and orch.; Souvenir de Moscou, on Russian themes, for violin and orch.; and Le Carnaval russe, for violin and piano. Other works include (for violin and orch.): concerto in F# minor; Polonaise; Scherzo-Tarentelle; Fantaisie brillante (on themes from Gounod's Faust); Polonaise brillante; for violin and piano: Caprice fantastique, Souvenir de Posen; Adagio élégiaque; Capriccio-Valse; Romance sans paroles et Rondo élégant; 2 mazurkas; Gigue; Études-Caprices for 2 violins; etc. With his brother Joseph he wrote Allagro de sonate and Grand duo polonais. — Cf. A. Desfossez, Henri Wieniawski: esquisse (The Hague, 1856); J. Reiss, Henryk Wieniawski (Warsaw, 1931); I. Yampolski, Henryk Wieniawski (Moscow, 1955).

Wieniawski (vyä-nyahv'-skē), Joseph, Polish pianist and composer, brother of Henryk Wieniawski; b. Lublin, May 23, 1837;

d. Brussels, Nov. 11, 1912. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Zimmerman, Marmontel, and Alkan (piano), and LeCoupey (composition); in 1851 he went on tour with his brother, Henryk; studied with Liszt at Weimar (1855-56); and returned to Paris in 1857. In 1866 he settled in Moscow as a teacher at the Cons.; but soon established a piano school of his own, which flourished. In 1875-76 he was director of the Warsaw Music Society; then settled in Brussels, teaching at the Cons. He also made numerous concert tours throughout Europe. — Works: Suite romantique, for orch.; Guillaume le Taciturne, overture; a piano concerto; a string quartet; a piano trio; Grand duo polonais, for piano and violin (with his brother); a cello sonata; Fantasia, for 2 pianos; for piano solo: 4 polonaises; 5 waltzes; sonata in B minor; mazurkas; Fantaisie et fugue; Sur l'Océan; Barcarole; Ballade; Notturmo; Barcarole-Caprice, Romanze-Étude, etc.; also 24 Études de mécanisme et de style. — Cf. L. Delcroix, Joseph Wieniawski. Notices biographiques et anecdotes (Brussels, 1908).

Wieprecht (vř-prřht), Friedrich Wilhelm, German trombonist and inventor; b. Aschersleben, Aug. 8, 1802; d. Berlin, Aug. 4, 1872. He studied in Dresden and Leipzig, where he was already famous as a trombonist; lived in Berlin from 1824, at first as a violinist in the court orch., finally as director-general of all the Prussian military bands. He invented the bass tuba (1835, with the instrument-maker Moritz), the bathyphon, a sort of bass clarinet (1839, with Skorra), the 'piangendo' on brass instruments with pistons, and an improved contrabass bassoon; his claim of priority over Sax, in the invention of the saxhorns, was not upheld by the courts. — Cf. A. Kalkbrenner, F. W. Wieprecht (1888).

Wier, Albert Ernest, American music editor; b. Chelsea, Mass., July 22, 1879; d. Brooklyn, Sept. 8, 1945. He studied music at the New England Cons. and at Harvard Univ.; from 1900 was music ed. for various publishing firms in N. Y.; brought out a large number of collections and arrangements: Whole World Music Series, The Pianist's Music Shelf, The Violinist's Music Shelf, Young Folks' Music Library, Radio Music Library, etc.; also ed. 'The Macmillan Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians' (1938; withdrawn from circulation owing to an excessive number of demonstrable errors) and other reference works. Author of The Piano, Its History . . . and Music (N. Y., 1940).

Wiesengrund-Adorno, Theodor. See Adorno.

Wigglesworth, Frank, American composer; b. Boston, March 3, 1918. He studied at Bard College, at Columbia Univ. (B.S.), and at Converse College, Spartanburg, S.C. (M.A.); also took lessons from Luening and Cowell. He was in the Army Air Force during World War II; then taught at Columbia Univ. (1947-51) and Queens College (1954-55). In 1954 joined the faculty of the New School for Social Research, N. Y. Received the American Rome Prize (1951-54); editorial board chairman of 'New Music Edition' (1947-51). He is a great-nephew of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. — Works: 2 symphonies (1957; 1958); Creation, for chorus and small orch. (1940); New England Concerto, for violin and strings (1941); The Plunger, for soprano, flute, viola, cello, and piano (1941); trio for flute, banjo, and harp (1942); Jeremiah, for baritone, chorus, and orch. (1942); Sleep Becalmed, for chorus and orch., after Dylan Thomas (1948); 3 movements for string orch. (1949); Telesis, for chamber orch. and percussion (1949); Serenade for flute, viola, and guitar (1952); brass quintet (1957).

Wihan (vř-hahn), Hans (Hanuš), Czech cellist; b. Politz, near Braunau, Bohemia, June 5, 1855; d. Prague, May 3, 1920. He studied at the Prague Cons.; as a young man, he became instructor of cello at the Mozarteum, Salzburg; then was chamber musician in various courts in Germany; in 1880, became member of the private string quartet of King Ludwig of Bavaria, and frequently played at Wagner's soirées at Wahnfried; from 1888 prof. of cello at the Prague Cons. In 1891 he formed the 'Bohemian String Quartet,' selecting his four most talented pupils (Karel Hoffmann, Josef Suk, Oscar Nedbal, and Otto Berger); after Berger's retirement, owing to ill health, in 1897, Wihan himself took his place as cellist (until 1914); the Bohemian String Quartet for years enjoyed the highest reputation.

Wihtol (Vitols), Joseph, foremost Latvian composer; b. Volmar, July 26, 1863; d. Lübeck, April 24, 1948. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. (1880-86) with Rimsky-Korsakov; after graduation, was engaged as instructor there; succeeded Rimsky-Korsakov in 1908 as prof. of composition; among his students were Prokofiev and Miaskovsky. He was also music critic for the German daily 'St. Petersburger Zeitung.' In 1918 he left St. Petersburg; was for a season director of the Latvian Opera in Riga; in 1919 founded the National Cons. there; many Latvian composers were his students. As the Soviet armies approached Riga (1944), Wihtol went to Germany, remaining there until his death. In his music he followed the harmonic practices of the Russian school, but often employed Latvian folksong patterns. Most of his works were publ. by Belaieff. —Works: a symphony (St. Petersburg, Dec. 17, 1887); La Fête Ligho, symph. tableau (1890); Beverinas dziedonis (The Bard of Beverin), for chorus and orch. (1891); Ouverture dramatique (1895); Gaismas pils (The Castle of Light), for chorus and orch. (1899); Upe un cilvēka dzīve (River and Human Life), for chorus (1903); Spriditis, Latvian fairy tale for orch. (1908); the cantatas Song (1908) and Aurora Borealis (1914); arrangements of 200 Latvian songs for voice and piano and for piano solo (2 books; 1906, 1919); many Latvian choral ballads; a string quartet; 10 Chants populaires lettons, 'miniature paraphrases' for piano; songs. —Cf. O. Gravitis, Latvian Composers (Riga, 1955; in Russian; pp. 30-39).

Wijk, Arnold. See Wyk, Arnold van.

Wiklund, Adolf, Swedish composer and conductor; b. Langserud, June 5, 1879; d. Stockholm, April 3, 1950. He studied with J. Lindegren (composition) and R. Andersson (piano) at the Stockholm Cons.; was granted a state fellowship for study abroad; took lessons with James Kwast in Berlin (piano); was engaged as opera coach in Berlin; returning to Sweden in 1911, he became 2nd conductor of the Stockholm Opera; then led the Stockholm Court Orch. (1923-25) and the Concert Society (1925-38); also was guest conductor in London and Jena. He composed a symph. (1922); 2 piano concertos (1906; 1916); a Konzertstück for piano and orch. (1902); a symph. poem, Sommarnatt och soluppgång (1918); Little Suite for orch. (1928); 3 Pieces for string orch. (1924); a violin sonata (1906); several albums of lyric pieces for piano; songs.

Wilbye, John, one of the greatest English madrigalists; b. Diss, Norfolk, 1574 (baptized March 7); d. Colchester, Sept., 1638. From 1595 until 1628 he was resident musician at Hengrave Hall, the home of Sir Thomas Kytson, near Bury St. Edmunds. After the death of Lady Kytson (1628), Wilbye settled in Colchester. He made frequent visits to London, where the Kytsons had a town house. His 1st book of madrigals (for 3, 4, 5, and 6 voices) appeared in 1598 (reprinted London, 1841); it contains 30 compositions; his 2nd book, containing 34 madrigals (also for 3 to 6 voices) came out in 1609 (reprinted London, 1846). To Leighton's 'Teares or Lamentations' (1614) he contributed 2 hymns, and for 'The Triumphes of Oriana' he wrote a 6-part madrigal, The Lady Oriana. His madrigals were reprinted in vols. VI and VII of 'The English Madrigal School.' —Cf. E. H. Fellowes, The English Madrigal Composers (1921; 2nd ed., 1948); H. Heurich, John Wilbye in seinen Madrigalen (Augsburg, 1931).

Wilckens, Friedrich, Austrian pianist and composer; b. Liezen, April 13, 1899. He studied piano with Lalewicz in Vienna and composition with Franz Schreker there and in Berlin (1916-20); in 1933 he settled in Seefeld. As a ballet pianist, he made 17 tours in the U.S. and 3 tours in South America. He wrote several ballets (Himmel und Erde, Schwingender Tempel, etc.), film music; various minor stage pieces.

Wilder, Alec, American composer; b. Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 17, 1907. He studied at the Eastman School of Music; active as composer for the theater and films, including a documentary film about Dr. Albert Schweitzer. He excels particularly in short operas scored for a limited ensemble of singers and instruments and suitable for performance in schools. —Works: operas: The Lowland Sea (1951) and Sunday Excursion (1953); Kittiwake Island, a musical comedy (1955); a ballet, Juke Box (1942); concerto for oboe, string orch., and percussion (1957); three woodwind quintets; a woodwind octet; piano pieces (A Debutante's Dairy, Neurotic Goldfish, Walking Home in the Spring, etc.); many songs.

Wilder (vil'-der), (Jérôme Albert) Victor (van), Belgian writer on music; b. Wetteren, near Ghent, Aug. 21, 1835; d. Paris, Sept. 8, 1892. He was a journalist; contributed articles to various publications in Paris, where he settled; wrote librettos; translated Wagner's texts into French, including Der Ring des Nibelungen; wrote Mozart, l'homme et l'artiste (Paris, 1880; English transl., 1908) and Beethoven, sa vie et ses œuvres (Paris, 1883).

Wildgans (vëld'-gäns), Friedrich, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, June 5, 1913. He studied with J. Marx; taught at the Salzburg Mozarteum (1934-36); then played clarinet at the Vienna Opera; 1945-47, prof. at the Vienna State Academy of Music. He has written music in all genres, in an ultra-modern style, eventually adopting the 12-tone technique. —Works: opera, Der Baum der Erkenntnis (1935); choral symph. Mayakovsky (1946); Sinfonia Austriaca; 2 clarinet concertos; 3 piano sonatas; chamber music and choruses; author of Entwicklung der Musik in Österreich im 20. Jahrhundert (Vienna, 1950). In 1946 he married the Austrian soprano, Ilona Steingruber.

Wilhelm, Carl Friedrich, German choral composer; b. Schmalkalden, Sept. 5, 1815; d. there, Aug. 26, 1873. From 1839 to 1864 he was director of the Crefeld 'Liedertafel,' for which he composed many men's choruses, among them Die Wacht am Rhein, which became a national song of the Germans; it was first performed by the 'Liedertafel' on June 11, 1854, and first publ. in the 'Chorliedersammlung' of Erk and Greif (Essen, 1854). In 1860 he received the title of 'Royal Prussian Music Director'; in 1870 he was granted a pension of 3,000 marks. —Cf. K. Gollmick, C. F. Wilhelm (Frankfurt, 1848); W. Buchner, C. F. Wilhelm (Leipzig, 1874); G. Rogati, Carl Wilhelm (dissertation; Bonn, 1927).

Wilhelmj (vil-höhl-mē), August (Emil Daniel Ferdinand), famous violin virtuoso; b. Usingen, Germany, Sept. 21, 1845; d. London, Jan. 22, 1908. He received his earliest instruction in music from his mother, who was an amateur pianist; then studied violin with Konrad Fischer, court musician at Wiesbaden; made his 1st appearance there as a child prodigy on Jan. 8, 1854. In 1861, at the recommendation of Liszt, he was sent to the Leipzig Cons., where he studied with Ferdinand David (violin), Hauptmann and Richter (theory); in 1864 he went to Frankfurt for an additional course with Raff; in 1865 he began his concert career, touring Switzerland; then played in Holland and England (1866), France and Italy (1867), Russia, Switzerland, France, and Belgium (1869), England, Scotland, and Ireland (1869-70); then traveled through Holland, Scandinavia, Germany, and Austria (1871-74), to England (1875-77), and America (1878), making a 4-year tour of the world to South America, Australia, and Asia (1878-82). In 1876 he was concertmaster of the Bayreuth orch. at the production of Der Ring des Nibelungen. For several years he lived chiefly at Biebrich-on-Rhine, where he established (with R. Niemann) a master school for violin playing. In 1886 he moved to Blasewitz, near Dresden; and in 1894 was appointed prof. of violin playing in the Guildhall School of Music, London. His first wife, whom he married in 1866, was Baroness Lip-hardt, a niece of Ferdinand David; in 1895 he married the pianist Mariella Mausch. He made a famous arrangement of Bach's Air from the orch. suite in D major which became known as the Air on the G String (Bach's original bore no such specification); also arranged Wagner's Träume for violin and orch.; wrote a cadenza to Beethoven's violin concerto; further composed for violin and orch. 2 Konzertstücke (No. 2, In Memoriam), Alla Polacca, and theme and variations (after 2 caprices of Paganini); Romanze for piano; songs. With James Brown he publ. A Modern School for the Violin (6 parts). —Cf. E. Frassinetti, August Wilhelmj Violinista. Memorie (Mirandola, 1913); E. Wagner, Der Geigerkönig August Wilhelmj (Homburg, 1928).

Wilhem (real name Bocquillon), Guillaume-Louis, French music educator; b. Paris, Dec. 18, 1781; d. there, April 26, 1842. The son of an army officer, he himself entered active service at the age of 12; but from 1795-1801 studied at the school of Liancourt, and then for 2 years in the Paris Cons. He taught music in the military school of Saint-Cyr; and in 1810 was appointed teacher of music at the Lycée Napoléon (later Collège Henri IV), occupying this position until death. The system of enseignement mutuel (mutual instruction), which had been introduced into the popular schools of France, attracted Wilhem's attention, and in 1815 he began to apply it in music teaching, with such marked success that in 1819 he was chosen to organize a system of music instruction for the primary schools in Paris, was appointed singing-teacher to the Polytechnique in 1820, and director of a Normal School of Music. In 1833 he conceived the idea of instituting regular reunions of the pupils in one grand chorus, to which he gave the name of 'Orphéon.' In 1835 he was made director general of music instruction in all primary schools of Paris, and was created a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. Besides his school classes, he formed classes of adults, chiefly workingmen, in which the success of his system was equally conspicuous, and which later, under the name of 'Orphéons,' included several popular singing societies. He publ. numerous songs and choruses; also a collection of a cappella choruses, 'Orphéon,' in 5 (later 10) vols.; and 4 textbooks. —Cf. E. Niboyet, Notice historique sur la vie et les ouvrages de G. L. B. Wilhem (Paris, 1843); J. A. La Fage, Notice sur Bocquillon-Wilhem (Paris, 1845).

Wilke, Christian Friedrich Gottlieb, German organist and organ builder; b. Spandau, March 13, 1769; d. Treuenbrietzen, July 31, 1848. He was organist in Spandau from 1791; in 1821, government expert on organ building. He publ. Beiträge zur Geschichte der neuen Orgelbaukunst (1846); Über Wichtigkeit und Unentbehrlichkeit der Orgelmixturen (1839).

Wilkes, Josué Teófilo, Argentine composer and musicologist; b. Buenos Aires, Jan. 8, 1883. He studied with Alberto Williams; in 1908 went to Europe for further study; took some lessons from Liapunov in St. Petersburg and also at the Schola Cantorum in Paris; returned to Argentina in 1914; for many years taught music in primary schools in Buenos Aires. He made a special study of Gregorian Chant; also transcribed and harmonized old colonial songs; composed 3 operas, Nuit persane (1916-20), Por el cetro y la corona, Byzantine tragedy after Bajazet of Racine (1924), El Horoscopo (after Calderón; 1926-27); a secular oratorio, La Cautiva; a symph. trilogy, Humahuaca (1911-14); a string octet; other chamber music; songs; 50 Canciones populares cuyanas (arranged and harmonized), Cancionero musical rioplatense (Argentine dances); numerous magazine articles on Argentine music. With I. Guerrero Cárpena he publ. Formas musicales rioplatenses . . . (Buenos Aires, 1946).

Willaert (vil'-lahrt), Adrian, important Flemish composer; b. Bruges, c. 1490; d. Venice, Dec. 8, 1562. He went to Paris in 1514 to study law; was a pupil of Jean Mouton in music there; then traveled in Italy. He was in the service of Duke Alfonso I d'Este at Ferrara in 1522; in the spring of 1525 was attached to the court of Ippolito II d'Este, Archbishop of Milan. He became maestro di cappella at St. Mark's in Venice on Dec. 12, 1527; with the exception of 2 visits to Flanders (1542 and 1556), he remained in Venice, where he established a singing school, which flourished. Among his famous pupils were Zarlino, Cipriano de Rore, and Andrea Gabrieli; he is justly regarded as the founder of the great Venetian school of composition. The style of writing for 2 antiphonal choirs (prompted by the 2 opposed organs of St. Mark's Cathedral) was initiated by Willaert; he was one of the greatest masters of the madrigal and of the instrumental ricercar; also publ. motets, canzone, vesper psalms, and Masses. A complete edition of his works was begun by H. Zenck (5 vols. publ. by the American Institute of Musicology); Zenck also publ. 9 ricercari per sonar con tre stromenti (Mainz, 1933); other reprints are found in Blume's 'Das Chorwerk' (ed. by Wiora and Hertzmann); in Attaignant's 'Treize livres de motets' (1550), reprinted by the Lyre-Bird Press (Paris, 1934); in Schering's 'Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen' (nos. 104, 105); in Tagliapietra's 'Antologia di musica antica e moderna' vol. I (ricercari arranged for piano); in Davison and Apel, 'Historical Anthology of Music' vol. I (nos. 113, 115); and in many other collections. —Cf. Ch. Carton, Notice sur Adr. Willaert (Bruges, 1849); E. Gregoir, A. Willaert (Antwerp, 1869); A. Averkamp, Adrian Willaert, in 'Tijdschrift der Vereniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis' (1922); H. Zenck, Studien zu A. Willaert (Leipzig, 1929); E. Hertzmann, Adrian Willaert in der weltlichen Vokalmusik seiner Zeit (Leipzig, 1931); Otto Gombosi, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. XVI, 54); R. Lenaerts, Notes sur Adrian Willaert (Brussels, 1935). See also René Vannes, Dictionnaire des musiciens (Brussels, 1947); G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954).

Willan, Healey, eminent organist and composer; b. Balham (Surrey), England, Oct. 12, 1880. He received his musical education at St. Saviour's Choir School, Eastbourne; was church organist in London until 1913, when he went to Canada as head of the theory dept. at the Royal Cons. in Toronto; was vice principal there (1920-36); in 1914 appointed lecturer and examiner at the Univ. of Toronto; 1937, prof. of music; retired in 1950; from 1932 was also organist of the Univ. of Toronto; founder and conductor of Tudor Singers (1934-39); greatly esteemed as pedagogue. —Works: 3 radio operas, commissioned and broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation: Transit through Fire (March 8, 1942), Brébeuf and his Brethren (Sept. 26, 1943), Deirdre (April 20, 1946); symph. No. 1 (Toronto, Oct. 8, 1936); symph. No. 2 (Toronto, May 18, 1950); a piano concerto; Agingcourt Song, for small orch.; a piano trio; 2 violin sonatas; several character pieces for piano; preludes and fugues for organ; other organ works; carols and hymn tunes; church services (Magnificats, Masses, etc.); motets a cappella; anthems with organ accompaniment; many other choral works; songs; arrangements of Canadian and British songs; school manuals.

Willeke, Willem, cellist; b. The Hague, Sept. 29, 1879; d. Pittsfield, Mass., Nov. 26, 1950. He studied cello in Holland; then was cellist in various German orchestras; also at the Vienna Opera (under Mahler). In 1907 he came to the U. S. and joined the Kneisel Quartet, with which he remained until its disbandment in 1917; taught at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y.; then was appointed director of the Berkshire Music Colony, in Pittsfield, Mass., where he remained until his death.

Willent-Bordogni (vi-lahn' bohr-doh'-ñē), Jean-Baptiste-Joseph, French bassoon virtuoso; b. Douai, Dec. 8, 1809; d. Paris, May 11, 1852. He studied with Delcambre at the Paris Cons.; played the bassoon in the orch. of the Théâtre Italien in Paris; married the daughter of the singing teacher Bordogni (1834) and added her name to his; taught at the Brussels Cons.; in 1848, was appointed to the faculty of the Paris Cons. He wrote a number of works for the bassoon, and publ. a method for it; also brought out 2 operas in Brussels: Le Moine (1844) and Van Dyck (1845).

Williams, Alberto, foremost Argentine composer; b. Buenos Aires, Nov. 23, 1862; d. there, June 17, 1952. He was a grandson of Benjamin Williams of Exeter, England; his maternal grandfather, Amancio Alcorta, was one of Argentina's early composers. Williams studied composition at the Paris Cons., with Guiraud, Durand, and Godard, piano with Mathias (a pupil of Chopin), and organ and counterpoint with César Franck. He returned to Argentina in 1889; founded the Alberto Williams Cons. in 1893; also organized branches in provincial towns of Argentina, numbering more than 100; founded a music publishing firm, 'La Quena' (also a music magazine of that title). He was the most prolific composer of Argentina; 112 op. numbers were publ. by 'La Quena.' The greatest influence in his music was that of César Franck, but modernistic usages are found in his application of whole-tone scales, parallel chord progressions, etc. In many of his works he used characteristic melorhythms of Argentina; composed a number of piano pieces in Argentinian song-and-dance forms (milongas, gatos, cielitos, etc.). He wrote 9 symphonies; the following were performed in Buenos Aires: No. 1 (Nov. 25, 1907); No. 2, La Bruja de las montañas (Sept. 9, 1910); No. 3, La Selva sagrada (Dec. 8, 1934); No. 4, El Ataja-Caminos (Dec. 15, 1935); No. 5, El Corazón de la Muñeca (Nov. 29, 1936); No. 6, La Muerte del Cometa (Nov. 26, 1937); No. 7, Eterno reposo (Nov. 26, 1937). Other orchestral works include several suites of Argentinian dances; he further composed 3 violin sonatas, a cello sonata, a piano trio; a great number of piano albums, the last of which was En el parque, which he wrote in the year of his death. He composed 136 opus numbers in all. He also publ. numerous didactic works and several books of poetry. A complete catalogue of his works is found in vol. 2 of 'Composers of the Americas' publ. by the Pan American Union, Washington, D.C. (1956; pp. 138-55).—Cf. Z. R. Lacoigne, Alberto Williams; Música argentino (Buenos Aires, 1942); Homenajes a Alberto Williams, containing messages and opinions of musicians on the occasion of his 80th birthday (Buenos Aires, 1942); N. Slonimsky, Alberto Williams: Father of Argentinian Music, in 'Mus. America' (Jan. 10, 1942); V. A. Risolia, Alberto Williams, curriculum vitae (Buenos Aires, 1944).

Williams, Charles Francis Abdy, English writer on music; b. Dawlish, Devonshire, July 16, 1855; d. Milford, near Lymington, Feb. 27, 1923. While pursuing his studies at Trinity College, Cambridge, he played violin and viola in the orch. of the Cambridge Univ. Musical Society; then went to New Zealand, where he was church organist in Auckland; returning to England in 1881, he took the degree of Mus. Bac. at Oxford (1889) and Cambridge (1891); 1895-1901, was director of music at the Greek Theatre at Bradfield College, where he wrote choruses in ancient Greek modes for the productions of Greek tragedies. Retiring from teaching in 1901, he devoted himself to scholarly work; in 1904 he introduced the Solesmes system of performing plainchant at the priests' seminary in Capri, which won him recognition from the Pope.—Books: A Short Historical Account of the Degrees in Music at Oxford and Cambridge (1893); Bach (1900; new ed., 1934) and Handel (1901; new ed., 1935) in the series 'The Master Musicians'; The Story of the Organ (1903); The Story of Notation (1903); The Story of Organ Music (1905); The Rhythm of Modern Music (1909); The Aristoxenian Theory of Musical Rhythm (1911); essays on Greek music and plainchant in various journals.

Williams, Charles Lee, English organist and composer; b. Winchester, May 1, 1853; d. Gloucester, Aug. 29, 1935. He was a pupil of Dr. Arnold at the Cathedral of Winchester; from 1872 filled various posts as organist and choirmaster in Ireland and England; conducted several of the 'Three Choirs Festivals' held at Gloucester; after 1898 became active in the educational field. He composed the cantatas Gethsemane, Bethany, A Harvest Song, A Dedication, etc.; much church music; brought out (with H. G. Chance) a continuation (1895, covering the years 1864-94) of D. Lysons's Origin and Progress of the Meeting of the Three Choirs of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford . . . (1812, covering the years 1724-1811; supplemental vol. by John Amott in 1865, covering the years 1812-64); in 1931 brought out, with H. G. Chance and T. Hannan-Clark, a further continuation (covering the years 1895-1930) of the work, under the title Annals of the Three Choirs.

Williams, Christopher à Becket, English composer and writer on music; b. Dorchester, July 2, 1890; d. London, Nov. 3, 1956. He studied at Keble College, Oxford; was in the British army during World War I; subsequently traveled in Europe, Asia, and America; wrote 2 travel books, 3 novels, etc.; also contributed to musical periodicals. He composed several orchestral suites: 5 Impressions, Pepperpot Suite, Welsh Suite, Theme and Derivations for strings, etc.; 3 violin sonatas; a cello sonata; 2 piano sonatas; several piano suites.

Williams, David Christmas, Welsh conductor and composer; b. Llanwrtyd, Sept. 12, 1871; d. there, March 21, 1926. He studied with J. Parry at the South Wales School of Music; conducted various music societies in Wales; wrote a cantata, The Sands of Lavan, which received a prize at Cardiff (1893); The Battle of the Severn, for chorus and orch.; Psalms of Praise; men's choruses; songs; piano piece.

Williams, Frederic Arthur, American pianist, composer, and pedagogue; b. Oberlin, Ohio, March 3, 1869; d. Cleveland, July 31, 1942. He studied piano and composition with W. G. Smith and others in Cleveland; subsequently occupied various teaching posts in Ohio. He wrote about 250 pieces for piano; also some songs. His technical publications for piano include Wrist and Forearm Studies and Octave and Chord Studies.

Williams, Harry Evan, American tenor; b. Mineral Ridge, Ohio, Sept. 7, 1867; d. Akron, Ohio, May 24, 1918. Originally he worked in a mine and steel mill; then studied singing in Cleveland and N. Y.; made his début at the Worcester, Mass., Festival of 1896, and then sang in oratorio at many other festivals; gave nearly 1000 recitals. He was one of the 1st American vocalists to introduce English translations in the regular concert repertory.

Williams, John Gerrard, English composer; b. London, Dec. 10, 1888; d. Oxted, Surrey, March 7, 1947. He was an architect by profession, but took some lessons in music from Richard Walthew, and soon began to compose; presented a concert of his works (chamber music, piano pieces, and songs) in London on March 27, 1922. He wrote a ballad opera, Kate, the Cabin-Boy (London, 1924); 2 operettas; a ballet, The Wings of Horus (1928); 3 Miniatures and Elegiac Rhapsody for orch.; 2 string quartets; many songs and part-songs.

Williams, John M., American pianist and pedagogue; b. on a plantation in Washington County, Texas, Jan. 1, 1884. He studied in N. Y. and Chicago; since 1913 lectured on musical pedagogy to music teachers in the major cities of the U. S., Canada, England, and Scotland. His teaching material has had world-wide distribution, having been publ. in Great Britain, Australia, Cuba, and South America (Spanish editions). Some ten million copies of his various piano books have been sold. Among his teaching publications are the 'Grade by Grade' and 'Year by Year' books; 'Child's First Music Book' and 'Nothing Easier' or 'Adventures of Ten Little Fingers in Mother Goose Land'; also 'First Book for the Adult Beginner' (publ. also in a special Canadian ed.).

Williams, Joseph, English music publisher; he was the son of Lucy Williams, who established a printing shop at London in 1808. Joseph Williams continued the business; was succeeded in 1883 by his son, Joseph Benjamin Williams (who publ. some of his own pieces under the nom de plume of Florian Pascal); the business was incorporated as Joseph Williams, Ltd., in 1900. Upon the death of J. B. Williams, his son, Florian Williams, became head of the company. Joseph Williams, Ltd. specialized in publishing contemporary English music; also brought out Elizabethan works.—Cf. Florian Williams, After Forty Years. Recollections of a Music Publisher, in 'Mus. Opinion' (Feb.-Dec., 1940).

Williams, Ralph Vaughan. See Vaughan Williams, Ralph.

Williamson, John Finley, American choral conductor; b. Canton, Ohio, June 23, 1887. He studied singing with Witherspoon and Bispham in N. Y.; organ with Karl Straube in Leipzig. In 1921 he founded the Westminster Choir, and in 1926, the Westminster Choir School (later College) at Princeton,

WILLIS — WILLSON

N. J.; was its president until 1958, when he resigned. With his choir he gave 1000 concerts in America; also made 2 European tours; edited the 'Westminster Series' of choral music.

Willis, Henry, English organ builder; b. London, April 27, 1821; d. there, Feb. 11, 1901. As a youth he worked for John Gray (later Gray & Davidson), and still during his apprenticeship he invented the special manual and pedal couplers which he later used in his own instruments; from 1842 to 1845 he worked for Evans at Cheltenham, and in 1845 established his own business in London. He rebuilt the organ in the Gloucester Cathedral; exhibited a large organ at the Crystal Palace in 1851, which won the Council Medal, and was installed in the Winchester Cathedral; he subsequently was commissioned to build the great organ in St. George's Hall, Liverpool (1855). In 1878 he took his sons Vincent and Henry into partnership, adopting the firm name of 'Henry Willis & Sons'; he became generally known as 'Father Willis.' Willis himself regarded the organ in St. Paul's, which he built in 1891, as his masterpiece (77 speaking stops, 19 couplers). After the founder's death in 1901, his son Henry Willis became the head of the business, and soon took his son, also named Henry Willis, into partnership. They built the organ in the Liverpool Cathedral (167 speaking stops, 48 couplers) in 1912-14; this organ was the largest in the world at the time.

Willis Music Co., American music publishers. The business was founded by Charles H. Willis at Cincinnati in 1899, in association with his son William H. Willis. The firm became known as W. H. Willis & Co.; after absorption of G. B. Jennings & Co. in 1910 it was incorporated as the Willis Music Co. On July 1, 1919, the business was acquired by Gustave Schirmer of New York. The company specializes in educational publications.

Willis, Richard Storrs, American composer and writer on music; b. Boston, Feb. 10, 1819; d. Detroit, May 7, 1900. He was a brother of the poet Nathaniel Parker Willis; studied at Yale Univ., where he was president of the Beethoven Society (1837), for which he wrote choruses and instrumental pieces. He then went to Germany, and studied theory with Schnyder von Wartensee in Frankfurt and with Hauptmann in Leipzig. Returning to New York, he edited the periodical 'The Musical World' (1852-60); brought out a collection, 'Church Chorals and Choir Studies' (N. Y., 1850) and 'Our Church Music' (N. Y., 1856); also composed student songs and patriotic hymns, later collected as 'Waif of Song' and publ. in Paris in 1876.

Willmers, Rudolf, pianist and composer; b. Copenhagen, Oct. 31, 1821; d. Vienna, Aug. 24, 1878. His father, a Danish agriculturist, sent him to Germany at the age of 13 to study science, but Willmers turned to music; took lessons with Hummel for 2 years and with Fr. Schneider for a year; became a concert pianist and toured successfully in Germany and Austria; was much acclaimed in Paris and London (1846-47); in 1866 settled in Vienna. His technical specialty was the performance of 'chains of trills' for which he was famous. He wrote a number of brilliant piano solos: Six études; Sérénade érotique (for the left hand); Sehnsucht am Meere; Un Jour d'été en Norvège; Deux études de concert (La Pompa di festa and La Danza delle Baccanti); Sonate héroïque; Tarantella giocosa; La Sylphide; Trillerketten; Aus der Geisterwelt, tremolo-caprice; Allegro symphonique; he also composed some chamber music. — Cf. T. de L***, Notice sur la vie et les travaux artistiques de R. Willmers, in the 'Archives des Hommes du Jour' (Paris, April, 1847; also separately).

Willner, Arthur, pianist and composer; b. Teplice, Czechoslovakia, March 5, 1881. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. and in Munich. From 1904 to 1924 he taught at the Stern Cons. in Berlin; from 1924 to 1938, lived in Vienna; in 1938 settled in London. His list of works includes more than 100 op. numbers: a symph., a cello concerto, a piano concerto, 5 string quartets, 4 violin sonatas, 3 sonatinas for violin and piano, 4 piano sonatas and several character pieces, choral works, organ works, songs.

Willson, Meredith, American composer of popular music; b. Mason City, Iowa, May 18, 1902. He played the flute in a local orch. at the age of 11, and in 1916 was sent to N. Y., where he continued to study the flute with Georges Barrère. In 1919 he joined Sousa's band as flutist, touring with it until 1922. From 1923 to 1928 he was flutist in the N. Y. Philharmonic. He then entered the field of radio as conductor and composer. For the 30th anniversary of the San Francisco earthquake he composed his 1st symph. and conducted its première with the San Francisco Symph. Orch. on April 19, 1936; his 2nd symph. was presented by the Los Angeles Philharmonic on April 4, 1940. Other works include a symph. poem The Jervis Bay (1942); Symphonic Variations on an American Theme; an O. O. McIntyre Suite for orch. (San Francisco, 1936); also an Anthem of the Atomic Age for chorus; many pieces for band. Then he devoted himself mainly to popular music, with ever increasing success, culminating in the production of his musical revue, The Music Man, which opened on Broadway on Dec. 19, 1957. He also publ. an autobiography, And There I Stood with My Piccolo (N. Y., 1948) and Eggs I Have Laid (N. Y., 1955).

WILLY — WILSON

Willy. Pen name for Gauthier-Villars.

Wilm, Nicolai von, pianist and composer; b. Riga, March 4, 1834; d. Wiesbaden, Feb. 20, 1911. He studied with Plaidy, Hauptmann, and Richter at the Leipzig Cons.; then in 1857 went to Riga as theater conductor, and in 1860 proceeded to St. Petersburg, where he became instructor at the Imperial Nicolayevsky Institute; returned to Germany in 1875, and lived mostly in Dresden and Wiesbaden. A highly prolific composer (243 opus numbers), he is best known through his chamber music; wrote a string sextet, a string quartet, a piano trio, a cello sonata, 2 violin sonatas, a sonata for violin and harp; numerous pieces for piano solo: Kleine Suite, Herbstfrüchte, Im russischen Dorf, Stimmungen, Dorf- und Walddidyllen, Musikalisches Dekameron; etc.; for piano 4 hands: Eine Nordlandfahrt, Reisebilder aus Schlesien, Musikalische Federzeichnungen, Kalendarium, etc.; also variations and other pieces for 2 pianos; men's choruses; songs.

Wilms, Jan Willem, composer; b. Witzhelden, Schwarzburg-Sondershausen, March 30, 1772; d. Amsterdam, July 19, 1847. He received his early musical training from his father. In 1791 he went to Amsterdam, where he appeared as pianist and harpist. He composed 2 piano concertos, 2 flute concertos, 2 string quartets, 2 piano trios, 3 violin sonatas, 2 flute sonatas, a clarinet concerto; also 3 symphonies. He was the author of the Dutch national song Wien Neerlandsch bloed door d'aderen vloeit (1815).

Wilsing (vil'-zing), Daniel Friedrich Eduard, German composer; b. Hörde, near Dortmund, Oct. 21, 1809; d. Berlin, May 2, 1893. He was organist in Wesel from 1829 to 1834; then moved to Berlin. He composed an oratorio in 2 parts, Jesus Christus (produced in Bonn in 1889, by Wilsing's pupil, Arnold Mendelssohn); a De profundis a 16, which won the gold medal for art at Berlin; piano sonatas; songs.

Wilson, Domingo Santa Cruz. See Santa Cruz Wilson, Domingo.

Wilson, Grenville Dean, American composer; b. Plymouth, Conn., Jan. 26, 1833; d. Nyack, N. Y., Sept. 20, 1897. He was taught piano by his mother; then studied theory with A. W. Johnson in Boston; some of his piano pieces were publ. before he was 10 years old. In 1871 he was head of the music dept. of Rockland Institute, Nyack; in 1877 he organized the Nyack Symp. Society. He publ. 178 pieces, chiefly for piano, some of which were popular (The Shepherd-boy, Wayside Chapel, Chapel in the Mountains, Moonlight on the Hudson, Voix du matin, etc.).

Wilson, John, English lutenist and song writer; b. (probably in Faversham, Kent) April 5, 1595; d. London, Feb. 22, 1674. He was musically gifted; at the age of 19, wrote music for 'The Maske of Flowers.' According to some indications, he participated as a singer in a production of Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing (as 'Jacke Wilson'). In 1635 he was made one of the King's Musicians; was in favor with Charles I, whom he followed to Oxford during the civil war in 1644, and was made D. Mus. by Oxford Univ. on March 10, 1645; he was 'Musick Professor' there from 1656 until 1661. Upon the Restoration he resumed his post at court, and on Oct. 22, 1662 became successor of Henry Lawes as Gentleman of the Chapel Royal. He publ. Psalterium Carolinum (London, 1657), Cheerfull Ayres or Ballads (Oxford, 1660); wrote several songs to Shakespeare's words. Some of his songs were included in Playford's Select Muscicall Ayres and Dialogues (1652, 1653), Select Ayres and Dialogues (1659), Catch that catch can: or the Musical Companion (1667), and The Treasury of Musick (1669). — Cf. E. R. Rimbault, Who was 'Jacke Wilson', the Singer of Shakespeare's Stage? (London, 1846); E. F. Hart, Caroline Lyrics and Contemporary Song-Books, in 'Library' (London; June, 1953); V. H. Duckles, The 'Curious' Art of John Wilson, in 'Journal of the American Musicological Society' (Summer, 1954).

Wilson, Mortimer, American organist and composer; b. Chariton, Iowa, Aug. 6, 1876; d. New York, Jan. 27, 1932. He studied organ with Middelschulte in Chicago; composition with F. G. Gleason; in 1907 went to Leipzig to study with Max Reger. Returning to America in 1911, he became conductor of the Atlanta Philharmonic Orch. (until 1915); then taught at various music schools; settled in N. Y. He wrote 5 symphonies, an overture New Orleans; Concerto Grosso for strings; 2 piano trios; 3 violin sonatas; Echoes from Childhood and Romance for violin and piano; etc. Author of The Rhetoric of Music (Lincoln, Ncbr., 1907) and Harmonic and Melodic Technical Studies; publ. 'A series of work tables prepared for students of harmony' (1921).

Wilson, Philip, English singer and music editor; b. Hove, Sussex, Nov. 29, 1886; d. London, July 26, 1924. After studying singing in London, he went to Australia in 1913 as a vocal teacher at the Sydney Cons.; returning to England in 1920, he gave historical recitals, especially of Elizabethan songs. With Peter Warlock (Philip Hescltine) he edited English Ayres, Elizabethan and Jacobean, and Chromatic Tunes of 1606; also edited The Musical Proverbs (London, 1924), from the Lekingfelde MS.

Wiltberger, August, German composer; brother of Heinrich Wiltberger; b. Sobernheim, April 17, 1850; d. Stuttgart, Dec. 2, 1928. He was engaged as music teacher in various towns in Alsace; wrote a number of sacred works; a secular cantata, Barbarossa's Erwachen; chamber music; organ pieces; author of Harmonielehre; zum Gebrauch in Lehrerbildungsanstalten (1906; 3rd ed., 1912).

Wiltberger, Heinrich, German composer and teacher; brother of August Wiltberger; b. Sobernheim, Aug. 17, 1841; d. Colmar, May 26, 1916. He studied with his father, an organist; taught in various music schools in Alsace; his setting of Alsatian folksongs for male chorus were very popular. He also wrote a Märchen for string orch.; a Requiem; several Masses; brought out collections of Latin and German hymns; publ. Der Gesangsunterricht in der Volksschule (1907).

Winderstein (vín'-dër-shtün), Hans (Wilhelm Gustav), German conductor; b. Lüneburg, Oct. 29, 1856; d. Gissen, June 23, 1925. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with H. Schrödiack (violin) and Richter (theory); also played in the Gewandhaus Orch. He conducted the concerts of the Philharmonic Societies of Nuremberg and Fürth (1890-93); then was conductor of the newly established Philharmonic Orch. at Munich, and of the Kaim Concerts (1893-96). In 1896 he organized the 'Winderstein Orch.' in Leipzig, which he conducted until 1919; from 1920 conducted summer concerts in Bad Nauheim. He composed a Trauermarsch, Valse-Caprice, and Ständchen for orch.; violin pieces; piano pieces.

Winding, August (Henrik), Danish pianist and composer; b. Taaro, March 24, 1835; d. Copenhagen, June 16, 1899. He studied with Gade; was appointed prof. at the Copenhagen Cons. in 1867; from 1891 till his death was its director. He composed a symphony; a Nordische Ouverture; a piano concerto; cadenzas to Beethoven's piano concertos and to many of Mozart's; a string sextet; piano quartet; 2 violin sonatas; many piano pieces (Drei Fantasiestücke, Reisebilder, Ländliche Szenen, Studien und Stimmungen, Idyllen und Legenden, Albumblätter, etc.); songs.

Windingstad, Ole, Norwegian conductor; b. Sandefjord, May 18, 1886. He graduated from the Oslo Cons. in 1902; then studied at the Leipzig Cons.; settled in America in 1913, and established the Scandinavian Symph. Orch., which he conducted until 1929; also conducted the Brooklyn Symph. Orch. (1930-32), the Knickerbocker Symph. Orch. in Albany, N. Y. (1937-39), the New Orleans Symph. Orch. (1940-44), and the Albany Symph. Orch. (1945-48). In 1929 he was decorated with the Norwegian Order of Saint Olaf. He composed a symphony (1913); a cantata, The Skald of Norway (1929); The Tides, for orch. (Albany, Feb. 13, 1938; composer conducting); many minor pieces.

Windsperger, Lothar, German composer; b. Ampfing, Oct. 22, 1885; d. Wiesbaden, May 29, 1935. He studied with R. Louis and others in Munich; from 1913, was in Mainz as artistic adviser to the music publisher B. Schott's Söhne. Among his works are a symphony; Lumen amoris, symph. fantasy; a piano concerto; a violin concerto; Missa Symphonica; Requiem; chamber music; piano pieces; organ pieces; songs.

Wingham, Thomas, English piano teacher and composer; b. London, Jan. 5, 1846; d. there, March 24, 1893. He studied with Sterndale Bennett at the Royal Academy of Music; became prof. of piano playing there in 1871; also served as church organist. He composed 2 Masses, motets, offertories, and other church music; also 4 symphonies; 6 overtures; Concert-Capriccio for piano and orch.; 2 string quartets; a septet for piano, strings, and wind instruments; songs.

Winkelmann, Hermann, German tenor; b. Brunswick, March 8, 1849; d. Vienna, Jan. 18, 1912. He started out as a piano maker, but became interested in singing; made a successful début at Sondershausen (1875), and then sang at Altenburg, Darmstadt, and Hamburg. His interpretation of Tannhäuser and Lohengrin (in special engagements at Vienna) induced Richter to recommend him to Wagner, who chose him to create Parsifal at Bayreuth (July 26, 1882). From 1883 to 1906, when he retired on a pension, he was one of the brightest stars of the Vienna Opera, where one of his most brilliant achievements was the performance of the role of Tristan (with Materna as Isolde) in the Vienna première (Oct. 4, 1883). In 1884 he sang in the U. S. at the Wagner festivals given by Theodore Thomas in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and Chicago.

Winkler, Alexander Adolfovitch, Russian composer and pianist; b. Kharkov, March 3, 1865; d. Leningrad, Oct., 1935. He studied with Duvernoy in Paris, and with Leschetizky (piano) and Navrátil (composition) in Vienna. Returning to Russia, he became a piano teacher in his native city (1890-96); in 1907 was appointed to the faculty of the St. Petersburg Cons. He composed an overture, En Bretagne; orchestral variations on a Russian folksong, and on a Finnish folksong; a string quintet; 3 string quartets; a piano quartet; a piano trio; a viola sonata; several albums of piano pieces; songs; also made arrangements for piano 4 hands of works by Glinka and Glazunov.

Winner, Septimus, American composer of popular music; b. Philadelphia, May 11, 1827; d. there, Nov. 22, 1902. He learned to play the violin; married at 20 and opened a music store in Philadelphia, where he began giving lessons on the violin, guitar, and banjo. In 1854 he wrote his best-known song, Listen to the Mocking Bird, selling the copyright for $5; in his lifetime the song sold 20 million copies. In 1862 he wrote Give Us Back Our Old Commander: Little Mac, the People's Pride, voicing a widespread sentiment for the return of Gen. McClellan; the song was regarded as subversive and Winner was arraigned, but soon released; later the song, slightly altered, was used for Grant's presidential campaign. Winner also wrote the song Whispering Hope, which became extremely popular. He was a pioneer in bringing music to the masses; wrote over 200 volumes of music, including many instructive works, for 23 different instruments, and made about 2,000 arrangements for violin and piano. He used the pen name Alice Hawthorne for many of his songs, including Listen to the Mocking Bird. —Cf. C. E. Claghorn, The Mocking Bird: The Life and Diary of its Author, Sep. Winner (Philadelphia, 1937).

Winter (vin'-ter), Peter, German composer; b. Mannheim (baptized Aug. 28), 1754; d. Munich, Oct. 17, 1825. He was a violinist in the Electoral orch. at the age of 11; studied with Abbé Vogler; in 1776 became music director at the court theater; went with the court to Munich in 1778; was appointed court conductor in 1798 and held this post until his death. In Munich he brought out a number of operas, of which the most important were: Helena und Paris (Feb. 5, 1782), Der Bettelstudent (Feb. 2, 1785), Marie von Montalban (Jan. 28, 1800), and Colmal (Sept. 15, 1809). Frequent leaves of absence from Munich enabled him to travel; in Venice he produced his operas Catone in Utica (1791), I Sacrifici di Creta (1792), I Fratelli rivali (1793), and Belisa (1794). In Vienna he brought out Das unterbrochene Opferfest (June 14, 1796; his most successful opera; produced all over Europe), Babylons Pyramiden (Oct. 25, 1797), and Das Labyrinth (June 12, 1798); in Paris he produced his only French opera, Tamerlan (Sept. 14, 1802); in London, the Italian operas La Grotta di Calipso (May 31, 1803), Il Trionfo dell' amor fraterno (March 22, 1804), Il Ratto di Proserpina (May 3, 1804), and Zaira (Jan. 29, 1805); in Milan, Maometto II (Jan. 28, 1817), I due Valdemiri (Dec. 26, 1817), and Etelinda (March 23, 1817). He also wrote several ballets; 3 oratorios and 17 sacred cantatas for the Munich court chapel; 26 Masses and a vast amount of other church music; 9 symphonies (including the grand choral symph. Die Schlacht); overtures; 2 septets; 6 string quartets; 2 string quintets; concertos for clarinet, for bassoon, and other instruments with orch.; and a Vollständige Singschule in 3 parts. Some of his chamber music was republished by Riemann in the Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern (vols. XV and XVI; with a thematic catalogue). —Cf. V. Frensdorff, Peter Winter als Opernkomponist (dissertation; Erlangen, 1908); E. Löffler, Die Messen Peter Winters (Frankfurt, 1928).

Winter-Hjelm, Otto, Norwegian organist and composer; b. Christiania, Oct. 8, 1837; d. there, May 3, 1931. He studied with H. Kjerulf in Christiania, and with Kullak and Wüerst in Berlin. He was organist in the Trefoldighetskirke in Christiania from 1874 till 1921; wrote music criticism in the 'Aftenposten' (1887-1913). — Works: symph. No. 1 (Christiania, Sept. 27, 1862); symph. No. 2 (1862; first performed, Christiania, March 18, 1916); many choruses for men's voices; edited 50 Melodier til Hauges og Landstads Salmebøger and 50 Salmemelodier for piano; also church music. Publ. Af Kristiania teaterliv i den seneste tid (essays; Christiania, 1875).

Winterberger, Alexander, German pianist and composer; b. Weimar, Aug. 14, 1834; d. Leipzig, Sept. 23, 1914. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. (1848) and with Liszt. In 1861 he went to Vienna; in 1869, became piano prof. at the St. Petersburg Cons.; returned to Leipzig in 1872, and remained there as teacher and music critic. He publ. some piano pieces: Alinen-Tänze (waltzes, mazurkas, minuets, etc.), Concert-Étude, Valse-Caprice, Concert-Adagio; songs; German and Slavonic duets. — Cf. O. Foerster, Alexander Winterberger. Seine Werke, sein Leben (Hanover, 1905; with a list of works).

Winterfeld, Carl Georg August Vivigens von, German writer on music; b. Berlin, Jan. 28, 1784; d. there, Feb. 19, 1852. He studied law at the Univ. of Halle; then occupied juridical positions in Breslau and Berlin. He collected a valuable library of old music, which he donated to the Library of Berlin. — Publications: Palestrina (1832); J. Gabrieli und sein Zeitalter (1834; 3 vols); Über K.Fr. Chr. Pasch's geistliche Gesangswerke (1839); Dr. Martin Luthers deutsche geistliche Lieder (1840); Der evangelische Kirchengesang und sein Verhältnis zur Kunst des Tonsatzes (1843-47; 3 vols.); Über Herstellung des Gemeinde- und Chorgesangs in der evangelischen Kirche (1848); Zur Geschichte heiliger Tonkunst (2 parts; 1850, 1852); Musiktreiben und Musikempfndungen im 16. und 17. Jahrhundert (1851); Aleste . . . von Lulli, Händel und Gluck (1851); Allegorisch-poetische Festopern am Kaiserlichen Hofe zu Wien in der letzten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (1852). — Cf. A. Prüfer, Briefwechsel zwischen Carl von Winterfeld und Eduard Krüger (Leipzig, 1898).

Winternitz, Emanuel, musicologist and authority on musical instruments; b. Vienna, Aug. 4, 1898. He studied at the universities of Vienna (1918-22) and Hamburg (1923); settled in the U. S.; lectured at Harvard Univ. (1938-41) and at Columbia Univ. (1947-48). In 1942 he was appointed keeper of the collection of musical instruments of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, N. Y.; in 1949, curator there, reorganizing the Crosby Brown Collection of musical instruments; received a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1946; since 1949, visiting lecturer at Yale Univ.; contributed numerous articles on musical instruments to the 'Bulletin' of the Metropolitan Museum. Publ. Musical Autographs, from Monteverdi to Hindemith (2 vols.; Princeton, N. J., 1955).

Wintzer, Richard, German composer; b. Nauendorf, near Halle, March 9, 1866; d. Berlin, Aug. 14, 1952. He studied painting, and also music (with Bargiel); lived mostly in Berlin, and was active as painter, composer, and music critic. He wrote 2 operas, Die Willis (1895) and Marienkind (1905); Auf hohen Bergen, for baritone solo, chorus, and orch.; some fine songs (Ernste Gesänge, Kinderlieder, Sturmlieder); piano pieces. He also publ. Menschen von anderem Schlage (1912) and an autobiography. — Cf. H. Koller, Richard Wintzer, ein Leben zwischen den Künsten, in 'Musik' (Berlin; March, 1941).

Wiora (vë-oh'-rah), Walter, musicologist; b. Katowice, Dec. 30, 1906. He studied musicology in Berlin with Abert, Blume, Gurlitt, Hornbostel, H. J. Moser, Schering, Schünemann, and J. Wolf. In 1936 he was appointed curator of the German Folk Music Archives in Freiburg-im-Breisgau; in 1942 lectured at the Univ. of Poznan; was in the German army; after 1945, returned to Freiburg and resumed his former post; 1958, succeeded Blume as prof. at Kiel Univ. He publ. a number of valuable treatises on German folk music: Die angeblichen Volksmelodien bei Zuccalmaglio und Brahms (dissertation, 1941); Zur Frühgeschichte der Musik in den Alpenländern (Basel, 1949); Das echte Volkslied (Heidelberg, 1950); Europäischer Volkslied: gemeinsame Formen in charakteristischen Abwandlungen (Cologne, 1952); Die rheinisch-bergischen Melodien bei Zuccalmaglio und Brahms (Bad Godesberg, 1953); and Europäische Volksmusik und ausländische Tonkunst, vol. 1 in the series 'Die Musik im alten und neuen Europa' (Kassel, 1957; a work of fundamental significance). He also publ. a biography of Bruckner (Freiburg, 1952).

Wirén, Dag Ivar, prominent Swedish composer; b. Noraberg, Örebro, Oct. 15, 1905. He studied at the Stockholm Cons. with Oskar Lindberg and Ernst Ellberg; then in Paris with Leonid Sabaneyev. He returned to Sweden in 1934, and was music critic for the 'Svenska Morgonbladet' (1938-46); also participated in various activities of the Society of Swedish Composers. His music is cast in a neo-Classical vein, and it also embodies elements of purely Scandinavian inspiration. His first successful work was Serenade for strings (1937; also as a ballet, 1952); other works include the ballet Oscarsbalen (1949); the radio operas Blått, gult, rött (1940; inspired by Churchill's famous speech containing the phrase 'Blood, sweat, tears'), Den glada patienten (1941); incidental music to Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice (1943); 4 symphonies (1932; 1939; 1944; 1952); Little Suite for orch. (1941); cello concerto (1936); violin concerto (1946); piano concerto (1950); 3 string quartets; a piano trio; a number of piano pieces. — Cf. M. Pergament, Dag Wirén, in 'Svenska tonsättare' (Stockholm, 1943; pp. 154-59).

Wirth (virt), Emanuel, violinist; b. Luditz, Bohemia, Oct. 18, 1842; d. Berlin, Jan. 5, 1923. He was a pupil of Kittl at the Prague Cons.; then taught at the Cons. of Rotterdam, and was concertmaster of the local orch.; succeeded Rappoldi as viola player in the Joachim String Quartet, in Berlin; subsequently formed his own trio, with R. Hausmann (cello) and H. Barth (piano), presenting numerous concerts in Germany.

Wirth, Friedrich Moritz, German writer on music; b. Euba, near Chemnitz, Sept. 14, 1849; d. Leipzig, April 26, 1917. He studied classical philology and philosophy at the Univ. of Leipzig, where he lived. His writings include Drohender Untergang Bayreuths (1887); Wagner-Museum und Zukunft des Wagnertums (1894); Der Ring des Nibelungen als Wotandrama (1912); Parsifal in neuem Lichte (1914); etc.

Wirth, Helmut, German musicologist and composer; b. Kiel, Oct. 10, 1912. He studied composition with R. Oppel, and musicology with Fritz Stein and Blume; Dr. phil., 1937, at Kiel Univ., with the dissertation, Joseph Haydn als Dramatiker (Wolfenbüttel, 1940); from 1936, was active on the Hamburg Radio. He composed a Goldoni Suite, for chamber orch. (1939), an oboe sonata (1940), a harpsichord sonata (1946), many songs.

Wirth, Hermann Felix, Dutch music editor; b. Utrecht, May 6, 1885. He studied at the Univ. of Utrecht, and with Riemann in Leipzig (1906-07); Dr. phil., Basel, 1910; subsequently lectured at the Univ. of Berlin; from 1918 taught music history at the Cons. of Brussels; for the 'Vereeniging voor nederlandse Muziekgeschiedenis' he edited instrumental compositions by Dutch masters of the early 17th century (Amsterdam, 1913); also ed. a collection of early Dutch military marches (Berlin, 1914).

Wischnegradski, Ivan. See Vyshegradsky.

Wise, Michael, English singer and composer; b. Wiltshire, c. 1648; d. Salisbury, Aug. 24, 1687. After an apprenticeship under Cooke at the Chapel Royal in London, he was appointed, at the age of 20, organist of Salisbury Cathedral; 1676, became Gentleman of the Chapel Royal; in 1687 he was appointed master of the choristers of St. Paul's Cathedral. He was killed by a watchman during a street dispute. He wrote anthems, church services, and catches; 6 of his anthems are included in Boyce's Cathedral Music; other pieces are found in various collections of the 17th century.

Wiske, C. Mortimer, American choral conductor; b. Bennington, Vt., Jan. 12, 1853; d. Lewiston, Maine, July 9, 1934. He studied piano and organ; was engaged by Theodore Thomas to drill the massed chorus (3000 voices) for the N. Y. May Festival of 1882, and was also chorusmaster during a series of Wagner festivals given by Thomas in the U. S. in 1884; subsequently conducted the N. Y. Chorus Society and various choruses in Paterson, N. J., and Newark.

Wissmer, Pierre, Swiss composer; b. Geneva, Oct. 30, 1915. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Roger-Ducasse, and at the Schola Cantorum with Daniel-Lesur; was on the staff of the Geneva Radio; subsequently divided his time between Geneva and Paris. He writes in the lucid neo-Classical style, and is particularly adept in writing for small instrumental groups. — Works: radio opera, Marion ou la Belle au tricornes (Geneva, Radio Suisse Romaine, April 16, 1947); comic opera, Capitaine Bruno (Geneva, Nov. 9, 1952); opéra-bouffe, Léonidas ou la cruauté mentale (Paris, Sept. 12, 1958); ballet, Le beau dimanche (1939; Geneva, March 20, 1944); Naiades, for narrator, soli, chorus, and orch. (Geneva, Jan. 21, 1942); 2 piano concertos (1937 and 1948); 2 symphonies (1938 and 1948);

Divertissement sur un choral, for 11 instruments (Geneva, Dec. 8, 1939); Mouvement for string orch. (Geneva, Feb. 1, 1940); violin concerto (Geneva, April 26, 1944); symph. suite, Antoine et Cléopâtre (Geneva, Oct. 2, 1946); overture, La Mandrellina (Geneva, April 16, 1952); 2 string quartets (1937 and 1949); Sérénade for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1938); sonatina for clarinet and piano (1941); sonatina for violin and piano (1946); piano sonata (1949); songs; choruses.

Wit, Paul de, Dutch cellist; b. Maastricht, Jan. 4, 1852; d. Leipzig, Dec. 10, 1925. In 1880 he founded (with O. Laffert) the 'Zeitschrift für Instrumentenbau'; opened a museum of musical instruments at Leipzig in 1886, but sold his collections to the Berlin Hochschule für Musik in 1888 and 1891; he then made a 3rd collection, which he sold in 1906 to Heyer of Cologne. Wit was a fine player on the viola da gamba, as well as a cellist. He publ.: Geigenzettel alter Meister vom 16. bis zur Mitte des 19. Jahrhunderts (1902; 2nd ed., 1910); Weltadressbuch der gesamten Musikinstrumenten-Industrie (1903; 8th ed., 1912); Katalog des musikhistorischen Museums von P. de Wit (1903).

Witassek, Johann Nepomuk August, Bohemian pianist and composer; b. Hořín, March 23, 1770; d. Prague, Dec. 7, 1839. The son of a schoolmaster, he received a good education; took music lessons with F. X. Dušek and J. A. Koželuch in Prague; succeeded Koželuch in 1814 as musical director at the Prague Cathedral; was appointed director of the School for Organists in Prague in 1830. He wrote an opera, David, brought out in Prague; 4 piano concertos; concertos for violin, for clarinet, and for bassoon; 6 string quartets; 4 violin sonatas; much church music.

Witek (vĕ-těk), Anton, violinist; b. Saaz, Bohemia, Jan. 7, 1872; d. Winchester, Mass., Aug. 19, 1933. He studied violin with his father and with A. Bennewitz at the Prague Cons. From 1894 to 1910 he was concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic; in 1895, formed a duo with the Danish pianist Vita Gerhardt (1868-1925), whom he later married (1910). In 1910 he was engaged as concertmaster of the Boston Symph. Orch. (until 1918); from 1920 to 1925, was in Germany; then returned to America. After the death of his first wife (1925), he married the American violinist Alma Rosengrein. He publ. Fingered Octaves (1919).

Witherspoon, Herbert, American bass singer; b. Buffalo, N. Y., July 21, 1873; d. New York, May 10, 1935. He studied with Horatio Parker at Yale Univ., and also took lessons with MacDowell in N. Y. He then studied singing with Bouhy in Paris, Henry Wood in London, and G. B. Lamperti in Berlin. Returning to America, he made his concert début at New Haven (Oct. 21, 1895); made 5 tours of England as oratorio singer; his American opera début occurred at the Metropolitan Opera House as Titus in Parsifal (Nov. 26, 1908); then devoted himself to teaching; in 1925 became president of the Chicago Musical College; 1931, president of the Cincinnati Cons. of Music; in 1933 he returned to N. Y., and in May, 1935, was chosen to succeed Gatti-Casazza as general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Co.; but he died suddenly of a heart attack. He publ. Singing: A Treatise for Teachers and Students (N. Y., 1925); 36 Lessons in Singing for Teacher and Student (Chicago, 1930).

Witkowski (vit-kohf'-skē), Georges-Martin, French composer; b. Mostaganem, Algeria, Jan. 6, 1867 (of a French father and a Polish mother); d. Lyons, Aug. 12, 1943. He was educated at the military school of St.-Cyr; began music study with Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum; later left the army and settled in Lyons, where he founded the 'Société des Grands Concerts' in 1905 for the production of oratorios. In 1924 he was appointed director of the Lyons Cons. — Works: the opera La Princesse lointaine after Rostand (Paris, March 26, 1934); 2 symphonies (1900; 1910); Poème de la maison, for solo voices, chorus, and orch. (Lyons, Jan. 25, 1919); Mon lac, for piano and orch. (Lyons, Nov. 20, 1921); for voice and orch.: 4 Poèmes du Cœur Innombrable (1925), 3 Poèmes de Ronsard (1935), Paysage rêvé (1937); Introduction et Danse for violin and orch. (Paris, Oct. 10, 1937); a piano quintet (1897); a string quartet (1902); a violin sonata (1907). — Cf. M. Boucher, G.-M. Witkowski, in the 'Revue Musicale' (March, 1926).

Witt, Franz Xaver, German composer of church music; b. Walderbach, Feb. 9, 1834; d. Schatzhofen, Dec. 2, 1888. He studied with Proske and Schrems in Regensburg; took holy orders in 1856. In 1866 he established and edited the 'Fliegende Blätter für katholische Kirchenmusik' and 'Musica sacra'; in 1867 he founded the 'Allgemeiner deutscher Cäcilienverein' for the improvement of Catholic church music, which, while opposing the introduction of orchestral instruments into the church, helped to arouse interest in the great early masterpieces of church music. In his own early Masses, Witt employed the orch. Besides numerous Masses, he publ. 2 Requiems, many litanies, offertories, motets, and hymns (55 opus numbers); also some secular men's choruses; author of Der Zustand der katholischen Kirchenmusik (1865); Über das Dirigieren der katholischen Kirchenmusik; and Das bayerische Kultusministerium (1886). —Cf. A. Walter, Dr. Franz Witt. Ein Lebensbild (Regensburg, 1889; 2nd ed., 1906; includes a full list of works). A centennial vol. of his articles, Ausgewählte Aufsätze zur Kirchenmusik . . ., was brought out in Cologne (1934).

Witt, Friedrich, German violinist and composer; b. Hallenbergstetten, Württemberg, Nov. 8, 1770; d. Würzburg, 1837. He studied with Rosetti at Wallerstein; at 19, became 1st violin in the orch. of Prince von Oettingen; from 1802, was Kapellmeister at Würzburg, at first to the Prince-Bishop, then to the Grand Duke, finally to the city. It was Witt who composed the symphony in C, the so-called 'Jena Symphony,' attributed (falsely) to Beethoven (see H. C. Robbins Landon's article in the 'Music Review' for May 1957). Other works by Witt include the historical opera, Palma (Frankfurt, 1804); the comic opera Das Fischerweib (Würzburg, 1806); the oratorios Der leidende Heiland (Würzburg, 1802) and Die Auferstehung Jesu; Masses and cantatas; he publ. 9 symphonies, music for wind band, a septet for clarinet, horn, bassoon, and strings, a quintet for piano and winds, a flute concerto, etc.

Witt, Theodor de, German music editor and composer; b. Wesel, May 9, 1823; d. Rome, Dec. 1, 1855. He studied organ with his father. When Liszt visited Witt's native town, he became interested in the talented boy, and gave a concert for his benefit to enable him to study in Berlin (under Dehn). At 22, Witt developed tuberculosis, and was sent to Italy; there he made a detailed study of church music; edited the first 4 vols. of Breitkopf & Härtel's complete edition of Palestrina's works. His own works include a piano sonata and some vocal pieces.

Witte, Georg Hendrik, Dutch organist and composer; b. Utrecht, Nov. 16, 1843; d. Essen, Feb. 1, 1929. He studied at The Hague; then at the Leipzig Cons. with Moscheles and Plaidy (piano), Hauptmann and Reinecke (composition). In 1871 he was appointed conductor of the Musikverein at Essen, which post he held for 40 years, retiring in 1911. He wrote Der Essener Musikverein 1838 bis 1913 (1913). His works include a cello concerto; a choral work, An die Sonne; a piano quartet; numerous piano pieces; also songs.

Wittgenstein, Count. See Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg.

Wittgenstein, Paul, Austrian pianist; b. Vienna, Nov. 5, 1887. He was of a musical family; studied piano with Josef Labor and Leschetizky; made his 1st public appearance as pianist in 1913, in Vienna. He lost his right arm in World War I, at the Russian front; was prisoner of war in Omsk, Siberia; repatriated in 1916. He then developed an extraordinary technique for left hand alone, and performed a concerto specially composed for him by his teacher, Josef Labor. He subsequently commissioned left-hand piano concertos from Richard Strauss, Ravel, Prokofiev, and several other composers, of which he gave the world premières (except the Prokofiev concerto, which he found unsuitable). He appeared in the major musical centers in Europe; toured America in 1934; in 1939 settled in New York.

Witting, Karl, German violinist and composer; b. Jülich, Sept. 8, 1823; d. Dresden, June 28, 1907. He studied in Paris under A. Reichel; returned to Germany in 1855, living in Berlin, Hamburg, and Glogau, and finally settling in Dresden in 1861 as a teacher. He publ. a cello sonata, instructive pieces for violin and piano, a Violinschule; edited a collection, 'Die Kunst des Violinspiels' (8 books) and a collection of duets for 2 violins (4 books); wrote Musikalisches Wörterbuch (1887); Geschichte des Violinspiels (1900), and analyses for Breitkopf and Härtel's 'Konzertführer.'

Wodell, Frederick William, choral conductor and composer; b. London, Dec. 17, 1859; d. St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 13, 1938. He studied piano, voice, and composition with various teachers in London; settling in the U. S., he was for many years conductor of the People's Choral Union in Boston; also taught singing there. He composed a cantata, The American Flag, for tenor, baritone, men's chorus, and orch.; many anthems, songs, etc.; publ. Choir and Chorus Conducting (Philadelphia, 1901; 12th ed., 1931), and How to Sing by Note (1915).

Woehl (völ), Waldemar, German music editor and educator; b. Lipine, near Bethuen, Prussia, Aug. 31, 1902. He was brought up in Myslowitz; studied with his father, and later in Berlin at the Akademie für Kirchen- und Schulmusik, with Max Seiffert, Thiel, and Jöde; taught at the Folkwangschule in Essen; during World War II, led the Musikschule für Jugend und Volk in Villach, Austria; eventually settled in Soyen, Bavaria, as teacher and flute maker; started a movement for the restoration of vertical flutes (recorders). He publ. Melodielehre (Leipzig, 1929); Klavierbuch für den Anfang (Berlin, 1932); Das Bach-Buch für Klavierspieler (Berlin, 1932); 'Musik für Blockflöten' (4 vols.; Hanover, 1930-34); also a method, Blockflötenschule (1930), a Kurze Spielanweisung für das Scheitholz (1951); composed numerous pieces for the recorder, also for ensembles of recorders; edited much 18th-century chamber music.

Wohlfahrt, Franz, German piano pedagogue; son of Heinrich Wohlfahrt; b. Frauenpriesnitz, March 7, 1833; d. Gohlis, Feb. 14, 1884. He taught at Leipzig; publ. many piano studies, some of which have become standard exercises.

Wohlfahrt, Heinrich, German piano pedagogue; b. Kössnitz, near Apolda, Dec. 16, 1797; d. Connwitz, near Leipzig, May 9, 1883. He studied with Häser at Weimar; was cantor and tutor in Thuringian towns; taught at Jena and (from 1867) Leipzig. He publ. Kinder-Klavierschule (24 editions), Der erste Klavierunterricht, Der Klavierfreund (36 children's studies), Klavierübungen, Grössere und rein praktische Elementar-Klavierschule, Schule der Fingermechanik, Anthologische Klavierschule, Theoretisch-praktische Modulationsschule (English transl., Boston, 1878), Vorschule der Harmonielehre, Wegweiser zum Componiren für Musik-Dilettanten (English transl., Boston, 1859); also 3 children's sonatas; Kleine Leute; etc.

Wohlgemuth (vol'-geh-moot), Gustav, German composer and choral conductor; b. Leipzig, Dec. 2, 1863; d. there, March 2, 1937. He studied at the Leipzig Cons.; in 1891 founded the 'Leipziger Männerchor,' which he conducted for many years; later also conducted other choral societies in Leipzig; was editor (1907-26) of the 'Deutsche Sängerbundeszeitung'; publ. some 100 male choruses (some with orch.). — Cf. Gustav Wohlgemuth, sein Leben und Wirken (Leipzig, 1934), a collection of articles.

Woikowski-Biedau (voy-kohf-skê bē'-dow), Viktor Hugo von, German composer; b. Nieder-Arnsdorf, near Schweidnitz, Sept. 2, 1866; d. Berlin, Jan. 1, 1935. He studied music with Wilhelm Berger in Berlin; was employed in the government statistics bureau; composed the operas Helga (Wiesbaden, 1904), Der lange Kerl (Berlin, 1906), and Das Nothemd (Dessau, 1913); 3 melodramas, Jung Olaf, Der Todspieler, and Die Mette von Marienburg; 4 ballads for baritone and orch., Die Jüdin von Worms, Der Triumph des Lebens, Rahab, die Jerichonitin, and Jan van Jühren; Aus einem Menschenleben for violin and piano; several song cycles (Frühlingslieder, Lebens-träume, Schiffslieder, Königslieder, Pagen-Balladen, Osterzauber, Des Sultans Gesetz, etc.).

Woldemar, Michel, French violinist and composer; b. Orléans, Sept. 15, 1750; d. Clermont-Ferrand, Dec. 19, 1815. He studied with Lolli; for some years was conductor for a traveling theatrical troupe. By adding a 5th string (c) to the violin, he obtained an instrument that he called 'violon-alto,' because it included the viola range, and for which he wrote a concerto. He also publ. 3 violin concertos, a string quartet, duos for 2 violins and for violin and viola; Sonates fantomagiques for violin (L'Ombre de Lolli, de Mestrino, de Pugnani, de Tartini); 12 grand solos; 6 Rêves ou Caprices; Caprices ou études; Le nouveau Labyrinthe pour violon, followed by studies in double-stops; Le nouvel Art de l'archet; Étude élémentaire de l'archet moderne; variations on Les Folies d'Espagne, etc.; methods for violin, viola, and clarinet; also a system of musical stenography (Tableau mélodigraphique) and a method of musical correspondence (Notographie).

Wöldike, Mogens, Danish organist and conductor; b. Copenhagen, July 5, 1897. He studied with Carl Nielsen; was organist and choirmaster in several Copenhagen churches; in 1937, became conductor of the radio madrigal chorus; toured with it in Scandinavia, England, and Italy. Also director for the series of records 'Masterpieces of Music before 1750' in collaboration with W. W. Norton & Co. and the Haydn Society of Vienna and Copenhagen. He publ. Orgel-koraler til Kirkeaaet (1948).

Wolf, Ernst Wilhelm, German composer; b. Grossenbehringen, near Gotha, 1735 (baptized Feb. 25); d. Weimar, 1792 (buried Dec. 1). In 1772 he became Kapellmeister to the music-loving Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, Anna Amalia. He wrote about 20 operas, of which the most successful were Das Rosenfest (Weimar, 1770) and Die Dorfdeputierten (Berlin, June 15, 1772). Other works include Passion oratorios and Easter cantatas; publ. 6 piano concertos; 4 quintets for piano, flute, violin, viola, and cello; 6 string quartets; 7 books of piano sonatas, each containing 6 numbers; in MS are 15 symphonies, 17 partitas, 12 piano concertos, and much chamber music. He also wrote Kleine musikalische Reise (1782) and Musikalischer Unterricht (1788; 2nd ed., 1804). —Cf. J. Brockt, Ernst Wilhelm Wolf (dissertation; Striegau, 1927).

Wolf, Ferdinand, Austrian writer on literature and music; b. Vienna, Dec. 8, 1796; d. there, Feb. 18, 1866, as librarian of the Imperial Library. His book Über die Lais, Sequenzen und Leiche. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der rhythmischen Formen und Singweisen der Volkslieder und der volksmäßigen Kirchen- und Kunstlieder im Mittelalter (Heidelberg, 1841) is a valuable compendium.

Wolf (volf), Hugo, Austrian composer, one of the greatest masters of the modern song; b. Windischgraz, March 13, 1860; d. Vienna, Feb. 22, 1903. He studied piano and violin with his father, an amateur musician; then took lessons from Sebastian Weixler, a schoolmaster. In 1870 he was sent to Graz, where he entered a primary school, but left after a single semester, and was enrolled in the Seminary at the Benedictine monastery of St. Paul in Carinthia; in 1873 he went to a Gymnasium in Marburg; in 1875 he moved to Vienna, where he became a pupil at the Cons., studying piano with Wilhelm Schenner and harmony with Robert Fuchs. When Wagner visited Vienna in 1875, Wolf went to see him, bringing along some of his compositions; the fact that Wagner received him at all, and even said a few words of encouragement, gave Wolf great impetus towards further composition. But he was incapable of submitting himself to academic discipline, and soon difficulties arose between him and the Cons. authorities. He openly expressed his dissatisfaction with the teaching of Franz Krenn (who was also the teacher of Mahler), and was so impertinent to the director, Josef Hellmesberger, that he was expelled. In March, 1877, he returned to his native town, but after a few months at home, decided to go to Vienna again; there he managed to support himself by giving music lessons to children in the homes of friends. By that time he was composing diligently, writing songs to texts by his favorite poets—Goethe, Lenau, Heine. An unhappy encounter with Brahms, who advised him to study counterpoint before attempting to compose, embittered him, and he became determined to follow his own musical inclinations without seeking further advice. After a brief (and unsuccessful) employment as chorus-master in Salzburg (1881), he secured in 1883 the position of music critic of the weekly 'Wiener Salonblatt.' He took this opportunity to indulge his professional frustration by attacking those not sympathetic with new trends in music; he poured invective of extraordinary virulence on Brahms, thus antagonizing the influential Hanslick and other admirers of Brahms. But he also formed a coterie of staunch friends, who had faith in his ability. Yet he was singularly unsuccessful in his repeated attempts to secure performances for his works. He submitted a string quartet to the celebrated Rosé Quartet, but it was rejected. Finally, Hans Richter accepted for the Vienna Philharmonic his symph. poem Penthesilea, but the public performance was a fiasco, and Wolf even accused Richter of deliberately sabotaging the work; later he reorchestrated the score, eliminating certain crudities of the early version. In 1887 he resigned as music critic of the 'Wiener Salonblatt' and devoted himself entirely to composition. He became convinced that he was creating the greatest masterpieces of song since Schubert and Schumann, and stated his conviction in plain terms in his letters. In historical perspective, his self-appraisal has proved remarkably accurate, but psychologists may well wonder whether Wolf was not consciously trying to give himself the needed encouragement by what must have seemed to him a wild exaggeration. However, a favorable turn in his fortunes came in 1889, when his 27 songs to words by Mörike and 10 songs to words by Eichendorff appeared in print. There followed 25 Goethe songs in 1890, and the album of exquisite songs after Heyse and Geibel, Spanisches Liederbuch, in 1891, as well as 6 songs to poems of Keller, Alte Weisen. The singer Ferdinand Jäger became a champion of Wolf's music, and gave repeated performances of his songs at the meetings of the Vienna Wagner-Verein. Soon Wolf's name became known in Germany; he presented concerts of his own works in Berlin, Darmstadt, Mannheim, and other musical centers. He completed the 1st part of his great cycle of 22 songs, Italienisches Liederbuch, in 1891, and composed the 2nd part (24 songs) in 5 weeks, in the spring of 1896. In 1897 he wrote the 3 Gedichte von Michelangelo. While Wolf could compose songs with a facility and degree of excellence that were truly astounding, he labored painfully on his orchestral works. His early symph. was never completed, nor was a violin concerto; the work on Penthesilea took him a disproportionately long time. In 1895 he undertook the composition of his opera, Der Corregidor, to the famous tale by Alarcón, El Sombrero de tres picos, and, working feverishly, completed the vocal score with piano accompaniment in a few months. The orchestration took him a much longer time. Der Corregidor had its première in Mannheim on June 7, 1896, but it proved a disappointment. The opera was ineffective dramatically, and the orchestration was weak. Wolf subsequently revised the score, and in its new version Der Corregidor was brought out in Strasbourg on April 29, 1898. He never completed his 2nd opera, Manuel Venegas (also after Alarcón); fragments were presented in concert form on March 1, 1903. In the meantime, his fame grew. A Hugo Wolf-Verein was organized at Berlin in 1896, and did excellent work in furthering performances of Wolf's songs in Germany. Even more effective was the Hugo Wolf-Verein in Vienna, founded by Michael Haberlandt on April 22, 1897 (disbanded in 1906). Amidst these encouraging signs of recognition, tragedy struck. A supposed rebuke administered to Wolf by Mahler, at that time the newly appointed director of the Vienna Opera, who had been considering a performance of Der Corregidor, precipitated in him a mental breakdown. He declared to friends that Mahler had been relieved of his post, and that he, Wolf, was appointed director of the Vienna Opera in Mahler's stead. On Sept. 20, 1897, he was placed in a private mental institution; after a favorable remission, he was discharged (Jan. 24, 1898), and traveled in Italy and Austria. After his return to Vienna, symptoms of mental derangement manifested themselves in even greater degree. He attempted suicide by throwing himself into a lake, and then was committed to a state asylum at his own request. (A parallel with Schumann's case forcibly suggests itself.) He remained in confinement, gradually lapsing into complete irrationality. He died at the age of 42, and was buried near the graves of Schubert and Beethoven; a monument was unveiled on Oct. 20, 1904. — Wolf's significance in music history rests on his songs, about 300 in number, many of them publ. posthumously, and some still unpublished. The sobriquet 'the Wagner of the Lied' may well be justified in regard to involved contrapuntal texture and chromatic harmony, for Wolf accepted the Wagnerian idiom through natural affinity as well as by clear choice. The elaboration of the accompaniment, and the incorporation of the vocal line into the contrapuntal scheme of the whole, are Wagnerian traits. But with these external similarities, Wolf's dependence on Wagner's models ceases. In his intimate penetration of the poetic spirit of the text, Wolf appears a legitimate successor of Schubert and Schumann. Wolf's songs are symphonic poems in miniature, artistically designed and admirably arranged for voice and piano, the combination in which he was a master.

WORKS

FOR THE DRAMATIC STAGE: Incidental music to Ibsen's Das Fest auf Solhaug (Vienna, Nov. 21, 1891); Der Corregidor, 4-act comedy opera, after Alarcón's El Sombrero de tres picos (Mannheim, June 7, 1896; revised version, Strasbourg, April 29, 1898); Manuel Venegas, 3-act tragic opera, text after Alarcón's El Niño de la Bola (fragments performed in concert form, Mannheim, March 1, 1903). CHORAL WORKS: 6 geistliche a cappella Chöre (1881; ed. by E. Thomas; arranged for men's voices by Max Reger); Christnacht for solo voices, chorus, and orch. (1886-89); Elfenlied for soprano solo, chorus, and orch. (1889-91); Dem Vaterland for male chorus and orch. (1890; many revisions). INSTRUMENTAL WORKS: string quartet in D minor (1878-84); Penthesilea, symph. poem after Kleist (1883-85); Italienische Serenade (1892; a transcription of the serenade in G major for string quartet, 1887); fragments from an early symph. in D minor and from a violin concerto. SONGS: 12 Lieder aus der Jugendzeit (1888); Lieder nach verschiedenen Dichtern, 31 songs (1877-97); Gedichte von Mörike, 53 songs (1888); Gedichte von Eichendorff, 20 songs (1886-88); Gedichte von Goethe, 51 songs (1888-89); Spanisches Liederbuch, 44 songs after Geibel and Heyse (1889-90); Italienisches Liederbuch, 46 songs after Heyse, in 2 parts: 22 songs (1890-91), 24 songs (1896). 20 of the songs were orchestrated by Wolf; others by Max Reger. 40 previously unpublished songs, mostly of the earliest period, were publ. in Leipzig in 1936, in 4 vols. as Nachgelassene Werke, edited by R. Haas and H. Schultz; several piano pieces (mostly juvenilia) are in MS; 2 early piano sonatas remain incomplete. Wolf's collected writings were brought out by R. Batka and H. Werner as Hugo Wolfs musikalische Kritiken (Leipzig, 1911). A complete ed. of the songs was publ. by Peters (Leipzig, 1935).

BIBLIOGRAPHY—A. BIOGRAPHY: P. Müller, Erinnerungen an Hugo Wolf, in 'Die Musik' (March-April, 1903); M. Haberlandt, Hugo Wolf. Erinnerungen und Gedanken (Leipzig, 1903; 2nd ed., Darmstadt, 1911); E. Decsey, Hugo Wolf (4 vols., Berlin, 1903-06; new ed. in 1 vol., 1919; the standard work for facts and sources); P. Müller, Hugo Wolf (Berlin, 1904); E. Schmitz, Hugo Wolf (Leipzig, 1906); E. Newman, Hugo Wolf (London, 1907); M. Morold, Hugo Wolf (Leipzig, 1912; 2nd ed., 1920); H. Werner, Hugo Wolf in Maierling (Leipzig, 1913) and Der Hugo Wolf-Verein in Wien (Regensburg, 1922); G. Schur, Erinnerungen an Hugo Wolf (Regensburg, 1922); H. Werner, Hugo Wolf in Perchtoldsdorf (Regensburg, 1925) and Hugo Wolf und der wiener akademische Wagner-Verein (Regensburg, 1926); K. Grunsky, Hugo Wolf (Leipzig, 1928); B. B. Viterbi, Hugo Wolf (in Italian; Rome, 1931); H. Schouten, Hugo Wolf: Mensch en Componist (in Dutch; Amsterdam, 1935); A. von Ehrmann, Hugo Wolf. Sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1937); R. Litterscheid, Hugo Wolf (Potsdam, 1939); M. von Graedener-Hattingberg, Hugo Wolf: vom Wesen und Werk des grössten Liedschöpfers (Vienna and Leipzig, 1941; revised, 1953); A. von Ehrmann, Johannes Brahms and Hugo Wolf: a Biographical Parallel, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1943); A. Orel, Hugo Wolf (Vienna, 1947); W. Reich, Hugo Wolf-Rhapsodie (Zürich, 1947); F. Walker, Hugo Wolf: A Biography (London, 1951); N. Loeser, Wolf (Haarlem, 1955). —B. CRITICISM, APPRECIATION: Gesammelte Aufsätze über Hugo Wolf (2 vols.; Vienna, 1898, 1899); E. von Hellmer, Der Corregidor. Kritische und biographische Beiträge zu seiner Würdigung (Vienna, 1900); K. Heckel, Hugo Wolf in seinem Verhältnis zu Richard Wagner (Munich, 1905); K. Grunsky, Hugo Wolf-Fest in Stuttgart (Stuttgart, 1906); R. Rolland, Musiciens d'aujourd'hui (1908; in English, N. Y., 1914); O. Bie, Das deutsche Lied (Berlin, 1926; pp. 199-246); V. O. Ludwig, Mörke in der Lyrik von Hugo Wolf (Bern and Leipzig, 1935); G. Bieri, Die Lieder von Hugo Wolf (Bern, 1935); A. Macckenburg, Hugo Wolf and Anton Bruckner, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1938); R. Hernried, Hugo Wolfs 'Corregidor' at Mannheim, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1940);

F. Walker, The History of Wolf's Italian Serenade, in the 'Mus. Review' (Aug., 1947). —C. CORRESPONDENCE: E. von Hellmer, Hugo Wolfs Briefe an Emil Kauffmann (Berlin, 1903); M. Haberlandt, Hugo Wolfs Briefe an Hugo Faist (Stuttgart, 1904); P. Müller, Ungedruckte Briefe von Hugo Wolf an Paul Müller, in 'Jahrbuch Peters' (1904); H. Werner, H. Wolfs Briefe an Oskar Grohe (Berlin, 1905); E. von Hellmer, Hugo Wolf. Eine Persönlichkeit in Briefen (Leipzig, 1912; family letters); Wolfs Briefe an Rosa Mayreder (Vienna, 1921); H. Nonveiller, Wolfs Briefe an Heinrich Potpeschnigg (Stuttgart, 1923); H. Werner, Wolfs Briefe an Henriette Lang (Regensburg, 1923); H. Werner, Some Unpublished Letters of Hugo Wolf, in 'Monthly Mus. Record' (1927). —See also the Hugo Wolf-Programme für alle Stimm-lagen, publ. by Peters (Leipzig, 1907); P. Müller, H. Wolf. Verzeichnis seiner Werke (Leipzig, 1908); K. Varges, Der Musikkritiker, Hugo Wolf (Magdeburg, 1934). An English transl. of the texts of all of Wolf's solo songs was publ. by Henry S. Drinkcr (N. Y., 1949).

Wolf, Johannes, eminent German musicologist; b. Berlin, April 17, 1869; d. Munich, May 25, 1947. He studied philology and musicology (with Philipp Spitta) at the Univ. of Berlin; also took courses at the Hochschule für Musik; taught music and conducted a choral society until 1896; then devoted several years to research work; in 1893, Dr. phil. in Leipzig; in 1902 became lecturer in musicology at Berlin Univ.; 1908, prof.; 1922, prof. emeritus; 1907-1927 also prof. of history of music at the Institut für Kirchenmusik; appointed curator of the collection of early music at the Royal Library in 1915; then was director of the music division there (1928-34). He was for many years president of the Deutsche Musikgesellschaft; with Oskar Fleischer he was co-editor of the 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1899-1904). In 1943 he went to live in Gmein; in 1946, in Munich. He made a particular study of medieval music, and especially the history of notation. —Publications: Geschichte der Mensural-Notation von 1250-1460 nach den theoretischen und praktischen Quellen (3 parts, 1904; very important); Deutsche Lieder des 15. Jahrhunderts ('Liliencron-Festschrift,' 1910); Handbuch der Notationskunde (Part I, 1913; Part II, 1919); Die Tonschriften ('Jedermanns Bücherei,' 1924); Kleine Musikgeschichte (1925), with mus. examples in Alte Sing- und Spielmusik (1926-31; 2nd ed. in 1 vol., 1931; the examples only, as Music of Earlier Times, N. Y., 1950); Zur Geschichte der Musikabteilung der Staatsbibliothek (1930); Altflämische Lieder des 14. und 15. Jahrhunderts (Basel Kongress-Bericht, 1924); L'Arte del biscanto da Jacopo da Bologna ('Kroyer-Festschrift,' 1933); Geschichte der Musik in allgemeinverständlicher Form (3 vols.; Leipzig, 1925-29; 2nd ed. of vol. II, 1934); etc. For the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' he ed. selected vocal works of Joh. Rud. Ahle (vol. V) and Rhaw's Neue deutsche Geistliche Gesänge (vol. XXXIV); for the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich,' Isaac's secular works (vols. XIV, 1, and XVI, 1); for the 'Vereniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis,' the complete works of Obrecht (from 1908; 30 vols.) and a collection of Dutch songs of the 16th century; also ed. the Musica Practica of Ramos de Pareja (Beiheft 2 of the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft, 1901); the 'Squarcialupi Codex' (publ. posthumously, 1955); the publications of the Paul Hirsch Library, including Luther's Deutsche Messe (Kassel, 1934); Musikalische Schrifttafeln (Bückeburg, 1927); editor-in-chief of the Corpus scriptorum de musica mediæ ævi for the Berlin Academy. —A 'Joh. Wolf-Festschrift' was publ. in 1929, ed. by Lott, Osthoff, and Wolffheim. —Cf. Otto Gombosi, Johannes Wolf, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1948); Otto Kinkeldey, Johannes Wolf, in the 'Journal of the American Musicological Society' (Spring, 1948).

Wolf, Ludwig, German pianist and composer; b. Frankfurt, 1804; d. Vienna, Aug. 6, 1859. He studied composition with Seyfried; was skillful both as pianist and violinist; composed 3 string quartets; a piano quartet; 4 string trios; many other works in MS.

Wolf, William, German pianist; b. Breslau, April 22, 1838; d. Berlin, Jan. 8, 1913. He studied with Th. Kullak; in 1881 established himself in Berlin as a teacher; contributed to musical periodicals; wrote Musik-Ästhetik in kurzer und gemeinverständlicher Darstellung (2 vols., 1895, 1906); a collection of essays appeared as Gesammelte musikästhetische Aufsätze (1894).

Wolf-Ferrari, Ermanno, opera composer; b. Venice, Jan. 12, 1876; d. there, Jan. 21, 1948. His mother was Italian; his father was a well-known German painter. Wolf-Ferrari was sent to Rome to study art, but became interested in opera, and decided to devote himself to music; accordingly, he was sent to Munich where he studied with Rheinberger (1893-95). In 1899 he returned to Venice, where his oratorio, La Sulamite was successfully performed. This was followed by the production of his first opera Cenerentola (1900). From 1902 to 1907 he was director of the Liceo Benedetto Marcello in Venice; then taught at the Salzburg Mozarteum; lived mostly in Neu-Biberg, near Munich; obtained his first success with the production of the comic opera Le Donne curiose (Munich, 1903); the next opera, I quattro rusteghi (Munich, 1906), was also well received; there followed his little masterpiece, Il Segreto di Susanna, a 1-act opera buffa in the style of the Italian 'verismo' (Susanna's secret being not infidelity, as her husband suspected, but indulgence in surreptitious smoking). Turning towards grand opera, he wrote I Gioielli della Madonna (The Jewels of the Madonna); it was brought out at Berlin in 1911, and soon became a repertory piece everywhere; he continued to compose, but his later operas failed to match the appeal of his early creations. —Works: Operas: Cenerentola (Venice, Feb. 22, 1900; in Bremen as Aschenbrödel, Jan. 31, 1902); Le Donne curiose (Munich, Nov. 27, 1903; in German as Die neugierigen Frauen; in Italian, N. Y., Jan. 3, 1912); I quattro rusteghi (Munich, March 19, 1906; in German as Die vier Grobianen); Il Segreto di Susanna (Munich, Dec. 4, 1909; in German as Susannens Geheimnis; in Italian, N. Y., March 14, 1911); I Gioielli della Madonna (Berlin, Dec. 23, 1911; in German as Der Schmuck der Madonna; in Italian, Chicago, Jan. 16, 1912; in English, as The Jewels of the Madonna, N.Y., Oct. 14, 1913); L'Amore medico, after Molière (Dresden, Dec. 4, 1913; in German, as Der Liebhaber als Arzt; in Italian, N. Y., Metropolitan Opera, March 25, 1914); Gli Amanti sposi (Venice, Feb. 19, 1925; Veste di cielo (Munich, April 21, 1927; in German as Das Himmelskleid); Sly, after the prologue to Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew (Milan, La Scala, Dec. 29, 1927; in Italian as La Leggenda del dormiente risvegliato); La Vedova scaltra, after Goldoni (Rome, March 5, 1931); Il Campiello, after Goldoni (Milan, Feb. 12, 1936); La Dama boba, after Lope de Vega (Milan, Feb. 1, 1939); Gli dei a Tebe (Hanover, June 5, 1943; in German as Der Kuckuck in Theben); also a revision of Mozart's Idomeneo (Munich, June 15, 1931). Other works: La Sulamite, biblical cantata (1899); Talitha kumi, mystery for solo voices, chorus, and orch. (1900); La Vita nuova, after Dante, oratorio (Munich, Feb. 21, 1903; N. Y., Dec. 4, 1907); Serenade for string orch.; a Kammersymphonie (1901); Idillio-concertino for oboe, string orch., and 2 horns (Venice Festival, 1932); Suite-concertino for bassoon, string orch., and 2 horns (Rome, March 26, 1933); Suite veneziana, for orch. (1936); Arabeschi for orch. (1937); Divertimento for orch. (1938); Kleines Konzert for English horn and orch. (posthumous; Salzburg, Jan. 18, 1955); 2 violin sonatas; 2 piano trios; a string quartet; a piano quintet; piano pieces; songs. — Cf. H. Teibler, Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari, in vol. I of 'Monographien moderner Musiker' (Leipzig, 1906); E. L. Stahl, Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari (Salzburg, 1936); R. de Rensis, Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari, la sua vita d'artista (Milan, 1937); A. C. Grisson, Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari: Lebensbeschreibung (Regensburg, 1941); J. Ringo, Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari: an Appreciation of His Work, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (July-Sept., 1949).

Wolfe, Jacques, American composer and teacher; b. Botoshan, Rumania, April 29, 1896. He was brought to the U. S. as a child; was educated in N. Y.; studied music at the Institute of Musical Art with Goetschius, Robinson, and Friskin (graduated in 1915). During World War I he was a clarinetist in the 50th Infantry Band; then was sent to North Carolina, where he studied Negro spirituals. Many of his songs are in the manner of spirituals; some of them acquired great popularity (De Glory Road, Gwine to Hebb'n, Halleluja Rhythm, Short'nin' Bread, etc.); he also wrote Betsy's Boy, The Hand-Organ Man, Sailormen, British Children's Prayer; wrote the music for Roark Bradford's play John Henry (N. Y., 1939); numerous choral works; piano pieces. 1958, living in Florida.

Wolfe, Felix, pianist and conductor; b. Hanover, Germany, Sept. 2, 1892. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Max Reger (theory) and R. Teichmüller (piano); later in Strasbourg with Pfitzner (composition); conducted opera at Breslau, Essen, and Dortmund (until 1933); then went to France; in 1938 came to the U. S. and was appointed assistant conductor at the Metropolitan Opera House; subsequently joined the faculty of the New England Cons. in Boston, as vocal teacher. He publ. piano scores of operas by Richard Strauss and Pfitzner; made adaptations of other operas.

Wolff, Albert (Louis), French conductor; b. Paris, Jan. 19, 1884. He studied at the Paris Cons.; in 1908 became chorusmaster at the Opéra-Comique, and was appointed conductor there in 1911; from 1919 to 1921 he was conductor of the French repertory at the Metropolitan Opera House; conducted the world première of his opera, L'Oiseau bleu, there on Dec. 27, 1919. In 1922 he succeeded Massenet as 1st conductor at the Opéra-Comique; from 1928 to 1934, conductor of the Concerts Lamoureux in Paris; from 1934 to 1940, of the Concerts Pasdeloup; toured in South America (1940-45); then returned to Paris; continued to conduct occasionally at the Opéra-Comique. — Cf. S. Wolff, Albert Wolff, Doyen de l'Opéra-Comique, in 'Le Guide du Concert et du Disque' (Oct. 3, 1958).

Wolff, Auguste (Désiré Bernard), French pianist and piano manufacturer; b. Paris, May 3, 1821; d. there, Feb. 3, 1887. He studied piano with Zimmerman at the Paris Cons. and composition with Halévy; after a few years of teaching, he joined the firm of the piano maker Camille Pleyel in 1852, succeeding him as head in 1855; the firm then became known as Pleyel-Wolff & Cie.

Wolff, Édouard, Polish pianist and composer; b. Warsaw, Sept. 15, 1816; d. Paris, Oct. 16, 1880. He studied in Warsaw with Zawadski (piano) and Elsner (composition); then was a piano pupil of Würfel in Vienna. In 1835 he settled in Paris, and became an esteemed teacher; he was a friend of Chopin, and imitated him in his piano music. He publ. 350 opus numbers for piano, among them several albums of études; a waltz, La Favorite; Chansons polonaises originales; Tarentelle; Chansons bacchiques; a piano concerto; also 30 celebrated duos for piano and violin (with de Bériot), and 8 more (with Vieuxtemps). His sister, Regina Wolff, a pianist, was the mother of Henryk Wieniawski.

Wolff, Erich, Austrian pianist; b. Vienna, Dec. 3, 1874; d. New York, March 20, 1913 (while on a concert tour). He studied in Vienna with Anton Door (piano); lived in Vienna, and (from 1906) in Berlin; became well known as an excellent accompanist of singers. A volume of 60 of his German songs was publ. posthumously, eliciting great praise. He also wrote a violin concerto and some chamber music.

Wolff, Ernst Victor, pianist and harpsichordist; b. Berlin, Aug. 6, 1889. He studied piano with Ph. Scharwenka in Berlin; musicology at the Univ. of Berlin; Dr. phil.

there with the dissertation Robert Schumanns Lieder in ersten und späteren Fassungen (Leipzig, 1914); was active in Germany as harpsichord player; lived mostly in Berlin until 1933; then went to London; in 1936 settled in N. Y. as teacher. Author of With Reason and Rhyme (New Haven, 1957).

Wolff, Hellmuth Christian, musicologist and composer; b. Zürich, May 23, 1906. He studied musicology in Berlin with Abert, Schering, Blume, and Sachs; 1932, Dr. phil. for his dissertation Die venezianische Oper in der 2. Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1937); from 1947, instructor of musicology at the Univ. of Leipzig; living in Halle. —Works: oboe concerto (1933); Inferno 1944, symph. poem (1946); piano concerto (1948); violin concerto (1948); several scenic oratorios (Esther, Der Tod des Orpheus, etc.); several string quartets; a violin sonata; a viola sonata; a cello sonata; choruses; song cycles; numerous editions of works by Handel, Telemann, J. J. Fux, J. G. Graun, etc. —Author of Die Musik der alten Niederländer (Leipzig, 1956); Die Händel-Oper auf der modernen Bühne (Leipzig, 1957).

Wolff, Hermann, German concert manager; b. Cologne, Sept. 4, 1845; d. Berlin, Feb. 3, 1902. He was a pupil of Franz Kroll and Würst; was editor of the 'Neue Berliner Musikzeitung' (1878-79); co-editor of the 'Musikwelt.' In 1881 he founded the Hermann Wolff Concert Management, which became famous; it was later styled H. Wolff & J. Sachs (until 1935). He also composed piano pieces and songs. —Cf. E. Stargardt-Wolff, Wegbereiter grosser Musiker (Berlin, 1954).

Wolff, Max, Austrian operetta composer; b. Moravia, Feb., 1840; d. Vienna, March 23, 1886. He studied music with Marx and Dessoff; became a successful composer of operettas, of which the following were produced in Vienna; Die Pilger (Sept. 6, 1872); Die Porträt-Dame (March 1, 1877); Césarine (Dec. 13, 1878).

Wolff, Werner, conductor and writer on music; b. Berlin, Oct. 2, 1883. He was the son of the concert manager Hermann Wolff (q. v.); studied with W. Klatte; was opera conductor in Vienna, Prague, Danzig, and Düsseldorf; from 1917 to 1932, conducted at the Hamburg Opera; in 1933, led the Wagner Memorial Festival in Venice, on the occasion of the semicentennial of Wagner's death. In 1938 he settled in the U. S.; was head of the music department at Tennessee Wesleyan College; in 1943 became director and conductor of the Chattanooga Opera Association; from 1950, columnist and music critic for the 'Chattanooga Daily Times.' He wrote the first full-length biography of Bruckner in English, Anton Bruckner, Rustic Genius (N. Y., 1942; revised German ed. as Anton Bruckner: Genie und Einfalt, Zürich, 1948); composed some symphonic and chamber music; piano pieces; songs.

Wolffers, Jules, American pianist, teacher, and music critic; b. Antwerp, Belgium, May 22, 1908. He attended school in London (1915-20); in 1922 came to the U. S. and settled in Boston; studied at the Boston English High School; piano with Hans Ebel; organ with Henry Gideon; theory and composition with Hugo Leichtentritt. He gave concerts in N. Y. and Boston; also piano-violin recitals with his wife, Harriet Elkind Wolffers; conducted choral groups and instrumental ensembles; associate conductor of the Civic Symph. Orch., Boston, 1947-50. He was appointed to the faculty of Boston Univ. in 1940; associate prof. of piano, 1953; administrative assistant to the Dean, 1954-57; 1957, chairman of the Division of Music (College of Music) of the Boston Univ. School of Fine and Applied Arts.

Wolffheim, Werner (Joachim), German musicologist; b. Berlin, Aug. 1, 1877; d. there, Oct. 26, 1930. While studying jurisprudence in Munich and Berlin (1895-98), he took courses in musicology with Sandberger and Fleischer; later studied with Kretzschmar and Johannes Wolf. With H. Springer and Max Schneider he was co-editor of 'Miscellanea bio-bibliographica' (supplement to Eitner's 'Quellen-Lexikon'); edited the piano concertos for Breitkopf & Härtel's complete ed. of Haydn's works, and prepared (with Kretzschmar) a new ed. of Spitta's life of Bach. He formed a valuable music library (catalogue in 2 vols.), which he sold in 1928-29.

Wolfinsohn, Wolfe, violinist and teacher; b. Cape Town, South Africa, Aug. 3, 1899. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London, graduating in 1917; settled in the U. S. in 1922; taught at the David Mannes Music School (1922-32); was 1st violinist of the Lenox String Quartet (1926-29); in 1929 founded the Stradivarius Quartet. In 1939 he settled in Boston as teacher and chamber music player.

Wölfl (Woelfl, Wölffl), Joseph, Austrian pianist and composer; b. Salzburg, Dec. 24, 1773; d. London, May 21, 1812. He was a pupil of Leopold Mozart and Michael Haydn; served as a chorister at the Salzburg Cathedral (1783-86); was then in Vienna (1790-92) and Warsaw (1793); again in Vienna from 1795; was considered Beethoven's rival as a pianist; brought out 4 operas with some success; married the actress Therese Klemm. Traveling through Germany, he gave numerous concerts as pianist, reaching Paris in 1801; there he settled for several years; produced 2 French operas and was acclaimed as a piano virtuoso. In 1805 he went to London, and almost immediately established himself in the favor of the public as pianist and teacher. He was, however, of an eccentric disposition, and became involved in all sorts of trouble. He died in obscurity at the age of 38. In his professional life, he emphasized the sensational element; gave fanciful titles to his works; named one of his piano sonatas Ne plus ultra, and claimed that it was the most difficult piece ever written. —Works: operas: Der Höllenberg (Vienna, Nov. 21, 1795), Der Kopf ohne Mann (Vienna, Dec. 3, 1798), Das schöne Milchmädchen (Vienna, Jan. 5, 1797), Das trojanische Pferd (Vienna, 1797), L'Amour romanesque (Paris, 1804), Fernando, ou Les Maures (Paris, 1805); the ballets La Surprise de Diane (London, Dec. 21, 1805) and Alzire (London, Jan. 27, 1807); 7 piano concertos, including Le Calme and Concerto militaire; other publ. compositions are 2 symphonies, 9 string quartets, 12 piano trios, 2 trios for 2 clarinets and bassoon; 42 violin sonatas; 58 piano sonatas; 24 sets of variations for piano; a Méthode de piano (with 100 studies); sonatas for 4 hands; waltzes, polonaises, rondos, fantasias, etc.; also songs. Some of his piano pieces were publ. in monthly issues, under the title The Harmonic Budget (London, 1810). —Cf. R. Duval, Un Rival de Beethoven: Joseph Woelfl, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1898; also separately, Turin, 1898); R. Baum, Joseph Wölfl. Leben, Klavierwerke, Klavierkammermusik und Klavierkonzerte (Kassel, 1928).

Wolfram, Joseph Maria, Bohemian composer; b. Dobruzan, July 21, 1789; d. Teplitz, Sept. 30, 1839. He studied with J. A. Koželuch in Prague; moved to Vienna, as music teacher; then became a government official at Theusing, and mayor of Teplitz (1824). He brought out several successful operas: Maja und Alpino (Prague, May 24, 1826), Der Bergmönch (Dresden, March 14, 1830), Das Schloss Candra (Dresden, Dec. 1, 1832); a Missa nuptialis and some piano pieces and songs by him were published.

Wolfrum, Philipp, German musicologist and composer; b. Schwarzenbach am Wald, Dec. 17, 1854; d. Samaden, May 8, 1919. He was a pupil of Rheinberger and Wüllner in Munich; 1878-84, music teacher in Bamberg; from 1884, organist at Heidelberg Univ., where he also conducted several choral societies; became prof. of musicology there in 1898; Dr. phil. (Leipzig Univ., 1890) with the dissertation, Die Entstehung und erste Entwicklung des deutschen evangelischen Kirchenliedes in musikalischer Beziehung. Dr. theol. (honorary, Heidelberg Univ., 1910). Author of Rhythmisch! Eine hymnologische Streitschrift (1894; polemic directed against C. H. Cornill); Schluss-Erwidern auf die 'nichtrhythmischen' Auslassungen des Prof. C. H. Cornill in Heidelberg (rebuttal in the polemics with Cornill; 1895); Joh. Seb. Bach (2 vols., 1906; 2nd ed. of vol. 1, 1910); Die evangelische Kirchenmusik. Ihr Stand und ihre Weiterentwicklung (1914); Luther und Bach (1917); Luther und die Musik (1918). Compositions: Ein Weihnachtsmysterium, a Christmas play, for chorus and orch. (1899); Das grosse Hallelujah, for male chorus and orch.; piano quintet; string quartet; piano trio; cello sonata; 3 organ sonatas; Ballade for piano; mixed choruses; edited 'Der evangelische Kirchenchor' (collection of 44 hymns) and 'Pfälzisches Melodienbuch.' —Cf. K. Hasse, Philipp Wolfrum, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 2; 1919).

Wolfsohn, Juliusz, Polish pianist and composer; b. Warsaw, Jan. 7, 1880. He studied piano with Michalowski in Warsaw, Pugno in Paris, and Leschetizky in Vienna; in 1926 settled in the U. S. He composed a number of works based on Jewish melodies (Jüdische Rhapsodie, Hebraic Suite, etc.).

Wolfurt, Kurt von, German composer; b. Lettin, Sept. 7, 1880; d. Munich, Feb. 25, 1957. He belonged to the German Baltic nobility; was educated in St. Petersburg; then studied science at the univs. of Dorpat, Leipzig, and Munich; composition with Max Reger in Munich, where he settled; conducted opera in Strasbourg, Kottbus, and Stockholm; also pursued a business career as director of a paper manufacturing company in Latvia; lived mostly in Berlin and Munich; wrote music criticism; was lecturer at the Univ. of Göttingen (1945); visiting prof. at the Univ. of Johannesburg, South Africa (1949-52); in 1952 returned to Munich. —Works: operas: Die Verwandlungen des Narren (1900) and Dame Kobold (Kassel, March 14, 1940); Faust, after Goethe, for soprano, chorus, and orch.; Lobgesang, for men's chorus and orch.; Hymnus, for soprano, chorus, and orch.; Gesang des Meeres, symph. poem; Concerto grosso; piano concerto; chamber music; etc. He was the author of biographies of Mussorgsky (Stuttgart, 1927) and Tchaikovsky (Zürich, 1952). —Cf. special issue of the 'Zeitschrift für Musik' (Oct., 1940).

Wolgast, Johannes, German musicologist; b. Kiel, July 2, 1891; d. Leipzig, Oct. 24, 1932. He studied with Riemann, Straube, and Pembaur in Leipzig; was in the German army during World War I; after the Armistice, continued his studies with Schering and Abert in Berlin; Dr. phil., 1923, with the dissertation, Georg Böhm; then taught at the Kirchenmusik-Institut in Leipzig and at the Leipzig Cons.; edited the collected works of Georg Böhm (2 vols.; 1927, 1932); compiled various useful catalogues; contributed articles to German musical magazines.

Wolkenstein, Oswald von, one of the last of the Minnesänger; b. Burg Wolkenstein, Grödener Tal (Tyrol), 1377; d. in his castle Burg Hauenstein, Aug. 2, 1445. He led an adventurous life, traveling through Russia, Persia, Greece, Spain, France, Italy (with King Ruprecht in 1401), etc. For several years (from 1415) he was in the service of King (later Emperor) Sigismund, whom he accompanied to the Council of Constance. The musical settings that he devised for his poems are notable for their genuine melodic quality; some of them are in 2-part and 3-part counterpoint; there are also examples of canonic imitation. His works were edited by Schatz and Koller for the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 18). —Cf. J. Beyrich, Untersuchungen über den Stil Oswalds von Wolkenstein (dissertation, Leipzig, 1910); W. Türlér, Stilistische Studien zu Oswald von Wolkenstein (Heidelberg, 1920); G. W. Marold, Kommentar zu den Liedern Wolkensteins (dissertation, Göttingen, 1927); J. Schatz, Sprache und Wortschatz Oswalds von Wolkenstein (Vienna, 1930); A. Wolkenstein-Rodenegg, Oswald von Wolkenstein (Innsbruck, 1930); H. Loewenstein, Wort und Ton bei Oswald von Wolkenstein (dissertation, Königsberg, 1933); W. Salmen, Werdegang und Lebensfülle des Oswald von Wolkenstein, in 'Musica Disciplina' (1953).

Wollanck, Friedrich, German composer; b. Berlin, Nov. 3, 1782; d. there, Sept. 6, 1831. He was a lawyer and held a government position as counsellor of the city court in Berlin. His works include an opera, Der Alpenhirt (Berlin, 1811); a 'Liederspiel,' Thibaut von Lowis; 2 Masses; a Requiem and other church music; more than 100 songs; 33 part-songs; 3 string quartets; 2 string sextets; other chamber music; piano sonatas.

Wolle, John Frederick, American choral conductor and organist; b. Bethlehem, Pa., April 4, 1863; d. there, Jan. 12, 1933. After studying in Munich with Rheinberger (1884-85), he served as organist at the Moravian Church in Bethlehem (1885-1905) and in other churches; conducted choral societies in Harrisburg, York, and Lancaster; founded and led the Choral Union in Bethlehem (1882-92). On March 27, 1900, he inaugurated his most famous choral organization, the 'Bach Choir' (80 voices; greatly enlarged in subsequent decades) with the 1st complete American performance of Bach's Mass in B minor. Its concerts were interrupted during Wolle's absence from 1905 to 1911, when he was prof. of music at the Univ. of California, Berkeley; but were resumed upon his return to Bethlehem in 1911. —Cf. R. Walters, The Bethlehem Bach Choir (Boston, 1918); M. A. DeWolfe Howe, 'Venite in Bethlehem'—The Major Chord, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1942).

Wolle, Peter, 'Moravian' minister, bishop, and composer; b. New Herrnhut, St. Thomas, West Indies, Jan. 5, 1792; d. Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 14, 1871. He was consecrated to the episcopacy on Sept. 26, 1845. He left several compositions; edited the 'Moravian Tune Book' (1836). One of his anthems, for double chorus with strings and organ, is included in the series, 'Music of the Moravians in America,' publ. by the N. Y. Public Library (1939). —Cf. A. G. Rau and H. T. David, A Catalogue of Music by American Moravians (Bethlehem, 1938).

Wollenhaupt, Hermann Adolf, German pianist and composer; b. Schkeuditz, near Leipzig, Sept. 27, 1827; d. New York, Sept. 18, 1863. He studied in Leipzig with Julius Knorr (piano) and Moritz Hauptmann (composition). In 1845 he settled in N. Y.; made a reputation as a concert pianist and teacher; in 1855 he toured in Europe. He wrote about 100 brilliant piano pieces, among them Galop di bravura, Valses styriennes, Improvisation, Nocturne, and Scherzo brillante; he also made numerous transcriptions and arrangements.

WOLLGANDT — WOLZOGEN

Wollgandt, Edgar, German violinist and teacher; b. Wiesbaden, July 18, 1880; d. Halle, Dec. 25, 1949. He studied violin with H. Heermann in Frankfurt; in 1903 became concertmaster of the Gewandhaus Orch., Leipzig; also was 1st violin of the Gewandhaus Quartet. He taught for many years in Leipzig, and in 1947 became prof. of the Musik Hochschule in Halle.

Wolpe, Stefan, composer; b. Berlin, Aug. 25, 1902, of Russian-Jewish and Austrian parentage. He studied with Paul Juon and Schreker at the State Academy of Music in Berlin; in 1933 went to Palestine; in 1938, settled in America, where he devoted himself to teaching and composing. His music shows traces of many successive influences: folk music, jazz, Hebrew and oriental melos, atonality, and modified 12-tone technique. —Works: the operas Schöne Geschichten (1927) and Zeus und Elida (1927, based on jazz rhythms); cantatas: The Passion of Man (1929), On the Education of Man (1930), About Sport (1931), Israel and his Land (1939), and Unnamed Lands (after Whitman, 1940); the ballet The Man from Midian (1942); much chamber music for various groups of instruments; Quintet with Voice, for baritone, horn, cello, harp, clarinet, and piano (N. Y., May 14, 1958). —Cf. M. Bauer, Stefan Wolpe, in 'Modern Music' (vol. 17; 1939).

Wolpert, Franz Alfons, German composer and theorist; b. Wiesentheid, Oct. 11, 1917. He studied in Regensburg (1937-39) with C. Thiel; then in Salzburg with Wolf-Ferrari (1939-41); was appointed teacher at the Mozarteum in 1941. —Works: song cycles to poems by Nietzsche, Eichendorff, Uhland, Lenau, Goethe, etc.; violin sonata; viola sonata; cello sonata; clarinet trio; 2 piano sonatas; 4 Shakespeare sonnets for voice and string trio; made arrangements for various instrumental combinations of Mozart's works; publ. Neue Harmonik (Berlin, 1950).

Wolstenholme, William, blind English organist and composer; b. Blackburn, Lancashire, Feb. 24, 1865; d. London, July 23, 1931. He entered the College for Blind Sons of Gentlemen in Worcester at the age of 9; studied with Dr. Done, the Cathedral organist there; Mus. Bac., Oxford, 1887; subsequently filled various posts as church organist in Blackburn, and (from 1902) in London. In 1908 he visited the U. S. —Works: Lord Ullin's Daughter, cantata; Sir Humphrey Gilbert, ballad for women's voices; To Take the Air, madrigal; suite in F for string orch.; about 100 compositions for organ; wind quintet; piano quartet; 2 string quartets; piano trio; violin sonata; piano pieces: Impromptu-Polonaise, Marche humoresque, Fantasy-Intermezzo, etc.; songs and part-songs. —Cf. F. H. Wood, William Wolstenholme, in the 'Mus. Times' (1931).

Woltmann, Frederick, American composer; b. Flushing, N. Y., May 13, 1908. He was educated at Brooklyn Polytechnic and Columbia Univ.; then studied at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., with Bernard Rogers and Howard Hanson (graduated in 1933). He received the American Prix de Rome in 1937, and studied with Pizzetti in Italy. —Works: Dance of the Torch Bearers for orch. (1932); Poem for Flute and Orch. (Rochester, Nov. 17, 1935); Rhapsody for Horn and Orch. (Rochester, Dec. 12, 1935); Legend, for cello and orch. (1936); Songs for Autumn, for soprano, baritone, and orch. (1937); piano concerto (1937); The Pool of Pegasus, symph. poem (1937); From Dover Beach (1938); The Coliseum at Night, symph. poem (1939); Solitude, for orch. (1942); From 'Leaves of Grass', after Walt Whitman, for voice and orch. (1946); Songs from a Chinese Lute, for voice and 33 instruments (1936); scherzo for 8 wind instruments (1937); songs.

Wolzogen (vohl'-tsoh-gen), Alfred, Freiherr von, German writer on music; b. Frankfurt, May 27, 1823; d. San Remo, Jan. 14, 1883. From 1868 he was Intendant of the court theater at Schwerin. Author of Über Theater und Musik (Breslau, 1860); Über die szenische Darstellung von Mozarts 'Don Giovanni' (1860); Wilhelms Schröder-Devrient (Leipzig, 1863); new German versions of Mozart's Don Giovanni and Schauspieldirektor; also articles in periodicals.

Wolzogen, Ernst, Freiherr von, German poet and musical journalist; son of Alfred von Wolzogen and half-brother of Hans von Wolzogen; b. Breslau, April 23, 1855; d. Munich, July 30, 1934. He studied at the Universities of Strasbourg and Leipzig. In 1901 he established in Berlin (with O. J. Bierbaum and F. Wedekind) the 'Überbrettel,' a kind of artistic cabaret for the production of dramatic pieces, pantomimes, poems with recitation and music, etc., most of them reflecting or satirizing contemporary German life; Oskar Straus provided most of the music, and Schoenberg contributed some of the numbers; 2 journals, 'Das moderne Brett!' and 'Bühne und Brett!', were publ. for a year or so to promote the ideas of the enterprise; but the cabaret closed after 2 sensationally successful seasons. Ernst von Wolzogen publ. 2 books dealing with music: Der Kraftmayr (1897; humorous novel with Liszt as the central figure; English transl. as Florian Mayr, 1914) and Ansichten und Aussichten (1908; essays). — His wife, Elsa Laura (née Seemann von Mangern), became known as a singer, making a specialty of songs with lute accompaniment; with her husband she made a tour of the U. S. (1910-11); publ. 7 vols. of folk-songs with lute accompaniment (Meine Lieder zur Laute). — Cf. A. Hertwig, Ernst von Wolzogens 'Überbrett!' in Wort und Bild (Berlin, 1901).

Wolzogen, Hans, Freiherr von, German writer on music and authority on Wagner; b. Potsdam, Nov. 13, 1848; d. Bayreuth, June 2, 1938. He studied mythology and comparative philology in Berlin (1868-71); then devoted himself to literature; in 1878, at Wagner's invitation, he became editor of the 'Bayreuther Blätter' and lived in Bayreuth most of his life. He popularized the term 'Leitmotiv' (first used by F. W. Jähns, q. v.) in his Motive in Wagners 'Götterdämmerung', publ. in the 'Musikalisches Wochenblatt' in 1887 (Wagner's preferred term was 'Grundthema'). His many writings include Der Nibelungenmythos in Sage und Literatur (1876); Thematischer Leitaden durch die Musik von R. Wagners Festspiel 'Der Ring des Nibelungen' (1876; 4th ed. as Erläuterungen zu R. Wagners Nibelungendrama, 1878); Die Tragödie in Bayreuth und ihr Satyrspiel (1876; 5th ed., 1881); Poetische Lautsymbolik. Psychische Wirkungen der Sprachlaute aus R. Wagners 'Ring des Nibelungen' (1876; 3rd ed., 1897); Grundlage und Aufgabe des allgemeinen Patronatvereins zur Pflege und Erhaltung der Bühnenfestspiele in Bayreuth (1877); Die Sprache in Wagners Dichtungen (1877; 2nd ed., 1881); R. Wagners Tristan und Isolde (1880); Unsre Zeit und unsre Kunst (1881); Was ist Stil? was will Wagner? (1881); Die Religion des Mitleidens (1882); Parsifal. Ein thematischer Leitaden (1882; 21st printing, 1914); R. Wagners Heldengestalten erläutert (2nd ed., 1886); Wagneriana (1888); R. Wagner und die Tierwelt;

auch eine Biographie (1890, 3rd ed., 1910); Wagners Lebensbericht (1884; the original of The Work and Mission of My Life, publ. 1879 in the 'North American Review,' under Wagner's name); Erinnerungen an R. Wagner (1883); Die Idealisierung des Theaters (1885); Grossmeister deutscher Musik (1897); Wagner-Brevier (1904; in Strauss' series 'Die Musik'); R. Wagner (1905; in Remer's series 'Die Dichtung'); Musikalisch-dramatische Parallelen (1906); E. T. A. Hoffmann und R. Wagner (1906); Aus R. Wagners Geisteswelt (1908); Kunst und Kirche (1913); E. T. A. Hoffmann, der deutsche Geisterseher (1922); Lebensbilder (autobiographical; 1923); Wagner und seine Werke (1924); Wohltäterin Musik (1925); Musik und Theater (1929); edited Wagner's Ausgewählte Schriften über Staat und Kunst und Religion (1902; 3rd ed., 1914) and Entwürfe zu 'Die Meistersinger,' 'Tristan und Isolde' und 'Parsifal' (1907).

Wood, Charles, Irish organist and composer; b. Armagh, June 15, 1866; d. Cambridge, England, July 12, 1926. He studied at the Royal College of Music in London, and subsequently taught harmony there; received his Mus. Doc. degree, Cambridge, 1894. In 1924 he succeeded Stanford as prof. of music at Cambridge Univ. He wrote 6 string quartets (mostly in an Irish manner); vocal works with orch.: Ode on Time (1898), Dirge for Two Veterans (1901), Song of the Tempest (1902), Ballad of Dundee (1904); church music; edited a collection of Irish folksongs (1897).

Wood, David Duffie, blind American organist; b. Pittsburgh, March 2, 1838; d. Philadelphia, March 27, 1910. Having lost his eyesight by an accident at the age of 3, he was educated at the Penn. Institute for the Blind; from 1858 till his death he was instructor of music there. He was a fine organist; wrote anthems and songs. — Publ. A Dictionary of Musical Terms, for the Use of the Blind (Philadelphia, 1869).

Wood, Haydn, English violinist and composer; b. Slough, March 25, 1882. He entered the Royal College of Music in London at 15; studied there with Fernández Arbós (violin) and Stanford (composition); later studied with César Thomson in Brussels. A prolific composer, his works include 8 overtures, 8 rhapsodies for band, 18 orchestral suites, 31 entr'actes for orch., 12 violin solos, 2 flute pieces, 3 accordion solos, and about 200 songs. His Phantasy Quartet for strings received a Cobbett Prize.

Wood, Sir Henry J., eminent English conductor; b. London, March 3, 1869; d. Hitchin, Herts, Aug. 19, 1944. Of musical parentage, he was taught to play the piano by his mother; participated in family musicales from the age of 6; he was equally precocious on the organ; at the age of 10 he often acted as deputy organist, and gave organ recitals at the Fisheries Exhibition (1883) and at the Inventions Exhibition (1885). In 1886 he entered the Royal Academy of Music, where his teachers were Prout, Steggall, Macfarren, and García; won 4 medals. In 1888 he brought out some of his songs; then composed light operas and cantatas. But soon his ambition crystallized in the direction of conducting; he traveled with an opera company in 1889; then became assistant conductor at the Savoy Theatre (1890); was engaged as conductor for various other operatic enterprises. On Oct. 6, 1895 he began the 1st series of Promenade concerts (the famous 'Proms') in Queen's Hall, London, with an orch. of about 100 members. Their success was so conspicuous that a new series of concerts was inaugurated on Jan. 30, 1897, under Wood's direction, and flourished from the beginning. In 1899 he founded the Nottingham Orch.; also was appointed conductor of the Wolverhampton Festival Choral Society (1900), of the Sheffield Festival (1902-11), and of the Norwich Festival (1908). In 1904 he conducted in N. Y. He was married to Olga Urusova, a Russian noblewoman, and became greatly interested in Russian music, which he performed frequently at his concerts. He adopted a Russian pseudonym, Paul Klenovsky, for his compositions and arrangements, and supplied an imaginary biography of his alter ego for use in program notes. His wife died in 1909, and Wood married Muriel Greatorex in 1911. He was knighted in 1911. In 1918 he was offered the conductorship of the Boston Symph. Orch. as successor to Muck, but declined. In 1923 he was appointed prof. of conducting and orchestral playing at the Royal Academy of Music. In 1925 he conducted in California; in 1926 received the degree of Mus. Doc. (hon. c.) from Oxford Univ. Wood continued to conduct the Promenade Concerts almost to the end of his life, presenting the last concert on July 28, 1944. Among his popular arrangements are Chopin's Marche Funèbre, some works by Bach, and the Trumpet Voluntary (mistakenly attributed to Purcell, but actually by Jeremiah Clarke). He publ. The Gentle Art of Singing (4 vols.; 1927-28) and About Conducting (London, 1945), and edited the Handbook of Miniature Orchestral and Chamber Music Scores for J. W. Chester & Co. (1937); wrote an autobiography, My Life of Music (London, 1938). — Cf. R. Newmarch, Henry J. Wood, in the 'Living Masters of Music' series (London, 1904); R. Hill and others, Sir Henry Wood: Fifty Years of the 'Proms' (London, 1944); J. Wood, The Last Years of Henry J. Wood (London, 1954; with a foreword by Sir Malcolm Sargent).

Wood, Mary Knight, American pianist and composer; b. Easthampton, Mass., April 7, 1857; d. Florence, Dec. 20, 1944. She studied in Boston with B. J. Lang and in N. Y. with Huss; married A. B. Mason and went to live in Florence, where she remained for many years until her death. She publ. about 30 songs, among them Ashes of Roses, In Harbor, and Poppies.

Wood, Thomas, English composer and author; b. Chorley, Lancashire, Nov. 28, 1892; d. Bures, Essex, Nov. 19, 1950. He was educated at Exeter College, Oxford; then studied at the Royal College of Music with Stanford; was music director at Tonbridge School (1919-24); lecturer and precentor at Exeter College (1924-29). His extensive travels took him to the Far East and to the Arctic; his familiarity with the sea was reflected in many of his compositions (for chorus and orch.), such as 40 Singing Seamen (1925), Master Mariners (1927), Merchantmen (1934), and in A Seaman's Overture (for orch., 1927). He edited vol. II of the Oxford Song Book (1928; 3rd ed., 1937). His books include Music and Boyhood (1925) and the autobiographical True Thomas (1936); also publ. Cobbers (on his Australian tour of 1930-32), which became highly popular in England, and a sequel to it, Cobbers Campaigning (1940). — Cf. N. Coghill, Thomas Wood, in 'Music & Letters' (April, 1951).

Wood, William G., Irish organist; brother of Charles Wood; b. Armagh, Jan. 16, 1859; d. London, Sept. 25, 1895. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London; from 1886 till his death he was organist and music master at the Highgate Grammar School. He composed some fine organ music (3 canons, a sonata, Fantasia and Fugue, Introduction and Allegro, Minuet and Trio, etc.).

Woodbury (original name, Woodberry), Isaac Baker, American composer of songs and music editor; b. Beverly, Mass., Oct.

23, 1819; d. Charleston, S. C., Oct. 26, 1858. Originally a blacksmith, he took up music, going to Europe in 1838 for study in Paris and London; upon his return he settled in Boston as teacher. From 1850 to his death he was an editor of a New York music magazine publ. successively as 'American Monthly Musical Review,' 'Musical Pioneer,' etc. In 1852, he made another trip to Europe. His collection of sacred songs, 'The Dulcimer,' enjoyed great popularity; he also compiled a 'Collection of Church Music' for the Boston Music Educational Society (1842) and 'The Choral' (1845); publ. Woodbury's Self-Instructor in Musical Composition and Thorough-Bass, and many secular songs. —Cf. F. J. Metcalf, American Writers and Compilers of Sacred Music (1925). See also 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Wood-Hill, Mabel, American composer; b. Brooklyn, March 12, 1870; d. Stamford, Conn., March 1, 1954. She was educated at Smith College and at Columbia Univ., where she studied composition with Rybner. She wrote songs and choruses; orchestrated pieces by Couperin (Louis XIV Suite) and Bach. Her pantomime, The Adventures of Pinocchio, was performed for the 1st time in N. Y. on April 13, 1931.

Woodhouse, George, English pianist; b. Cradley Heath, near Birmingham, Dec. 16, 1877; d. Southsea, Jan. 4, 1954. He studied in Birmingham and later took piano lessons with Leschetizky in Vienna. He established his own piano school in London; publ. The Artist at the Piano (London, 1910), Creative Technique (London, 1922), From Keyboard to Music (London, 1949), and A Realistic Approach to Piano Playing (London, 1953).

Woodman, Raymond Huntington, American organist and composer; b. Brooklyn, Jan. 18, 1861; d. there, Dec. 25, 1943. He studied piano with his father; theory with Dudley Buck; then went to Paris, where he took lessons in organ playing from César Franck (1888). He filled various posts as church organist and teacher in N. Y.; also taught theory and conducted a choral society in Brooklyn. He publ. about 150 compositions, among them anthems, organ pieces, piano pieces (Romance, The Brook, Spring Song, Three Album-Leaves, etc.); songs, of which A Birthday was especially successful.

Woods, Francis Cunningham, English organist and composer; b. London, Aug. 29, 1862; d. there, Sept. 21, 1929. He studied at the National Training School for Music under Sullivan, Prout, Stainer, and Cowen; after serving as organist at Brasenose College and Exeter College, was private organist to the Duke of Marlborough (1891-94); then prof. of organ and lecturer at Oxford Univ. (1890-95); in 1896 succeeded William G. Wood as organist and music master of the Highgate Grammar School, London. He composed King Harold, a 'historical cantata'; Greyport Legend, a ballad for baritone, men's chorus, and orch.; Old May-Day, cantata for women's voices and piano; The Lords of Labor, ode; some orchestral pieces; songs.

Woodworth, George Wallace, American choral conductor and music educator; b. Boston, Nov. 6, 1902. He was educated at Harvard Univ. (B. A., 1924; M. A., 1926); also studied at the Royal College of Music in London (1927-28). In 1925 he joined the staff of the music dept. at Harvard; prof. in 1948. In 1925 he became conductor of the Radcliffe Choral Society; in 1934, conductor of the Harvard Glee Club; and in 1940, Harvard Univ. organist and choirmaster for the Harvard Univ. Chapel, resigning all these posts in 1958 to devote himself to teaching. He conducted the Harvard-Radcliffe Chorus in a transcontinental tour in 1954, and the Harvard Glee Club on its European tour in 1956; led the Harvard-Radcliffe Chorus with the Boston Symph. in regular concerts during the seasons of 1943-44, 1951-52, and 1955-56; also in Tanglewood. He is the editor of 'Harvard-Radcliffe Choral Music' (G. Schirmer). He holds the honorary degree of Mus. Doc. (New England Cons., 1958); awarded Harvard Glee Club Medal (1958); Lowell Television Lecturer of Harvard Univ. (1959).

Wooldridge, Harry Ellis, English musicologist; b. Winchester, March 28, 1845; d. London, Feb. 13, 1917. While studying at Trinity College, Oxford (1860-64), he became deeply interested in painting and music; entered the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in 1865, at the same time beginning his researches regarding early music in the libraries of Oxford and London; from 1895 till his death he was Slade Prof. of Fine Arts at Oxford Univ. —Publ. The English Metrical Psalter (1890); The Polyphonic Period, being vols. I and II of the Oxford History of Music (1901, 1905; 2nd ed., revised by P. C. Buck, 1929-32); radically revised Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, and publ. it under the title

Old English Popular Music (2 vols., 1893); also edited 'Early English Harmony' (2 vols., 1897, 1913; pieces from the 10th to 15th centuries); 'The Yattendon Hymnal' (1899; with R. Bridges); Purcell's sacred compositions (vols. XIII, XIV, and XVIII of Novello's ed. of Purcell's complete works).

Wooler, Alfred, American music teacher and composer; b. Shipley, Yorkshire, May 11, 1867; d. Lake Winola, Pa., Aug. 7, 1937. He settled in the U. S. as a youth, and studied at the Univ. of Pennsylvania; taught harmony at Scranton, Buffalo, and N. Y.; also conducted choral societies. He composed about 250 anthems, songs, and part-songs; also piano pieces.

Woolf, Benjamin Edward, American composer and music critic; b. London, Feb. 16, 1836; d. Boston, Feb. 7, 1901. He was taken to America in 1839 by his father, who taught him the elements of music, and various instruments; studied under W. R. Bristow (organ) in N. Y.; conducted theater orchestras in Boston, Philadelphia, and New Orleans; in 1870 he was music and drama critic for the Boston 'Globe,' later for the 'Saturday Evening Gazette,' and from 1895 for the Boston 'Herald.' He composed string quartets, piano trios, and other chamber music; the 'operatic comedietta' Lawn Tennis, or Djakh and Djill (Boston, 1880); the comic opera Pounce & Co. (Boston, 1883); and an operetta Westward Ho! (Boston, Dec. 31, 1894).

Woolhouse, Wesley S. B., English mathematician and writer on musical subjects; b. North Shields, May 6, 1809; d. London, Aug. 12, 1893. He was head assistant at the Nautical Almanach Establishment. Publ. Essay on Musical Intervals, Harmonics, and the Temperament of the Musical Scale (1835; new ed., 1888); A Catechism of Music (1843); Treatise on Singing. He owned a fine collection of violins.

Woollen, Russell, American composer; b. Hartford, Conn., Jan. 7, 1923. He studied for the priesthood; attended the Pius X school of Liturgical Music, N. Y.; in 1948 studied Gregorian Chant at the Benedictine Abbey at Solesmes. After his ordination as a priest, he was assigned to the Catholic Univ. of America, Washington, D. C., where he taught liturgical music; continued his studies in composition with Nicolas Nabokov in Baltimore (1949-51), with Nadia Boulanger in Paris (1951), and with Walter Piston at Harvard Univ. (1953-55), returning to his post at Catholic Univ. in 1955. —Works: Missa causa nostrae laetitiae (1949); sonata for piano duo (1950); sextet for clarinet, string quartet, and piano (1951); Missa melismatica (1951); 40 ducts on Au Clair de la lune for recorders (1952); Shakespeare Sonnets for chorus a cappella (1952); piano quartet (1952); Apotheosis to the Blessed Virgin for chorus a cappella (1952); Mass No. 3 (1952); Holy Week Responsories for men's voices (1952-53); Mass in Major Modes (1953); quartet for flute and strings (1953); Toccata for orch. (1954-55); woodwind quintet (1955); piano trio (1956-57); Missa simplex (1956); Triptych for brass choir (1957); symph. No. 1 (1957-58); Missa Domus aurea (1957); Summer Jubilee Overture (Washington, D. C., June 26, 1958); motets; hymns; secular choruses; piano pieces; songs.

Woollett, Henri Édouard, French composer; b. (of English parentage) Le Havre, Aug. 13, 1864; d. there, Oct. 9, 1936. He studied in Paris with Pugno (piano) and Massenet (composition); returned to Le Havre, and established himself as a teacher; André Caplet was his student there. He also founded the Société d'Enseignement Musical, a free elementary music school, and the Schola Cantorum there (1920). —Works: Pierrot amoureux, a pantomime; La Rose de Sharon, 'poème lyrique' for orch.; Petite Suite for orch.; De l'aube à la nuit for vocal quartet and piano; 2 violin sonatas; a cello sonata; sonata for flute and piano; piano pieces (Nocturnes et pastorales, Pièces intimes, À travers la vie, etc.); songs. Author of Petit traité de prosodie (1903); Histoire de la musique depuis l'antiquité jusqu'à nos jours (4 vols., 1909-25); Histoire de l'orchestration (with Gabriel Picrné; in Lavignac's 'Encyclopédie'); Un Mélodiste français, René Lenormand (1930).

Wordsworth, William, English composer; b. London, Dec. 17, 1908. He studied with his father; then with Tovey at Edinburgh. He began to compose rather late in life, but compensated for it by a rapid development. His musical style is marked by a certain austerity of essential materials, and compactness of form. —Works: 4 symphonies (1936; 1944; 1948; 1954); a piano concerto (1946); 3 string quartets (1941; 1943; 1947); a piano quartet (1948); a violin sonata (1944); a cello sonata (1937); songs. —Cf. S. Bayliss, William Wordsworth, in the 'Chesterian' (April, 1950).

Work, Henry Clay, American composer of popular songs; b. Middletown, Conn., Oct. 1, 1832; d. Hartford, June 8, 1884. He was a printer by trade; entirely self-taught in music; his first success was We are coming, Sister Mary; other well-known songs are Grandfather's Clock; Father, Come Home; Shadows on the Floor; his Civil War song Marching through Georgia became celebrated; other songs of the Civil War were Drafted into the Army; God Save the Nation; Song of a Thousand Years; Wake, Nicodemus; Kingdom Coming, etc. — Cf. R. S. Hill, The Mysterious Chord of Henry Clay Work, in 'Notes' (March-June, 1953).

Wormser, André (Alphonse-Toussaint), French composer; b. Paris, Nov. 1, 1851; d. there, Nov. 4, 1926. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Marmontel (piano) and Bazin (theory); won 1st prize for piano in 1872, and the Grand Prix de Rome in 1875 with the cantata Clytemnestre. His most successful work was the pantomime or 'wordless opera' L'Enfant prodigue (Paris, June 14, 1890); also composed other stage works, orchestral works, men's choruses, songs, and piano pieces. — Cf. E. Newman, A Musical Motley (1919).

Wörner, Karl Heinrich, German musicologist; b. Waldorf, near Heidelberg, Jan. 6, 1910. He studied musicology in Berlin with Schünemann and Schering, and conducting with Julius Prüwer; received the degree of Dr. phil. at Berlin Univ. with the dissertation Beiträge zur Geschichte des Leitmotivs in der Oper, publ. in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (Dec., 1931); was critic for the 'B. Z. am Mittag'; then (1935-40) opera conductor at Stettin, Magdeburg, and Frankfurt. He was in the German Army during World War II; 1944-46, prisoner of war in the U. S. Returning to Germany in 1946, he was active as lecturer. From 1956 to 1958 he was on the staff of B. Schott's Söhne (Mainz); 1958, on the faculty of the Folkwangschule in Essen. Author of Mendelssohn (Wiesbaden, 1947); Musik der Gegenwart (Mainz, 1949); Schumann (Zürich, 1949); Musiker-Worte (Baden-Baden, 1949); Geschichte der Musik (Göttingen, 1954); Neue Musik in der Entscheidung (Mainz, 1954).

Woronoff, Wladimir, Russian-Belgian composer; b. St. Petersburg, Jan. 5, 1903. He studied in Berlin; later in Brussels, where he settled. — Works: Le Masque de la mort rouge, opera-ballet after Poe; La Foule, for bass solo, chorus, and orch.; Suite de Bruxelles for orch.; Concert lyrique for piano and orch.; Invocation à Venus for voice and string quartet; songs; etc.

Worp, Johannes, Dutch organist, composer, and arranger; b. Broek, Dec. 24, 1821; d. Groningen, April 21, 1891. He studied in Amsterdam, where he was active as church organist; then went to Leipzig, where he took a course with Moscheles; returning to Holland, he became organist at Groningen. He publ. valuable organ works and methods, which have gone through numerous editions: De Melodieën der Evangelische Gezangen . . ., for organ, piano, and chorus; De Melodieën der Psalmen en Lof- en Bedezangen . . ., for organ, piano, and chorus (20th printing, 1947); the manual, Algemeene Muzieklee (13th printing, 1932, revised by Sem Dresden); Kleine Muzieklee for schools; Eerste en tweede Zangboekje for schools; De zingende Kinderwereld (songs for children; many editions); Volksliedjes uit het Land der Liefde; etc.

Woržischek (Voříšek), Johann Hugo, Bohemian composer; b. Wamberg, Bohemia, May 11, 1791; d. Vienna, Nov. 19, 1825. He studied with his father and with Tomaschek in Prague, where he lived from 1801; in 1813 he went to Vienna and became known as a pianist; in 1818 he was appointed conductor of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde; having studied law, he obtained a post in the civil service in 1822 but abandoned it after a year, when he was made court organist. He composed symphonics, choral works with orch., a piano concerto, etc.; of more interest are his piano pieces, especially the Rhapsodies (1818) and Impromptus (1822), because Schubert was strongly influenced by them. A piano sonata in B minor (1820) shows kinship with Beethoven, whom he knew intimately. — Cf. W. Kahl, Das lyrische Klavierstück Schuberts und seiner Vorgänger seit 1810, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (1921).

Wöss, Josef Venantius von, Austrian musicologist; b. Cattaro, Dalmatia, June 13, 1863; d. Vienna, Oct. 22, 1943. He received his first musical instruction from his mother and an uncle; studied composition at the Vienna Cons. with Franz Krenn; wrote music criticism for 'Musica Divina'; later in the editorial dept. of the 'Universal Edition,' for which he edited the collection 'Deutsche Meisterlieder.' He composed the operas Lenzlüge (Elberfeld, 1905) and Flaviennes Abenteuer (Breslau, 1910); Heiliges Lied, for male chorus and orch.; Serenade, for orch.; Sakuntala, overture; a piano sextet; sacred music (a Te Deum and 2 Masses); motets with orch.; songs (Sulamith, 4 slawische Lieder, 4 orientalische Gesänge, etc.). He made the piano scores of Mahler's Das klagende Lied, Lied von der Erde, and symphonies Nos. 3, 4, 8, and 9; edited Bruckner's symphonies; publ. Die Modulation (Vienna, 1921). His recollections of Bruckner were publ. in 'Gregoriusblatt' (1932).

Wöss, Kurt, Austrian conductor; b. Linz, May 2, 1914. He studied conducting with Felix Weingartner in Vienna; became a theater conductor there; from 1948 to 1956 conducted the Tonkünstlerorchester in Vienna; in 1956, appointed conductor of the Melbourne, Australia, Symph. Orch.

Wotquenne (vöht-këhn'), Alfred, Belgian musicologist; b. Lobbes, Jan. 25, 1867; d. Antibes, France, Sept. 25, 1939. He studied at the Brussels Cons. with Maillly (organ), and Joseph Dupont and Gevaert (theory); from 1894 to 1919 was librarian, secretary, and inspector of studies at the Brussels Cons.; then moved to Antibes in southern France, where in 1921 he became maître de chapelle. —Publ. Catalogue de la bibliothèque du Cons. Royal de Musique de Bruxelles (vol. I, 1894; with a supplement, Libretti d'opéras et d'oratorios italiens du XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle, 1901; II, 1902; III, 1908; IV, 1912; V, 1914); Baldassare Galuppi (1899; 2nd augmented ed., 1902, as Baldassare Galuppi. Étude bibliographique sur ses œuvres dramatiques); Thématisches Verzeichnis der Werke von Chr. W. v. Gluck (1904); Catalogue thématique des œuvres de C. Ph. E. Bach (1905); Table alphabétique des morceaux mesurés contenus dans les œuvres dramatiques de Zeno, Metastasio et Goldoni (1905); Étude bibliographique sur le compositeur napolitain Luigi Rossi (1909; with thematic catalogue). He prepared a card catalogue of 18,000 Italian 'cantate da camera' of the 18th century; edited 'Chansons italiennes de la fin du XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle' (canzonette a 4); continued the collections begun by Gevaert, 'Répertoire classique du chant français' and 'Répertoire français de l'ancien chant classique,' and edited a new collection, 'Répertoire Wotquenne' (4 vols. publ.); also ed. violin sonatas of Tartini, Veracini, and others; composed much sacred music. — The MSS of several important bibliographies in his collection were bought by the Library of Congress in 1929; these comprise Répertoire des textes publiés par les édi- teurs parisiens Ballard; Histoire musicale et chronologique du Théâtre de la Foire depuis 1680 jusqu'à 1762; Histoire du nouveau Théâtre-Italien à Paris (1718-1762); etc. A large part of his private music library was also bought by the Library of Congress.

Wouters (voo-tär'), (François) Adolphe, Belgian organist and composer; b. Brussels, May 28, 1841; d. there, April 16, 1924. He studied at the Brussels Cons.; then taught piano there (1871-1920); from 1868 he was also organist at Notre-Dame-de-Finistère and maître de chapelle at Saint-Nicolas. He composed church music, men's choruses, technical studies and transcriptions for piano, etc.

Woyrsch, Felix von, composer and conductor; b. Troppau, Silesia, Oct. 8, 1860; d. Altona-Hamburg, March 20, 1944. He studied with A. Chevallier in Hamburg, but was chiefly self-taught. In 1894 he settled in Altona as conductor of the Kirchenchor, the Singakademie (from 1895), and the municipal symph. concerts and Volkskonzerte (from 1903); from 1895 to 1903 he was organist of the Friedenskirche, then of the Johanniskirche. —Compositions: Operas, Der Pfarrer von Meudon (Hamburg, 1886); Der Weiberkrieg (Hamburg, 1890); Wikingerschiffahrt (Nuremberg, 1896). For orch.: symph. prologue to Divina Commedia; Skaldische Rhapsodie, for violin and orch.; 2 symphonies; 3 Böcklin-Phantasien (Die Toteninsel, Der Eremit, Im Spiel der Wellen); Hamlet, overture. Vocal works with orch.: Da Jesus auf Erden ging, a mystery play (Hamburg, Jan. 29, 1917; one of his best works); Geburt Jesu, Deutscher Heerbann, Der Vandalen Auszug, Passions-Oratorium, Sapphische Ode an Aphrodite, Totentanz, Da lachte schön Sigrid, Wollt' er nur fragen, Edward. Chamber music: piano quintet; string quartet. For piano: 3 Nottornos; 2 Walzer; Walzer (4 hands); theme and variations; 4 Impromptus; Improvisationen; Metamorphosen. He also composed song cycles (Persische Lieder, Spanisches Liederbuch, 10 Rattenfängerlieder); edited Deutsche Volkslieder (14th-16th centuries), and choral works of Heinrich Schütz for practical use (3 vols.).

Woytowicz, Boleslaw, Polish composer; b. Dunajowce Podolia, Dec. 5, 1899. In Warsaw he studied piano with Michalowski and composition with Statkowski and Maliszewski; also studied with Nadia Boulanger in Paris (1930-33). Returning from Paris, he became instructor at the Chopin Music School in Warsaw; won several prizes for his compositions. — Works: 2 symphonies (1938; 1945); several cantatas; a concert suite for orch.; a piano concerto (1932); various pieces for piano; songs.

Wrangel (vrähn'-gël), Vassily Georgievitch, Baron, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, June 25, 1862; d. there, March 10, 1901. A functionary at the Ministry of Home Affairs, he was a musician by avocation; took several courses at the St. Petersburg Cons. His songs, many of which were publ., attracted singers by their artless melodic quality, and enjoyed some popularity for a time; he also wrote a ballet, The Mikado's Daughter (St. Petersburg, Dec. 1, 1897).

Wranitzky (vrah-nit'skē), Anton, violinist and composer; b. Neureisch, Moravia, June 13, 1761; d. Vienna, Aug. 6, 1820. He studied with his older brother Paul; also had lessons in Vienna with Albrechtsberger, Haydn, and Mozart. From 1794 he was Kapellmeister to Prince Lobkowitz at his castle in Bohemia, and later (1808) in Vienna. He wrote 15 violin concertos, and other concertos with several soloists; much chamber music; marches; dances; etc.

Wranitzky, Paul, violinist and composer; brother of Anton Wranitzky; b. Neureisch, Moravia, Dec. 30, 1756; d. Vienna, Sept. 28, 1808. After studying in various provincial towns of Moravia, he went to Vienna in 1776, where he was a pupil of Joseph Martin Kraus. In 1780 he became a member of Prince Esterházy's orch. at Eisenstadt; in 1785, became concertmaster of the Vienna Opera, and retained this position until his death. His opera Oberon, König der Elfen was given with excellent success in Vienna on Nov. 7, 1789; other operas and Singspiele by him produced in Vienna were Rudolf von Felseck (Oct. 6, 1792); Merkur, der Heirat-Stifter (Feb. 21, 1793); Das Fest der Lazzaroni (Feb. 4, 1794); Die gute Mutter (May 11, 1795); Johanna von Montfaucon (Jan. 25, 1799); Der Schreiner (July 18, 1799); Mitgefühl (April 21, 1804); Die Erkenntlichkeit (July 22, 1805). He also produced numerous ballets; wrote incidental music to several plays; composed a great deal of instrumental music, including 22 symphonies; 5 concertos for various instruments with orch.; 6 quintets; 47 string quartets; 12 quartets for flute and strings; 3 piano quartets; string trios; etc.

Wrede (vrä'-dē), Ferdinand, German pianist and composer; b. Brökel, Hanover, July 28, 1827; d. Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, Jan. 20, 1899. He studied with Marschner and Litolff; then was active as singing teacher and choral conductor; wrote men's choruses and songs.

Wrightson, Herbert James, composer and teacher; b. Sunderland, England, Dec. 20, 1869; d. West Lebanon, N. Y., Dec. 24, 1949. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Jadassohn and Reinecke. In 1897 he settled in the U. S.; taught in Philadelphia, Chicago, etc. His works include a symphony; 15 organ pieces; 29 piano pieces; 2 melodramas for speaker with music; 144 songs, of which nearly 100 were published. His hymns are included in various hymnals. He publ. Elements of the Theory of Music (Boston, 1921) and Modern Classical Harmony; contributed articles to the 'Mus. Quarterly,' 'Etude,' etc.

Wüerst (vü'-erst), Richard (Ferdinand), German composer; b. Berlin, Feb. 22, 1824; d. there, Oct. 9, 1881. He studied violin with Ferdinand David at the Leipzig Cons., where he also took lessons with Mendelssohn. He then taught at Kullak's Neue Akademie der Tonkunst in Berlin. As music critic for the 'Berliner Fremdenblatt' he exercised considerable influence; he was editor of the 'Neue Berliner Musikzeitung' (1874-75); publ. Leitfaden der Elementartheorie der Musik (1867; English transl. as Elementary Theory of Music and Treatment of Chords, Boston, 1893). As a composer, he was a follower of Mendelssohn. — Works: the operas Der Rotmantel (Berlin, 1848), Vineta (Bratislava, Dec. 21, 1862), Eine Künstlerreise (with Winterfeld; Berlin, 1868), Faublas (Berlin, 1873), A-ing-fo-hi (Berlin, Jan. 28, 1878), Die Offiziere der Kaiserin (Berlin, 1878); cantata Der Wasserneck; 3 symphonies; Ein Märchen, symph. fantasy; Variations sur une chanson nègre de Kentucky, for orch. (on Stephen Foster's My Old Kentucky Home); Sous le balcon, a serenade for string orch. with cello obbligato; Russische Suite for string orch. with violin obbligato; Tanz der Mücken, Fliegen und Käfer, an orchestral scherzo; piano trio; cello sonata; 3 string quartets; various violin pieces; songs; vocal duets and tertets.

Wüllner, Franz, German pianist, conductor, and composer; b. Münster, Jan. 28, 1832; d. Braunfels-on-the-Lahn, Sept. 7, 1902. He studied with Schindler (Beethoven's disciple and biographer) in Münster and Frankfurt. After further study in Berlin, Cologne, Brussels, Bremen, Hanover, and Leipzig (where he also gave piano recitals), he went to Munich in 1854; was teacher at the Munich Cons. (1856-58); then municipal music director at Aachen (1858-64). He returned to Munich in 1864; succeeded Hans von Bülow as conductor of the Munich court theater in 1869; became 1st Kapellmeister in 1870. Under unfavorable conditions (against Wagner's wishes) he prepared and conducted the first performances of Das Rheingold (Sept. 22, 1869) and Die Walküre (June 26, 1870). In 1877 he became court conductor at Dresden; in 1882 Schuch was promoted to take his place; thereafter Wüllner conducted the Berlin Philharmonic (1883-84); and on Oct. 1, 1884, succeeded Hiller as director of the Cologne Cons., later becoming also municipal music director, which posts he held until his death. He was an excellent conductor in both opera and symph. concerts; directed the Lower Rhine Music Festivals in 1864, 1886, and 1890. He was highly esteemed as a teacher, and made a good name for himself as a composer; for the choral classes of the Munich School of Music he wrote the valuable and practical 'Chorübungen der Münchener Musikschule' (1867; new ed. by E. Schwickerath, Munich, 1931). — Works: vocal with orch.: Die Flucht der heiligen Familie; Heinrich der Finkler; Deutscher Siegesgesang; Lied und Leben; Psalm 98; Psalm 127; church music a cappella: 2 Masses; motets; Miserere for double chorus; Stabat Mater for double chorus; several secular choruses; chamber music; 2 piano sonatas and other piano pieces; songs. His additional recitatives to Weber's Oberon have been adopted in many German opera houses. — Cf. O. Klauwoll, Studien und Erinnerungen (Langensalza, 1906); E. Wolff, ed., Johannes Brahms im Briefwechsel mit Franz Wüllner (Berlin, 1922; with a list of works); J. Wüllner, Johannes Brahms in seiner Lebensfreundschaft mit Franz Wüllner, in 'Die Musik' (March, 1942).

Wüllner, Ludwig, distinguished German singer; son of Franz Wüllner; b. Münster, Aug. 19, 1858; d. Berlin, March 19, 1938. He studied Germanic philology at the universities of Munich, Berlin, and Strasbourg, and took the degree of Dr. phil.; taught Germanic philology at the Akademie in Münster (1884-87), and sang occasionally in concert; his musical training began only in 1887, when he took a course of study at the Cologne Cons. A second change of vocation brought him to the Meiningen court theater, where he appeared as an actor of heroic parts in the spoken drama (1889-95); became friendly with Brahms, who commended his singing of German folksongs. In 1895 he gave song recitals in Berlin with such acclaim that he decided to devote himself mainly to lieder. He then made tours of all Europe, arousing tremendous enthusiasm; his first recital in N. Y. (Nov. 15, 1908) was a sensational success, and he followed it by one extensive tour of the U. S. and then another (1909-10). His peculiar distinction was his ability to give an actor's impersonation of the character of each song, introducing an element of drama on the concert stage. — Cf. F. Ludwig, L. Wüllner. Sein Leben und seine Kunst (Leipzig, 1931).

Wunderer, Alexander, Austrian oboist, composer, and teacher; b. Vienna, April 11, 1877; d. Zinkenbach, near St. Gilgen (Salzkammergut), Dec. 29, 1955. He taught the oboe and other wind instruments at the State Academy of Music in Vienna (1919-37); wrote chamber music; was co-author of a book on orchestration. After 1945 he taught oboe classes at the Salzburg Mozarteum.

Wunsch, Hermann, German composer; b. Neuss, Aug. 9, 1884; d. Berlin, Dec. 21, 1954. He studied in Düsseldorf and Cologne and later at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin, where he subsequently taught (prof., 1945). He composed 6 symphonies, of which the 5th won the Schubert Memorial Prize (German section) of the Columbia Phonograph Co. contest (Schubert Centennial, 1928). Other works include the chamber operas Bianca (Weimar, May 22, 1927), Don Juans Sohn (Weimar, 1928), and Franzosenzeit (Schwerin, 1933); 2 Masses; Südpolkantate for chorus and orch.; Helden for chorus and orch. (Berlin, 1941); 3 violin concertos; concerto for piano and small orch.; Kleine Lustspielsuite for orch.; Fest auf Monbijou, suite for chamber orch.; Erntelied, a symph. with a concluding chorus.

Wünsch, Walther, ethnomusicologist; b. Gablonz, Bohemia, July 23, 1908. He studied musicology in Prague with Becking, and later in Vienna; then taught in Prague; was teacher in Graz until 1945; then moved to Gratkorn. He publ. Die Geigentechnik der südslawischen Guslaren (Brno, 1934); Heldensänger in Südosteuropa (Leipzig, 1937); various other essays on folk music in European periodicals.

Würfel, Wilhelm, pianist and composer; b. Planian, Bohemia, 1791; d. Vienna, April 22, 1852. After touring as concert pianist he became prof. at the Warsaw Cons. (1815); in 1826 became assistant conductor at the Kärthner Theater in Vienna. He composed an opera, Rübezahl (Vienna, March 10, 1825); a piano concerto; many other piano pieces in a bravura style.

Wurlitzer, Rudolph H., American instrument dealer; b. Cincinnati, Dec. 30, 1873; d. there, May 27, 1948. He was the son of the founder of the Wurlitzer Co. (established 1856); studied violin at the Cincinnati College of Music and later in Berlin with Emanuel Wirth. He became secretary-treasurer of the Wurlitzer Co. in 1899; later vice-president, and finally president. In 1929 the company purchased 64 string instruments from the Rodman Wanamaker Collection, including some fine specimens. Several richly illustrated catalogues of string instruments in the Wurlitzer Collection have been issued: Old Master Violins, Violas, Violoncellos (Cincinnati, 1915); Masterpieces of the Great Violin Makers (N. Y., 1917; 2nd ed., 1918); Rare Violins, Violas, Violoncellos of the 17th, 18th, and 19th Centuries (N. Y., 1931); Rare Bows for Violin, Viola, Violoncello, by Makers of the 18th and 19th Centuries (N. Y., 1931); Rare Violas by Celebrated Makers of the 16th-19th Centuries (N. Y., 1940).

Wurm, Marie, noted English pianist; b. Southampton, May 18, 1860; d. Munich, Jan. 21, 1938. She was of German extraction; went to study in Germany; was a pupil at the Stuttgart Cons., and later studied piano with Joseph Wieniawski, Raff, and Clara Schumann; then took up theory and composition in London with Stanford and Arthur Sullivan. She gave numerous recitals in London and in Germany; lived for some years as teacher in Hanover, and in 1911 moved to Berlin; in 1925, settled in Munich. Apart from her principal career, she also conducted orchestras; organized a women's orch. in Berlin (inaugural concert, Oct. 10, 1899); composed a number of works, including the opera Die Mitschuldigen (Leipzig, 1923); a piano concerto; a string quartet; a violin sonata; a cello sonata; a piano sonata; numerous piano pieces (Valse de concert, Barcarolle, Sylph Dance, Suite, gavottes, mazurkas, etc.); author of Das ABC der Musik, and Praktische Vorschule zur Caland-Lehre (1914). — Her sisters, Adela and Mathilda, changed their name to Verne (q. v.) and pursued their careers in England.

Würz, Anton, German composer and musicologist; b. Munich, July 14, 1903; studied with Sandberger at the Munich Univ.; was music critic of the 'Münchner Telegraph-Zeitung' (1927-45). His works include several song cycles, to words by Rilke, Eichendorff, etc.; a string quintet; 4 string quartets; a string trio; a violin sonata; a viola sonata; publ. numerous opera and operetta guide books for the Reclam ed.

Würz, Richard, German composer and pedagogue; b. Munich, Feb. 15, 1885; studied with Max Reger; then became active as music critic and teacher in Munich; publ. numerous songs and piano pieces; also didactic works; ed. and contributed to Max Reger, a collection of studies (4 vols.; Munich, 1920-23). — Cf. W. Zentner, Richard Würz, in 'Neue Musikzeitschrift' (Jan., 1950).

Wüst, Philipp, German conductor; b. Oppau, May 3, 1894; after 1919 was engaged as conductor and music director in Mannheim, Oldenburg, Breslau (1936-43), and Stuttgart (1943-45); in 1946 he settled in Saarbrücken as general music director.

Wustmann, Rudolf, German musicologist; b. Leipzig, Jan. 5, 1872; d. Bühlau, near Dresden, Aug. 15, 1916. He was the son of the bibliographer Gustav Wustmann; studied philology, history, and musicology (with Kretzschmar) at the Universities of Munich and Leipzig; was a teacher of academic subjects in Leipzig (1895-1900); later lived in Bolzano, Italy, and finally in Bühlau, devoting himself to philological and historical research. He publ. Musikalische Bilder (1907); Musikgeschichte Leipzigs (Leipzig, 1909; vol. I only, up to the middle of the 17th century; vols. II and III written by Schering); J. S. Bachs Kantatentexte (1913); Die Hofweise Walthers von der Vogelweide (Strasbourg, 1913); numerous articles in German musical periodicals.

Wyk (vīk), Arnold van, South African composer; b. Calvinia, Cape Province, April 26, 1916. He studied in London; worked with the B.B.C. (1939-44); then returned to South Africa as a member of the faculty of the Univ. of Cape Town. His compositions include Southern Cross, for orch. (1943); symph. No. 1 (1944); Christmas Oratorio (1949); Rhapsody for orch. (Cape Town Festival, March 4, 1952); symph. No. 2 (Cape Town Festival, March 13, 1952); 5 Elegies for string quartet (1941); the song cycle Liefde en Verlatenheid (Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Haifa, May 31, 1954); string quartet No. 1 (1957). —Cf. H. Ferguson, Arnold van Wyk: Recently Published Works, in 'Tempo' (Summer, 1958).

Wylde, Henry, English conductor, composer, and educator; b. Bushey, Herts, May 22, 1822; d. London, March 13, 1890. He was the son of Henry Wylde, London organist and composer of glees. He studied piano with Moscheles and Cipriani Potter at the Royal Academy of Music; was active as church organist. In 1852 he founded in London the New Philharmonic Society, and conducted its concerts in cooperation with Berlioz, Lindpaintner, and Spohr for 3 seasons; took complete charge of its concerts in 1858 and conducted them until 1879. In 1861 he founded the London Academy of Music; supervised the building of St. George's Hall (1867) to house it; in 1863 became prof. of music there, retaining this post until his death. —Compositions: Paradise Lost, oratorio after Milton (London, May 11, 1853); piano concerto (London, April 14, 1852); songs; piano pieces. —Books: The Science of Music (1865); Music in Its Art-Mysteries (1867); Modern Counterpoint in Major Keys (1873); Occult Principles of Music (1881); Music as an Educator (1882); The Evolution of the Beautiful in Sound (1888).

Wyman, Addison P., American violinist and composer; b. Cornish, N. H., June 23, 1832; d. Washington, Pa., April 15, 1872. He was a violin teacher; founded a music school at Claremont, N. H., in 1869. Publ. popular piano pieces (166 op. numbers): Silvery Waves, Woodland Echoes, Moonlight Musings, Music among the Pines, etc.

Wyschnegradsky, Iwan. See Vyshnegradsky.

Wyzewa (vē-zū-vāh'), Théodore de (real name Wyzewski), noted musicologist; b. Kalushin, Russian Poland, Sept. 12, 1862; d. Paris, April 17, 1917. In 1869 his parents settled in Châtelleraut, France, where he received his education; in 1884 he founded in Paris, with Édouard Dujardin, the 'Revue wagnérienne,' which, until it ceased publication in 1888, did much to advance the cause of Wagner in France. His importance as a musicologist rests upon his researches concerning the life and work of Mozart, about whom he publ. new facts in Recherches sur la Jeunesse de Mozart, in the 'Revue des Deux Mondes' (1904-05), and in W. A. Mozart. Sa Vie musicale et son

Œuvre de l'enfance à la pleine maturité (with G. de Saint-Foix; 2 vols., Paris, 1912; 3 more vols. added by Saint-Foix in 1937, in 1940, and in 1946). He also wrote Littérature wagnérienne en France (in 'Revue Politique et Littéraire,' Sept. 15, 1894) and Beethoven et Wagner (Paris, 1898; new ed., 1914), besides several books dealing with religion, art, and philosophy. Edited 20 piano sonatas of Clementi with a biographical notice (vol. I, Paris, 1917; vol. II, posthumous, brought out by Henry Expert).

X

Xanrof (zahn-rohf'), Léon, French composer of popular music; b. Paris, Dec. 9, 1867; d. there, May 17, 1953. His real name was Léon Fournéau; Xanrof is an anagram of its Latin equivalent (fornax). He was a lawyer by profession; from 1890 produced light stage pieces in the Paris theaters; the chansonette Le Fiacre, which he wrote for Yvette Guilbert, achieved great popularity. He also contributed music criticism to various Paris papers.

Xenakis, Yannis, Greek composer; b. Athens, May 29, 1922. He studied engineering, obtaining a diploma at the Athens Polytechnic Institute. In 1948 he went to Paris; studied architecture with Le Corbusier, and composition at the École Normale de Musique (with Honegger and Milhaud) and at the Cons. (with Messiaen). His early works reflect his interest in Greek folklore; he then wrote some music in the dodecaphonic technique; in 1952 he adopted a novel method of 'probabilistic' composition, based on a calculation of probabilities of recurrence of certain notes and rhythms. As an architect, he collaborated with Le Corbusier in the design of the Pavillon Philips at the 1958 World's Fair in Brussels; wrote parts of the Poème Électronique (with Varèse) for the exhibit. In 1956 he received a stipend of 12,000 Swiss francs from the Fondation Européenne de la Culture. —Works: Métastasis, for orch. (Donauerschingen, Oct. 15, 1955); Pithoprakta for string orch. (Munich, March 8, 1957); Achorripsis, for 21 instruments (Brussels, July 20, 1958).

Xyndas (ksün'-dahs), Spyridon, Greek composer; b. Corfu, June 8, 1812; d. Athens, Nov. 25, 1896. He studied in Italy, and appeared as a guitar player; composed many attractive popular Greek songs; several operas to Italian librettos (Il Conte Giuliano, I due pretendenti, etc.); also The Parliamentary Candidate (Athens, March, 1888), which was probably the first opera with a Greek text. He became blind toward the end of his life.

Y

Yamada, Kôschak, eminent Japanese composer and conductor; b. Tokyo, June 9, 1886. He studied at the Imperial Academy of Music in Tokyo; then in Berlin with Max Bruch (1909-13). Returning to Japan in 1914, he organized the Tokyo Philharmonic Orch. On Oct. 16, 1918, he conducted a program of Japanese music in Carnegie Hall, N. Y., including some of his own works (Festival of Autumn, The Dark Gate, Flower of Madara, and an Oriental Suite); appeared as guest conductor in the U. S. until 1921; in 1930, and again in 1933, he conducted in Russia; in 1937 he toured Europe. Most of his MSS were destroyed during the air raid on Tokyo on May 25, 1945; several scores have been restored from the extant orchestral parts. —Works: operas Alladine et Palomides, after Maeterlinck (1913), The Depraved Heavenly Maiden (1908; Tokyo, Dec. 3, 1929), Ayame (The Sweet Flag) (Tokyo, Feb. 24, 1935), The Black Ships (Tokyo, 1940), Yoake (The Dawn) (Nov. 28, 1940), Hsiang Fei (1946); cantatas: Bonno-Koru (Tokyo, Oct. 9, 1931) and The Dawn of the Orient (Tokyo, July 7, 1941); a symph. (Tokyo, Dec. 6, 1914); Ode to Meiji for chorus and orch. (Tokyo, April 26, 1925); Homage to Showa, symph. poem (Tokyo, May 13, 1939); Kamikaze, symph. suite (1944); chamber music; nearly 1,000 choral pieces and songs.

Yardumian, Richard, American composer; b. (of Armenian parents) Philadelphia, April 5, 1917; self-taught in music. His compositions reflect the spirit of Armenian folk-songs and religious melodies. His Armenian Suite for orch. was performed for the 1st time by the Philadelphia Orch. on March 5, 1954. Other symph. works (also brought out by the Philadelphia Orch.) are Desolate City (April 6, 1945) and a violin concerto (March 30, 1951).

Yasser, Joseph, noted organist and musician; b. Lodz, Poland, April 16, 1893. He studied at the Moscow Cons. (graduated 1917), and became organ teacher there (1918-20); 1921, lecturer for the music dept. of the Siberian Board of Education; 1922, conducted a choral society in Shanghai; came to the U. S. and was organist of the Free Synagogue in N. Y. (1927-28); and at the Temple Rodeph Sholom, N. Y. (from 1929); held various positions in musical societies. He publ. A Theory of Evolving Tonality (N. Y., 1932), in which he offered an ingenious hypothesis of the origin of the pentatonic and heptatonic scales; contributed a series of articles, Medieval Quartal Harmony, to the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, July, 1937, and July, 1938; also publ. separately, N. Y., 1938); publ. many other articles and reviews.

Yon, Pietro Alessandro, eminent organist and composer; b. Settimo Vittone, Italy, Aug. 8, 1886; d. Huntington, L. I., N. Y., Nov. 22, 1943. He studied with Fumagalli at the Milan Cons.; winning a scholarship for piano, he continued his studies at the Turin Cons. (1901-04), and at the Santa Cecilia in Rome with Remigio Renzi (organ) and Sgambati (piano), graduating in 1905 with 1st prize; then was organist at St. Peter's, Rome (1905-07). In 1907 he emigrated to the U. S.; was organist at St. Francis-Xavier's, N. Y., from 1907 till 1919, and again from 1921 till 1926. In 1926 he was appointed organist of St. Patrick's Cathedral in N. Y.; became a U. S. citizen in 1921. He gave numerous organ recitals in Europe and the U. S. —Works: Mass in G major; Messa Melodica for chorus, string orch., horns, and organ; other Masses; Jerusalem Surge, motet for men's voices and orch.; other motets a cappella and with organ; oratorio The Triumph of St. Patrick (N. Y., April 29, 1934); many organ pieces; one of these, Gesù Bambino (1917), became very popular in numerous vocal and instrumental arrangements; other organ works are: Concerto Gregoriano, 3 sonatas, 2 rhapsodies, 12 divertimentos, Natale in Sicilia, Preludio Pastorale, Toccata, Echo (double canon); piano pieces (Nena, Mountain Slopes, Alpine Nocturne, Rain); songs (Ave Maria, They Call Him Jesus, Christ Triumphant).

Yonge (Young), Nicholas, English musician and editor; b. Lewes; d. London (buried Oct. 23), 1619; was a chorister at St. Paul's Cathedral. He translated and arranged a number of Italian madrigals, which he publ. in 2 books under the general title Musica Transalpina (1588; 1597). —Cf. A. Obertello, Madrigali italiani in Inghilterra (Milan, 1949).

York, Francis Lodowick, American organist and teacher; b. Ontonagon, Mich., March 9, 1861; d. there, Jan. 13, 1955. He studied piano in Boston and Detroit; in 1892 became a pupil of Guilman in Paris (organ and composition); was piano and organ teacher at the State Normal Cons., Ypsilanti, Mich. (1896-1902); director of the Detroit Cons. (1902-27); in 1930, elected chairman of the board of the Detroit Institute of Mus. Art; Mus. Doc. (hon. c.), Univ. of Michigan, 1922. He publ. a Te Deum, choruses, songs, and organ pieces; in MS, among other works, a comic opera, The Inca. Author of Harmony Simplified (1897; revised and enlarged ed., 1901) and Counterpoint Simplified (1907).

Yost, Gaylord, American violinist and composer; b. Fayette, Ohio, Jan. 28, 1888; d. Wauseon, Ohio, Oct. 10, 1958. He studied music in Toledo and Detroit; later with Issaye Barmas (violin) in Berlin; appeared in recitals in Europe and America; head of the violin dept. at Indiana College of Music, Indianapolis (1915-21); head of the violin dept. at the Pittsburgh Mus. Institute (1921-43). Founded the Yost String Quartet in 1925. In 1951, he became editor and publisher of the 'Fayette Review,' founded by his father; from 1954 to 1957 served as mayor of Fayette. He publ. The Yost System in 8 vols. (1932; an abridged ed. as The Yost Violin Method, in 3 vols.); also Basic Principles of Violin Playing (1940).

Yost, Michel, famous French clarinetist; b. Paris, 1754; d. there, July 5, 1786. He studied with Beer. Publ. 14 clarinet concertos; 30 quartets for clarinet and strings; 8 books of duos for clarinets; Airs variés for clarinet with viola and bass.

Youdin, Mikhail Alexeyevitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, Sept. 29, 1893; d. Kazan, Feb. 8, 1948. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons., graduating in 1923; joined its staff as instructor in 1926. He went to Kazan in 1942, and taught at the Cons. there until his death. —Works: opera Farida (1943); cantata Song of Spring and Joy (Leningrad, Nov. 25, 1936); Heroic Oratorio (1937); Poem 1926 for orch. (Leningrad, March 30, 1927); other symph. pieces; 2 string quartets; piano sonata; organ toccata; choruses; songs; arrangements of folksongs.

Youll, Henry, English composer; flourished c. 1600. He publ. Canzonets to three voices (1608), a collection of 24 vocal pieces (Slow, slow, fresh fount, to Ben Jonson's words; Pipe, shepherds, pipe; etc.). It was republished in 'The English Madrigal School' (vol. XXVIII).

Youmans, Vincent, American composer of popular music; b. New York, Sept. 27, 1898; d. Denver, Colo., April 5, 1946. He studied engineering; then was active in business; enlisted in the U. S. Navy during World War I, and was in the entertainment unit at the Great Lakes Training Station; in 1918 he entered the field of music publishing in N. Y. In 1921, his musical comedy Two Little Girls in Blue was produced in N. Y.; there followed Wildflower, and the immensely successful No, No, Nanette (1925) containing the celebrated song Tea for Two. Other musical comedies were A Night Out (1925), Oh! Please (1926), Hit the Deck (1927), Rainbow (1928), Great Day (1929), and Through the Years (1932). In 1933 he went to Hollywood to complete his score for the film Flying Down to Rio; soon afterwards illness (tuberculosis) forced him to abandon further work. Among his songs, the following were hits: Bambalina; I Want to Be Happy; Hallelujah; Sometimes I'm Happy; Great Day; Without a Song; Time on My Hands; Through the Years; Oh, Me, Oh, My, Oh, You; Carioca; Orchids in the Moonlight; Drums in My Heart; More Than You Know; Rise 'n' Shine.

Young, Alexander, English tenor; b. London, Oct. 18, 1920. He studied in London and Naples; joined the Glyndebourne Opera Co., singing minor parts, then rising to prominence; obtained signal success as Tom Rakewell in Stravinsky's The Rake's Progress, and also distinguished himself as a Mozart singer; has given numerous recitals in England.

Young, Anthony, English organist and composer; b. c. 1685; d. after 1720. He was organist at various churches in London; wrote numerous songs; he is chiefly known as one of the composers falsely credited with the authorship of the tune of God Save the King.

Young, Cecilia, English singer; b. London, c. 1710; d. there, Oct. 6, 1789. She made her appearance at the Drury Lane Theatre on March 4, 1730; in 1735 was engaged by Handel for his opera company; married T. A. Arne on March 15, 1737; went with him to Dublin in 1742, and sang soprano parts in his works presented there (Comus, Judgment of Paris, Alfred, etc.). — Cf. W. H. Cummings, Dr. Arne and 'Rule Britannia!' (London, 1912).

Young, John Matthew Wilson, English organist and composer; b. Durham, Dec.

17, 1822; d. West Norwood, March 4, 1897. In 1850 he became organist of the Lincoln Cathedral, retiring shortly before his death. He composed a sacred cantata, The Return of Israel to Palestine, and numerous church services.

Young, Percy Marshall, English writer on music and composer; b. Northwich, Cheshire, May 17, 1912. He studied in Cambridge with E. J. Dent, and at Trinity College, Dublin (Mus. D.). Returning to England, he occupied various posts as teacher. His compositions include On Eastnor Knoll (after Masfield) for voice and orch.; The Stolen Child (after Yeats) for voice, women's chorus, and orch.; a Fugal Concerto for piano and orch.; Au Moyen-âge for viola and orch.; several suites for string orch. on themes from the 17th century; edited and arranged a Pageant of England's Music (1939), Samuel Pepys Music Book (16 pieces known to Pepys), arranged for recorder or voice (1942), Carols for the 12 Days of Christmas (50 carols; London, 1952). —Books: Handel, in the 'Master Musicians' series (London, 1947); The Oratorios of Handel (London, 1949); Vaughan Williams, in the 'Contemporary Composers' series (London, 1953); A Critical Dictionary of Composers and Their Music (London, 1954; in America as Biographical Dictionary of Composers); Elgar, O. M.: A Study of a Musician (London, 1955); The Story of Song (London, 1955); Instrumental Music (London, 1955); In Search of Music (essays; London, 1956); Concerto (London, 1957); Symphony (London, 1957); also biographies for young people, Music Makers (London, 1951; N. Y., 1953); More Music Makers (London, 1955); edited Letters of Edward Elgar and Other Writings (London, 1956).

Young, Polly (Mary), English singer; b. London, c. 1745; d. there, Sept. 20, 1799. She lived in Dublin with her aunt (Mrs. T. A. Arne), and made her début as a singer upon her return to London in 1762. In 1766 she married François-Hippolyte Barthélemon (q. v.); their daughter, Cecilia Maria (Mrs. Henslowe), was a talented musician.

Young, Victor, American pianist and composer; b. Bristol, Tenn., April 9, 1889. He studied piano with Isidor Philipp in Paris; toured in England and the U. S. as accompanist to prominent singers; held various teaching positions; was music director in Thomas A. Edison's Experimental Laboratory in West Orange, N. J., conducting tonal tests and making piano recordings under Edison's personal supervision (1919-27). He wrote the musical score for one of the earliest sound motion pictures, In Old California; composed some 300 film scores altogether. Other works: for orch.: Scherzetto; Jeep; In the Great Smokies; Charm Assembly Line Ballet; etc.; piano pieces (including Under a Spanish Moon); songs (Gossip, Cuckoo Clock, etc.).

Young, Victor, American composer of popular music; b. Chicago, Aug. 8, 1900; d. Palm Springs, Calif., Nov. 10, 1956. As a youth he was sent to Poland, where he studied violin at the Warsaw Cons., and made his début with the Warsaw Philharmonic. He returned to Chicago in 1914, and after further study, became active on the radio. In 1935 he went to Hollywood, where he wrote film music. Some of his songs became famous (Sweet Sue, Street of Dreams, Can't We Talk It Over, My Romance, Ghost of a Chance, Love Letters, Golden Earrings, Stella by Starlight, My Foolish Heart, Song of Delilah, etc.). Shortly before his death, he completed the musical score for the motion picture Around the World in 80 Days (1956).

Young, William, English violinist, flutist, and composer; date of birth unknown; d. London, Dec. 21, 1671. He was attached to the court of the Archduke Ferdinand Karl in Innsbruck, where he publ. a book of 30 Sonate a 3, 4, 5 voci con allemande, corvanti . . . dedicated to the Archduke (1653). In 1660 he was a flutist in the private orch. of Charles II in London. The following year he also played the violin. Other pieces by Young include Ayre, Almain and 2 Sarabands in Playford's Musick's Recreation on the Lira Viol (1652), and Fantasies for 3 viols in Playford's Treasury of Musick (1669); numerous MSS are in the Bodleian Library, Oxford; Gresham College, London; Corporation Music Library, Manchester; and in some private collections. —Cf. W. Gillies Whittaker, The Concerted Music of William Young (Oxford, 1931).

Yousouppoff, Prince Nicolas, Russian musical dilettante and writer on musical subjects; b. St. Petersburg, 1827; d. Baden-Baden, Aug. 3, 1891. He was a pupil of Vieuxtemps (violin), and was an eager collector of violin literature; had a private orch. in his palace in St. Petersburg, but lived abroad for many years. He composed a programmatic symph., Gonzalvo de Córdoba, with violin obligato; Concerto symphonique for violin and orch.; several pieces for violin and piano (Féeries de la scène, Hallucination, Chant d'amour, Plainte, Salimbanques, etc.); publ. an interesting book on violin making, Luthomographie, historique et raisonnée (Frankfurt, 1856; printed in French in Munich; subsequent editions, Paris) and Musique sacrée suivie d'un choix de morceaux de chants d'église (Paris, 1862, as vol. I of a projected Histoire de la musique en Russie; contains a valuable study of Russian neumes and examples of traditional chants). Themes from Youssouppoff's Ballet d'Espagne were used by Bériot for a group of 6 violin duets.

Yradier (ē-rah-dyehr'), Sebastián, Spanish composer; b. Sauciego, Alava, Jan. 20, 1809; d. Vitoria, Dec. 6, 1865. He composed theater music; after 1851 became singing master to the Empress Eugénie in Paris; for some time lived in Cuba. He publ. a number of melodious songs in a Spanish manner; one of them, El Arreglito, subtitled Chanson havanaise, was used by Bizet for the famous Habanera in Carmen; Bizet retained the key and the pattern of the accompaniment, making some changes in the melody to adjust it to French words. Yradier's other songs that became famous are La Paloma and Ay Chiquita! In Paris he publ. 2 collections, 'Echo d'Espagne' (8 songs) and 'Fleurs d'Espagne' (25 songs). —Cf. E. Istel, Bizet und 'Carmen' (Stuttgart, 1927); J. Tiersot, Bizet and Spanish Music, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1927).

Yriarte, Tomás de, Spanish poet and musician; b. Orotava, Tenerife, Canary Islands, Sept. 18, 1750; d. Santa María, near Cádiz, Sept. 17, 1791. He was secretary at the Chancellery of State in Madrid and chief archivist at the Ministry of War. His literary works include a long didactic poem, La Música (Madrid, 1779; English transl., 1807). He composed 'tonadillas' and some vocal and instrumental music. —Cf. E. Cotarelo y Mori, Yriarte y su época (Madrid, 1897); J. Subirá, El Compositor Yriarte y el cultivo español del melólogo, 2 vols. (Madrid, 1949-50).

Ysaÿe (ē-zah-ē'), Eugène, famous Belgian violinist and conductor; b. Liège, July 16, 1858; d. Brussels, May 12, 1931. At the age of 5 he began to study violin with his father, a theater conductor; at the age of 7 he was enrolled at the Cons. of Liège as a pupil of Désiré Heynberg; then studied with Rodolphe Massart there; in 1867, obtained 2nd prize for violin playing (sharing it with Ovide Musin); in 1868, 1st prize for violin and chamber music. Still a very young boy, he played in his father's orchestras; in 1876 he was sent to Brussels to study with Henryk Wieniawski, and later was also a pupil of Vieuxtemps. After a sojourn in Bordeaux, he became concertmaster of Bilsé's orch. in Berlin; appeared as soloist at Pauline Lucca's concerts in Cologne and Aachen; in Germany he met Anton Rubinstein, who took him to Russia, where he spent 2 winters; also toured Norway. In 1883 he settled in Paris, where he met César Franck, Vincent d'Indy, etc. and gave successful concerts; formed a duo with the pianist Raoul Pugno, and started a long series of concerts with him, establishing a new standard of excellence. In 1887 he married Louise Bourdeau; César Franck dedicated his violin sonata to him as a wedding present; Ysaÿe's interpretation of this work made it famous. In 1886 he was named prof. at the Cons. of Brussels (resigned in 1898); in 1886 he also organized the Ysaÿe Quartet (with Crickboom, Léon Van Hout, and Joseph Jacob); Debussy dedicated his string quartet to Ysaÿe's group, which gave its first performance at the Société Nationale, Paris, on Dec. 29, 1893. In 1889 he made successful appearances in England; on Nov. 16, 1894, he made his American début, playing the Beethoven violin concerto with the N. Y. Philharmonic, and created a sensation by his virtuosity. He revisited America many times, with undiminished acclaim. He began his career as a conductor in 1894 and established his own orch. in Brussels, the 'Société des Concerts Ysaÿe.' When the Germans invaded Belgium in 1914 he fled to London, where he remained during World War I. On April 5, 1918, he made his American début as conductor with the Cincinnati Symph. Orch., and also led the Cincinnati May Festival in that year. His success was so great that he was offered the permanent position as conductor of the Cincinnati Symph. Orch., which he held from 1918 to 1922. He then returned to Belgium and resumed leadership of the 'Société des Concerts Ysaÿe.' After the death of his 1st wife, he married, on July 9, 1927, an American pupil, Jeannette Dincin (b. Brooklyn, Aug. 26, 1902). —Ysaÿe's style of playing is best described as heroic; but his art was equally convincing in the expression of moods of exquisite delicacy and tenderness; his frequent employment of 'tempo rubato' produced an effect of elasticity without distorting the melodic line. Ysaÿe was also a composer. His works include 8 violin concertos; 6 violin sonatas; Poème nocturne, for violin, cello, and strings; Les Harmonies du soir, for string quartet and string orch.; divertimento for violin and orch.; Méditation for cello and string orch.; Chant d'hiver for violin and chamber orch.; Trio de concert, for 2 violins, viola, and orch.; Amitié, for 2 violins and orch. At the age of 70 he began the composition of an opera in the Walloon language, Piér li Houëu (Peter the Miner), which was produced in Liège on March 4, 1931, in the presence of the composer, who was brought to the theater in an invalid's chair, suffering from the extreme ravages of diabetes, which had necessitated the amputation of his left foot. He began the composition of a 2nd Walloon opera, L'Avierge di Pire (La Vierge de Pierre), but had no time to complete it. —In 1937 Queen Elizabeth of Belgium inaugurated the annual Prix International Eugène Ysaÿe in Brussels; the first winner was the famous Russian violinist, David Oistrakh. —Cf. M. Pincherle, Feuilles d'histoire du violon (Paris, 1927); J. Quitin, Eugène Ysaÿe: Étude biographique et critique (Brussels, 1938); E. Christen, Ysaÿe (Geneva, 1946; 2nd ed., 1947); Antoine Ysaÿe and B. Ratcliffe, Ysaÿe: His Life, Work and Influence (London, 1947); Antoine Ysaÿe, Eugène Ysaÿe: sa vie . . . d'après les documents recueillis par son fils (Brussels, 1948; a considerably altered version of the preceding).

Ysaÿe, Théophile, Belgian pianist and composer; brother of Eugène Ysaÿe; b. Verviers, March 2, 1865; d. Nice, March 24, 1918. He was a pupil at the Liège Cons.; then studied at the Kullak Academy in Berlin, and also took lessons from César Franck in Paris; returning to Belgium, he became director of the Académie de Musique in Brussels; was noted as a fine ensemble player, and gave sonata recitals with his brother; during the latter's absence on tours, he also conducted the 'Société des Concerts Ysaÿe' in Brussels. After the invasion of Belgium in 1914, he went with his brother to London; when the Zeppelin air raids began, he left England and went to Nice, where he remained until his death. He was a prolific composer; his brother conducted a concert of Théophile's works in Brussels, on Nov. 6, 1904, including the premières of a symph. in F major (his best-known composition) and the symph. poem Le Cygne. Other works are: a piano concerto; symph. poems (Les Abeilles, La Forêt et l'Oiseau); Fantaisie sur un thème populaire wallon, for orch.; a piano quintet; piano pieces; a Requiem.

Yvon, Paul. See Juon.

Yurgenson, Peter. See Jurgenson.

Yussupov, Prince Nicolai. See Youssouppoff.

Yvain, Maurice, French composer of musical comedies; b. Paris, Feb. 12, 1891. Among his successful productions are Ta bouche (1922), Pas sur la bouche (1925), Bouche à bouche (1936), and film scores (Rien qu'un baiser; J'ai tant d'amour, etc.). He also produced a ballet, Blanche neige (Paris Opéra, Nov. 14, 1951).

Yzac. See Isaac.

Z

Zabaleta, Nicanor, Spanish harpist; b. San Sebastian, Jan. 7, 1907. He studied at the Madrid Cons.; in 1925, went to Paris to study with Marcel Tournier; toured in Europe, South America, and the U. S. He is noted for his efforts to increase the number of works available for the harp, both by bringing to light neglected compositions of old composers, and by prompting modern composers to write music for the harp. In 1958 he made a long European tour as soloist with leading orchestras.

Zabalza y Olaso, Don Dámaso, Spanish composer and pianist; b. Irurita, Navarra, Dec. 11, 1833; d. Madrid, Feb. 25, 1894. He studied with Mariano García; in 1858 settled in Madrid as a piano teacher at the National Cons. He publ. a number of piano pieces, many of which became very popular; also piano studies that were used at the Paris Cons., in Italy, and in Spain.

Zabel (tsäh'-bél), Albert Heinrich, German harpist; b. Berlin, 1830; d. St. Petersburg, Feb. 21, 1910. He studied at the Institut für Kirchenmusik in Berlin; toured Germany, Russia, England, and America with Gungl's orch.; solo harpist at the Royal Opera in Berlin (1848-51), and of the Imperial Ballet in St. Petersburg (from 1854). In 1862 he joined the staff of the newly-founded St. Petersburg Cons., and held that post until his death. He composed a harp concerto and numerous short pieces for the harp (Élégie fantastique, Légende, Marguérite au rouet, Am Springbrunnen, Chanson du pêcheur, Warum?, Murmure de cascade, etc.). Also publ. a harp method (in German, French, and English), and a pamphlet, A Word to Composers about the Practical Employment of the Harp in the Orchestra (St. Petersburg, 1899; in Russian and German).

Zacconi (tsäh-köh'-nē), Lodovico, Italian music theorist; b. Pesaro, June 11, 1555; d. Fiorenzuola, near Pesaro, March 23, 1627. He was a pupil of Baccusi and A. Gabrieli in Venice; studied theology in Pavia, entered the Order of St. Augustine, and became maestro di cappella at the monastery of his order in Venice; was tenor singer in the court chapel at Graz (1585), and at Munich (1591-95); then returned to Venice. His chief work, Prattica di Musica, in 2 parts (Venice, 1592, 1619), contains treatises on mensural theory and counterpoint, detailed descriptions of contemporary musical instruments, and explanations for executing the ornaments in vocal polyphonic music. He also wrote 4 books of Canoni musicali, with comments and solutions (publ. by F. Vatielli, Pesaro, 1905); Ricercari for organ and 2 collections of examples of counterpoint are still in MS. His MS autobiography (written in 1626) is in the library of the Liceo Musicale, Bologna. —Cf. F. Chrysander, L. Zacconi als Lehrer des Kunstgesanges, in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vols. 7, 9, 10; 1891-94; with an epitome of the autobiography); F. Vatielli, Un Musicista pesarese nel secolo XVI (Pesaro, 1904); H. Kretschmar, L. Zacconis Leben auf Grund seiner Autobiographie, in 'Jahrbuch der Musikbibliothek Peters' (1910); F. Vatielli, Notizie su la vita e le opere di L. Zacconi (Pesaro, 1912).

Zach, Johann, Czech composer; b. Czelakowitz, Bohemia, Nov. 13, 1699; date of death unknown. He was in Prague in 1724, studying with Czernohorsky; was court Kapellmeister in Mainz (1745-56). He composed church music and a number of concertos and other orchestral works, in a style resembling that of the Mannheim School. —Cf. K. M. Komma, Johann Zach und die tschechischen Musiker im deutschen Umbruch des 18. Jahrhunderts (dissertation; Kassel, 1938).

Zach, Max (Wilhelm), conductor and viola player; b. Lwów, Aug. 31, 1864; d. St. Louis, Feb. 3, 1921. He studied at the Vienna Cons. with Grün (violin), R. Fuchs (harmony), and Krenn (theory); from 1886 till 1907 was first violist in the Boston Symph. Orch., played the viola in the Adamowski Quartet, and conducted the Boston Pops (1887-97). In 1907 he was appointed conductor of the St. Louis Symph. Orch., and held this post until his death.

Zacharewitsch, Michael, Russian-English violinist; b. Ostrov, Aug. 26, 1879; d. London, Dec. 20, 1953. Through Tchaikovsky's financial assistance, Zacharewitsch was sent to study with Ševčík in Prague; later studied for a short time with Ysaÿe in Brussels. He went to London in 1903, and became a British subject in 1915; toured Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa. He wrote The New Art of Violin Playing (1934), and composed Dunkirk—1940 (1945), for violin and orch., as well as violin exercises.

Zachau (Zachow), Friedrich Wilhelm, German organist and composer; b. Leipzig, Nov. 19, 1663; d. Halle, Aug. 14, 1712. He studied with his father, who was town musician in Leipzig, and learned to play the organ, violin, oboe, and harpsichord. From 1684 to his death he was organist of the Liebfrauenkirche in Halle, where Handel studied with him as a boy. Max Seiffert publ. Zachau's works in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vols. 21, 22); organ pieces, chorale settings, etc., were publ. in Breitkopf & Härtel's 'Sammlung von Präludien, Fugen, etc.' and in 'Organum.'

Zádor, Eugen, Hungarian composer; b. Bátorfő, Nov. 5, 1894. He studied at the Vienna Cons. with Heuberger and in Leipzig with Max Reger (composition), also with Abert, Schering, and Volbach (musicology), becoming Dr. phil. with the dissertation, Wesen und Form der symphonischen Dichtung von Liszt bis Strauss. In 1921 he became teacher of composition at the New Vienna Cons.; came to the U. S. in 1939; settled in Hollywood as composer of film music. —Works: operas: Diana (Budapest, Dec. 22, 1923), A holtak szigete (The Island of the Dead, Budapest, March 29, 1928), Rembrandt (Budapest, 1930), Azra (Budapest, Feb. 15, 1936), Christoph Columbus (1939); a ballet, A gépember (The Machine-Man; 1934); for orch.: 4 symphonies (Romantische Symphonie, 1922; Sinfonia tecnica, 1931; Tanzsymphonie, 1936; Children's Symphony, 1941); Bánk bán, symph. poem (1918), Variations on a Hungarian Folksong (1928), Ungarisches Capriccio (1935), Pastorale and Tarantella (Chicago, Feb. 5, 1942), Biblical Triptych (Chicago, Dec. 9, 1943), Elegie and Dance (Philadelphia, March 12, 1954); Chamber Concerto for strings, 2 horns, and piano (1930); piano quintet (1933); songs. —Cf. Donald Tovey, Essays in Musical Analysis (vol. VI; London, 1939).

Zadora, Michael von, pianist and composer; b. New York (of Polish parents), June 14, 1882; d. there, June 30, 1946. He studied with his father; then at the Paris Cons. (1899), and later with Leschetizky and Busoni. He appeared first as a child prodigy; taught a master class at the Łwów Cons. (1911-12); then at the Institute of Musical Art in N. Y. (1913-14). He transcribed for piano several organ and violin works by Buxtehude and Bach; also composed piano pieces, songs, etc.

Zafred, Mario, Italian critic and composer; b. Trieste, Feb. 21, 1922. He studied with Pizzetti at the Santa Cecilia in Rome. Among his works are 5 symphonies, a Canto della pace, for viola and orch. (1951); several string quartets; 3 piano trios; concerto for 2 pianos. In 1949 he became music critic of the Roman daily 'L'Unità.' In conformity with his political philosophy, he employs a simplified idiom of modern music similar to that of Soviet composers. —Cf. G. Viozzi, Mario Zafred, in 'Diapason' (Milan, Oct.-Nov., 1951).

Zagiba, Franz, Slovak musicologist; b. Rosenau, Oct. 20, 1912. He studied music and Slavic philology in Bratislava, and later at the Univ. of Vienna; was director of the Musicological Institute at the Slovak Academy of Sciences and Arts, Bratislava (1942-45); in 1947 joined the staff of the Univ. of Vienna; in 1951 established the Austrian branch of the Chopin Society. He publ. Die Musikdenkmäler der Franziskanerklöster in der Ostslowakei (Prague, 1940); Geschichte der slowakischen Musik (vol. I, Bratislava, 1943; in Czech, with German summary); Opernführer (Bratislava, 1947); Chopin und Wien (Vienna, 1951); Tschaikowskij, Leben und Werk (Zürich, 1953); Johann L. Bella (1843-1936) und das wiener Musikleben (Vienna, 1955); numerous valuable articles dealing with music in Slovakia and historical developments in Slavic music.

Zagwijn (zag'-vine), Henri, Dutch composer; b. Nieuwer-Amstel, July 17, 1878. He had no formal education in music, but followed the trends of Impressionism, and wrote music in the modern French style. In 1916 he was appointed teacher at the Rotterdam Academy of Music; in 1918, founded (with Sem Dresden) the Society of Modern Composers in the Netherlands; later settled in The Hague. He was a follower of Rudolf Steiner's anthroposophic movement, and publ. a book, De Musik in het licht der anthroposophie (1925); also publ. a biography of Debussy (The Hague, 1940). — Works: Auferstehung, an overture (1918); Weihe-Nacht, an orchestral prelude (1918); 2 concertantes for piano and orch. (1939; 1946); concertante for flute and orch. (1941); harp concerto (1948); Nocturne for wind instruments, harp, and celesta (1918); string sextet (1932); quintet for flute, violin, viola, cello, and harp (1937); Pastorale for flute, oboe, and piano (1937); Mystère, for harp and piano (1941); trio for flute, oboe, and clarinet (1944); trio for violin, viola, and cello (1946); Cortège, for brass and percussion (1948); quintet for flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon (1948); trio for flute, oboe, and clarinet (1949); sonata for flute and harpsichord (1949); 2 string quartets; other chamber music; several albums of piano pieces; choral works; declamation for speaking voice with piano or other instrumental accompaniment; a number of songs; Musik zur Eurhythmie (6 books of piano pieces for eurhythmic exercises). —Cf. W. Paap, Henri Zagwijn, in 'Mens en Melodie' (Sept., 1948; Nov., 1954).

Zahn (tsan), Johannes, German composer and music scholar; b. Espenbach, Aug. 1, 1817; d. Neudettelsau, Feb. 17, 1895. He was a student of theology at Munich and Berlin; director of the teachers' seminary at Altdorf (1854-88). In 1875 he founded the periodical 'Siona' for liturgy and church music. He publ. a valuable work, Die Melodien der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenlieder, aus den Quellen geschöpft und mitgeteilt (6 vols., 1889-93); a Sonntagsschulbuch für die lutherischen Gemeinden Nordamerikas (1894); and various other scholarly and didactic works on church music.

Zaimov, Halik, Russian composer; b. Sul-tanovo, near Uralsk, Nov. 13, 1914; studied at the Moscow Cons. With Spadavecchia (q. v.) he wrote an opera, Ak Buzat (The Magic Steed; Ufa, Nov. 7, 1942); also composed a ballet, Galima (1955); 3 cantatas to Bashkir words; 2 string quartets; 24 preludes for piano.

Zajc, Ivan. See Zaytz, Giovanni von.

Zajic (zah'-yits), Florian, violinist; b. Unhoscht, Bohemia, May 4, 1853; d. Berlin, May 17, 1926. He studied at the Prague Cons.; then was a theater violinist in various German cities; in 1891, became violin teacher at the Stern Cons., Berlin; gave sonata recitals; publ. 30 études for violin, and a cadenza to the violin concerto by Brahms.

Zakharov (zah-ha'-rof), Vladimir Grigorievitch, Soviet composer of songs; b. Bogodukhov, on the Don Basin, Oct. 18, 1901; d. Moscow, July 13, 1956. He studied at the Rostov Cons.; after 1932, devoted himself mainly to the composition of mass songs, derived from the polyphonic essence of Russian folk music and employing asymmetric meters. Of these songs, Two Falcons and Who can tell? attained immense popularity in Russia. He received several prizes and was awarded the Order of Lenin.

Zamara, Antonio, Italian harpist; b. Milan, June 13, 1829; d. Hietzing, near Vienna, Nov. 11, 1901. He studied with Sechter in Vienna; for nearly 50 years was 1st harpist at the Kärntnertor Theater; for many years also was prof. at the Vienna Cons. He publ. a Harfenschule (4 books); a number of pieces for harp solo (Barcarolle, La Réveuse, Chant du berceau, L'Absence, Marche des Croates, etc.); also pieces for harp and cello (Élégie, L'Addio, etc.) and transcriptions of operatic airs for 2 harps.

Zampieri, Giusto, Italian writer on music; b. Trieste, Nov. 6, 1879; d. Pavia, June 8, 1950. He was prof. of music history at the Cons. of Milan (1908-23); then at the Univ. of Pavia. He publ. Il Pianoforte (Milan, 1912), F. Gajurio (Pavia, 1925), and other books.

Zandonai (tsahn-doh-nah'-ē), Riccardo, Italian composer; b. Sacco, Trentino, May 28, 1883; d. Pesaro, June 5, 1944. He was a pupil of Gianferrari at Rovereto (1893-98); then studied with Mascagni at the Liceo Rossini in Pesaro. He graduated in 1902; for his final examination he composed a symph. poem for solo voices, chorus, and orch., Il Ritorno di Odisseo. He then turned to opera, which remained his favored genre throughout his career. His first opera was Il Grillo del focolare, based on The Cricket on the Hearth of Dickens, which was produced in Turin on Nov. 28, 1908, with excellent success. With his next opera, Conchita, after the novel La Femme et le pantin by Pierre Louÿs (Milan, Oct. 14, 1911), he established himself as an important Italian composer; the title role was created by the soprano Tarquinia Tarquini, whom Zandonai married in 1917. Conchita received its American première in San Francisco on Sept. 28, 1912; as La Femme et le pantin it was given at the Opéra-Comique, Paris, on March 11, 1929. Zandonai's reputation was enhanced by subsequent works, notably Francesca da Rimini, after Gabriele d'Annunzio (Turin, Feb. 19, 1914; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Dec. 22, 1916), but a previous opera, Melenis (Milan, Nov. 13, 1912), was unsuccessful. During World War I Zandonai participated in the political agitation for the return of former Italian provinces; wrote a student hymn calling for the redemption of Trieste (1915). His other operas were: La Via della finestra (Pesaro, July 27, 1919; revised version, Trieste, Jan. 18, 1923); Giulietta e Romeo (Rome, Feb. 14, 1922); I Cavalieri di Ekebù (Milan, March 7, 1925); Giuliano (Naples, Feb. 4, 1928); Una Partita (Milan, Jan. 19, 1933); and La Farsa amorosa, after Alarcón's El Sombrero de tres picos (Rome, Feb. 22, 1933). He further wrote the symph. poems Primavera in Val di Sole (1908), Patria lontana (1918), Fra gli alberghi delle Dolomiti (1932); Concerto romantico for violin and orch. (1921); Concerto andaloso for cello and small orch. (1937); Rapsodia trentina for orch. (1937); a Messa da Requiem; some chamber music. In 1939 he was appointed director of the Liceo Rossini in Pesaro, remaining there for the rest of his life. —Cf. V. Bonajuti Tarquini, Riccardo Zandonai, nel ricordo dei suoi intimi (Milan, 1951). See also Bibliografia delle opere musicali di Riccardo Zandonai, in 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale' (Dec., 1931).

Zandt, Marie Van. See Van Zandt, Marie.

Zanella (tsäh-nēl'-läh), Amilcare, Italian composer; b. Monticelli d'Ongina, Piacenza, Sept. 26, 1873; d. Pesaro, Jan. 9, 1949. He studied with Andreotti in Cremona, then with Bottesini at the Parma Cons., graduating in 1891. In 1892 he went to South America as pianist and opera conductor; returning to Italy in 1901, he organized his own orch., giving symph. concerts in the principal Italian cities and introducing his own works. He then was director of the Parma Cons. (1903-05); succeeded Mascagni as director of the Liceo Rossini in Pesaro in 1905, and held this post until 1939, when he was succeeded by Zandonai. His operas include Aura (Pesaro, Aug. 27, 1910); La Sulamita (Piacenza, Feb. 11, 1926); and Il Revisore, after Gogol (Trieste, Feb. 20, 1940). He also composed a symph.; 2 symph. poems, Fede and Vita; Festa campestre, Danza paesana etc. for orch.; Fantasia e Fugato (on 4 subjects) for piano and orch.; a nonet for strings, woodwind instruments, and piano; a piano trio; a number of piano pieces (Due Leggende, Passero solitario, Canto d'anima, Ansia, etc.). —Cf. A. Dioli and M. F. Nobili, La Vita e l'arte di Amilcare Zanella (Bergamo, 1941). A compendium, Amilcare Zanella, artista, uomo, educatore, was publ. in Ferrara in 1932.

Zanettini. See Gianettini.

Zang (tsahngk), Johann Heinrich, German organist and composer; b. Zella St. Blasii, near Gotha, April 13, 1733; d. Mainstockheim, Aug. 18, 1811. As a youth he was trained by Bach in Leipzig (for 2 years); composed and engraved Die singende Muse am Main (1776); wrote a Kunst- und Handwerksbuch, Part II of which is Der vollkommene Orgelmacher, oder Lehre von der Orgel und Windprobe (1804). In MS are church cantatas, organ trios, piano sonatas, etc.

Zanger (Zangerus), Johannes, music theorist; b. Weinbrück, Hungary, 1517; d. Brunswick, April 5, 1587. He was a pupil of Heinrich Finck, Arnold von Bruck, and others; became cantor in Brunswick in 1545; also rector and pastor. He publ. Musicae practicae praecepta (Leipzig, 1554). —Cf. H. J. Moser, Johannes Zanger's Praecepta, in 'Musica Disciplina' (vol. 5; 1951).

Zangius, Nikolaus, German organist and composer; b. c. 1570; d. Berlin, c. 1618. He was chamber musician in Brunswick (1597), church organist in Danzig (1602-05); then in Prague (1609), in Vienna, and finally in Berlin (from 1612). He composed a cappella choruses, motets, and a number of quodlibets. His Cantiones sacrae and 3-part German songs are reprinted in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 87). —Cf. Joh. Sachs, N. Zangius' weltliche Lieder (dissertation; Vienna, 1934).

Zanten, Cornelia Van. See Van Zanten.

Zarate, Eliodoro Ortiz de, Chilean composer; b. Valparaiso, Dec. 29, 1865; d. Santiago, June 27, 1953. He studied in his native city; in 1885 won first prize offered by the Chilean government, and studied at the Milan Cons., graduating in 1888. Returning to Chile, he brought out his opera (to his own libretto in Italian), La Fioraia di Lugano (Santiago, Nov. 1, 1895), which was one of the earliest operas, if not the first, by a Chilean composer that was produced in Santiago.

Zaremba, Nikolai Ivanovitch, Russian composer and pedagogue; b. near Vitebsk, June 15, 1821; d. St. Petersburg, April 8, 1879. He studied in Berlin with Marx and others. When the St. Petersburg Cons. was founded in 1862, he was engaged as instructor of theory; in 1867 he succeeded Anton Rubinstein as director, but continued to teach composition; resigned in 1871, and spent several years abroad, returning to St. Petersburg shortly before his death. Although an extremely conservative musician and insignificant composer, he was a good teacher; Tchaikovsky was one of his pupils. Mussorgsky satirized Zaremba in his Peepshow, illustrating Zaremba's classical tastes by a mock quotation from Handel.

Zarembski, Jules de, Polish pianist and composer; b. Zhitomir, Feb. 28, 1854; d. there, Sept. 15, 1885. He studied in Vienna with Dachs and in Weimar with Liszt; in 1879 became prof. of piano at the Brussels Cons.; then returned to Russia. He publ. for piano several concert studies; Suite polonaise; Ballade; Sérénade burlesque; Berceuse; A travers Pologne; Sérénade espagnole; Étrennes (6 pieces); 2 sets of Polish dances for piano 4 hands.

Zarin, Marger, Latvian composer; b. Jaunpiebalg, May 24, 1910; studied with his father, an organist; then at the Cons. of Riga with Wihtol, graduating in 1936. From 1940 to 1950, conductor and musical director of the Latvian Art Theater. —Works: the operas The Lord and the Gusi Player (1939) and Toward a New Shore (Riga, July 20, 1955); Song of Friendship for soloists, chorus, and orch. (1948); Festive Prologue, for chorus with orch. (1950); cantata, The Heroes of Valmier (1950); piano concerto (1936); 3 Legends, for string quartet, flute, clarinet, and English horn; choruses on Latvian folk themes; many song cycles; incidental music to plays; arrangements of folksongs. —Cf. O. Gravitis, Brief Biographies of Latvian Composers (Riga, 1955; pp. 107-13).

Zarlino (tsahr-lē'-noh), Gioseffo (Zarlinus Clodiensis), important Italian music theorist and composer; b. Chioggia, March 22, 1517; d. Venice, Feb. 14, 1590. He entered the Franciscan order in 1539, and in 1541 went to Venice, where he became a pupil of Willaert. In 1565 he succeeded his fellow-pupil Cipriano de Rore as maestro di cappella at San Marco, holding this position until his death; also held the office of chaplain at San Severo. He was greatly esteemed not only as a teacher but also as a composer; indeed, Foscari describes him as 'the famous regenerator of music in all Italy.' Most of Zarlino's MSS are lost; his extant works comprise 21 Modulationes 6 vocum (Venice, 1566; edited by Zarlino's pupil, Usberti), 3 Lectiones pro mortuis (part of a collection of motets a 4 by Cipriano de Rore and others; publ. by Scotto, Venice, 1563), and a Mass (MS in the library of the Liceo Filarmonico in Bologna). 2 motets a 5 were publ. by L. Torchi in 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. I). —Zarlino's lasting significance lies in his theoretical works, particularly the Istituzioni armoniche (in 4 sections; Venice, 1558; republ. 1562, 1573), in which Zarlino treats the major and minor thirds as inversions within a fifth, and consequently, the major and minor triads as mutual mirror reflections of component intervals, thus anticipating the modern dualism of Rameau, Tartini, Hauptmann, and Riemann; also gives lucid and practical demonstrations of double counterpoint and canon, illustrated by numerous musical examples; while adhering to the system of 12 modes, he places the Ionian, rather than the Dorian mode, at the head of the list, thus pointing towards the emergence of the major scale as the preponderant mode; gives 10 rules for proper syllabification of the text in musical settings; suggests equal temperament for the tuning of the lute. In 1571 he publ. Dimostrazioni armoniche, in the form of 5 dialogues between Willaert and his disciples and friends. Zarlino's theories were attacked, with a violence uncommon even for the polemical spirit of the age, by Vincenzo Galilei, one of his former pupils, in Dialogo . . . della musica antica e della moderna (Florence, 1581) and Discorso intorno alle opere di Gioseffo Zarlino (Florence, 1589). In reply to the first of Galilei's books, Zarlino publ. Sopplimenti musicali (Venice, 1588). Collected works of Zarlino (4 vols.), publ. in Venice in 1589, included, in addition to his former books, also a theological tract, Trattato della pazienza. —Cf. G. Ravagnan, Elogio di G. Zarlino (Venice, 1819); G. Caffi, Narrazione della vita e delle opere del prete Gioseffo Zarlino (Venice, 1836); G. Caffi, Storia della musica sacra nella già cappella di San Marco in Venezia (Venice, 1854; vol. I); H. Riemann, Geschichte der Musiktheorie (2nd ed., 1921); V. Bellenio, Gioseffo Zarlino (Chioggia, 1884); F. Högl, Bemerkungen zu Zarlinos Theorie, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 9; 1926); H. Zenck, Zarlinos 'Istituzioni armoniche' . . . , ibid. (vol. 13; 1930). See also G. Reese,

Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 376-79). —Books III-IV of the Istituzioni armoniche are publ. in English transl. in O. Strunk, Source Readings in Music History (N. Y., 1950).

Zarotus, Antonio, Italian music printer, active in Milan. He printed a 'Missale Romanum' dated April 26, 1476, in which he used for the first time movable types for the music (the type is in Gothic style). This incunabulum was publ. 6 months earlier than the 'Missale' of Ulrich Han (q. v.), at one time considered the earliest specimen of music printed from movable type. —Cf. Otto Kinkeldey, Music and Music Printing in Incunabula, in 'Papers' of the Bibliographic Society of America (1932).

Zarzycki (zahr-zits'-kē), Alexander, Polish pianist and composer; b. Lwów, Feb. 21, 1834; d. Warsaw, Nov. 1, 1895. He studied in Lwów and later in Paris (1856-61) with Reber; gave brilliant concerts in France, Germany, Austria, and Poland; was director of the Warsaw Music Society (1866-74). In 1879 he became director of the Warsaw Cons. He wrote effective piano pieces (nocturnes, mazurkas, waltzes, etc.); also a piano concerto; Grande Polonaise for piano with orch.; Introduction et Cracovienne for violin and orch.; Suite polonaise for orch.; Mazourka in G major for violin with orch. (very popular); also 2 albums of songs.

Zaslavsky, Georges, Russian-American conductor; b. Kiev, Feb. 15, 1880; d. New York, Jan. 28, 1953. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Auer (violin) and Liadov (composition). In 1922 he emigrated to the U. S.; made his debut as conductor at a special concert in Carnegie Hall, N. Y., April 12, 1926; in 1927 founded and conducted a 'Beethoven Symph. Orch.' in N. Y., which was discontinued after a few concerts. He also conducted in South America.

Zavertal, Ladislao, Italian bandmaster (of Bohemian extraction); b. Milan, Sept. 29, 1849; d. Cadenabbia, Jan. 29, 1942. He was the son of the clarinetist Wenceslas Hugo Zavertal (1821-1899). After studying at home, he went to Treviso (where he produced an opera) and then to Milan (1869). In 1871 he went to Glasgow, where he conducted various orchestral groups; in 1881, became bandmaster of the Royal Artillery Band at Woolwich; from 1895 to 1905 he conducted Sunday band concerts in the Albert Hall, London, which enjoyed considerable popularity. He returned to Italy in 1906. He was a voluminous composer; wrote operas, symphonies, and band pieces; received various honors from the governments of England, Italy, Greece, Serbia, and Turkey. —Cf. A. Faraone, Il Commendatore Ladislao Zavertal (Treviso, 1929); H. G. Farmer, Ladislao Zavertal: His Life and Work (London, 1949); H. G. Farmer, Cavaliere Zavertal and the Royal Artillery Band (London, 1951).

Zay, (William) Henri, American singing teacher and composer; b. Findlay, Ohio, March 20, 1869; d. New York, Nov. 2, 1927. He studied at the Cleveland Cons. and at the Royal Academy of Music in London. Returning to the U. S., he established himself as a voice specialist, gradually evolving and perfecting his own method, publ. as Practical Psychology of Voice and of Life (N. Y., 1917; reprinted, 1945); composed Cosmic Conception for orch., and several song cycles.

Zaytz, Giovanni von (real name Ivan Zajc), Croatian composer; b. Fiume, Aug. 3, 1831; d. Zagreb, Dec. 16, 1914. He was trained by his father, a bandmaster in the Austrian army; then in Milan by Lauro Rossi. Returning to Fiume, he conducted the municipal band; then was theater conductor in Vienna (1862-70). Upon entering professional life, he changed his name to Giovanni von Zaytz. In 1870 he settled in Zagreb; was conductor of the Zagreb Opera (1870-89) and director of the Cons. there (until 1908). He composed about 1200 works of all descriptions (among them 20 operas), and was the author of the first Croatian national opera, Nikola Šubrić Zrinski (Zagreb, Nov. 4, 1876). He also wrote several Italian operas, of which Amelia, ossia Il Bandito (Fiume, April 14, 1860) enjoyed considerable popularity. Other operas and operettas (all produced by him in Vienna) are: Mannschaft an Bord (Dec. 15, 1863); Fitzliputzli (Nov. 5, 1864); Die Lazzaroni vom Stanzel (May 4, 1865); Die Hexe von Boissy (April 24, 1866); Nachtschwärmer (Nov. 10, 1866); Das Rendezvous in der Schweiz (April 3, 1867); Das Gaugericht (Sept. 14, 1867); Nach Mekka (Jan. 11, 1868); Somnambula (Jan. 25, 1868); Schützen von Einst und Jetzt (July 25, 1868); Meister Puff (May 22, 1869); and Der gefangene Amor (Sept. 12, 1874). In addition he wrote incidental music for 23 plays; 60 cantatas; 250 choral works, sacred and secular; 40 overtures; symphonic poems; more than 200 songs.

Zbinden, Julien-François, Swiss composer; b. Rolle, Nov. 11, 1917. He studied at the Cons. of Lausanne; then was a pupil of Marie Panthès (piano) and René Gerber (composition). After playing in jazz orchestras, he became pianist and assistant director at the Radio-Lausanne. —Works: piano concerto (1945); Divertissement for double-bass and orch. (1949); a symph. (Lausanne, Oct. 26, 1953); concertino for trumpet and strings (1946); septet (1948); wind trio (1949); sonatina for flute and piano (1945); jazz sonatina for piano (1949); concerto for piano and strings (1950-51). —Cf. H. Jaccard, Initiation à la musique contemporaine: trois compositeurs vaudois: Raffaele d'Alessandro, Constantin Regamey, Julien-François Zbinden (Lausanne, 1955).

Zecchi (tsck'-kee), Adone, Italian composer and conductor; b. Bologna, July 23, 1904; he studied composition with Franco Alfano at the Liceo Musicale in Bologna, graduating in 1926; in 1930 he established the Orchestra Bolognese da Camera, with which he gave concerts in Italy; then joined the staff of the Liceo Musicale, Bologna; also was active as music critic. His works comprise a Partita for orch. (1933), Toccata, Ricercale e Finale for orch. (1941), Due Astrazioni in forma di fuga for a small ensemble (Copenhagen Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 2, 1947); Requiem for chorus and orch. (1946); a piano trio and other chamber music.

Zecchi (tsck'-kee), Carlo, Italian pianist and conductor; b. Rome, July 18, 1903. He studied with Refice in Rome and with Artur Schnabel and Busoni in Berlin; began his concert career at 17; made a tour of the U. S. in 1931. In 1938 he became interested in conducting; appeared as conductor in Vienna, London, and Edinburgh; also taught at the Santa Cecilia in Rome.

Zech, Frederick, American pianist and composer; b. Philadelphia, May 10, 1858; d. San Francisco, Oct. 25, 1926. He was taken to San Francisco as a child, and studied piano there; later in Berlin with Kullak; subsequently (1880-82) taught at Kullak's 'Neue Akademie' there. Upon his return to San Francisco he held classes in advanced piano playing; in 1882-83 and 1902, organized and conducted symph. concerts there. His compositions comprise 2 operas, La Paloma and Wa-Kin-Yon or The Passing of the Red Men; 4 symphonies; 4 symph. poems: The Eve of St. Agnes, after Keats (1898), Lamia, after Keats (1902), The Raven, after Poe (1902), and The Wreck of the Hesperus, after Longfellow (1909); 4 piano concertos; a violin concerto; a cello concerto; a piano quintet; 2 string quartets; a piano trio; 3 violin sonatas; a cello sonata; a flute sonata; 2 clarinet sonatas.

Zeckwer, Richard, German-American pianist and composer; b. Stendal, Prussia, April 30, 1850; d. Philadelphia, Dec. 30, 1922. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Moscheles (piano), Hauptmann, Richter, and Reinecke (composition). In 1870 he settled in Philadelphia as teacher and church organist. He composed 2 overtures (Festival and Bride of Messina); a number of songs; publ. A Scientific Investigation of Piano-Touch (1902). His son, Camille Zeckwer (b. Philadelphia, June 26, 1875; d. Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1924), was educated by his father, studied composition in N. Y. with Dvořák, and later with Ph. Scharwenka in Berlin; returning to Philadelphia, he devoted most of his time to teaching. He composed a Swedish Fantasy for violin and orch.; piano concerto (performed by him with the Philadelphia Orch. in 1899, 1904, and 1914); The New Day, cantata (1914); Sérénade mélancolique for violin, cello, and piano; Sohrab and Rustum, symph. poem (Philadelphia, Feb. 4, 1916); piano pieces (prelude and fugue, a sonata, Rapsodia fantastica, etc.); choruses and songs. A 3-act opera, Jane and Janetta, was not produced.

Zehnder, Max, Swiss composer; b. Turgi, Canton Aargau, Nov. 17, 1901. He studied at the Zürich Cons. and later became a provincial teacher of music. Among his works are several cantatas; a toccata for orch.; a concerto for flute, oboe, and strings; vocal compositions.

Zeidman, Boris Isaacovitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, Feb. 10, 1908; studied with M. Steinberg at the St. Petersburg Cons. In 1939 he joined the faculty of the Cons. of Baku. —Works: operas: The People's Wrath (Baku, Dec. 28, 1941), Son of the Regiment (Baku, Feb. 23, 1955); a symphonietta (1943); 3 overtures on Azerbaijan themes (1949; 1950; 1951); viola concerto (1938); bassoon concerto (1938); cello concerto (1949); piano sonata; an album of 24 children's pieces for piano; songs.

Zeinally, Assaf, Azerbaijan composer; b. Derbent, April 2, 1909; d. Baku, Oct. 27, 1932. He studied trumpet and cello in Baku; made a study of folk music with Gadzhibekov; graduated from the Baku Cons. in 1931, and was appointed to its faculty, but he died a year later at the age of 23. He was a highly promising composer; wrote pieces based on Azerbaijan themes for 2 cellos, for violin and piano, for vocal duet, and for a piano trio; also many songs; a piano sonata; a children's suite for piano; 9 fugues for piano.

Zeisl, Eric, Austrian-American composer; b. Vienna, May 18, 1905. He studied at the State Academy of Music in Vienna; publ. his first songs at the age of 16; in 1934 received the Austrian State prize for a Requiem. He emigrated to America in 1939, and settled in Hollywood. —Works: the operas Leonore und Lena (Prague, 1937) and Job (1945-58); Little Symphony (Vienna Radio, May 30, 1937); Passacaglia Fantasy for orch. (Vienna, Nov. 4, 1937); November, suite for chamber orch. (N. Y., Jan. 25, 1941); Cossack Dance for orch. (Hollywood Bowl, Aug. 18, 1946); Return of Ulysses, suite for chamber orch. (Chicago, Nov. 17, 1948); Requiem Ebraico; 4 Songs for Wordless Chorus; Sonata barocca for piano (1949); Brandeis Sonata for violin and piano (1950); viola sonata; cello sonata; 2 string quartets; violin pieces; songs.

Zeisler (tsis'-ler), Fannie (Bloomfield), noted pianist; b. Bielitz, Austrian Silesia, July 16, 1863; d. Chicago, Aug. 20, 1927. Her original name was Blumenfeld; it was changed to Bloomfield when the family settled in Chicago in 1868. Her first teachers there were Carl Wolfsohn and Bernhard Ziehn. She made her concert debut in Chicago on Feb. 26, 1875; in 1878 she went to Vienna, where she studied with Leschetizky (1878-83). From 1883 until 1893 she played annually in the U. S.; in 1893 she made a tour of Germany and Austria, which established her reputation as one of the best woman-pianists; other European tours followed in 1894-95, 1898, 1902-03, 1911-12, and the spring of 1914. She then returned to Chicago; made her farewell appearance there on Feb. 25, 1925, in a special concert to mark her golden jubilee. On Oct. 18, 1885, she married Sigmund Zeisler, a Chicago lawyer. —See 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Zelenka, Jan Dismas, Bohemian composer; b. Louňovice, Oct. 16, 1679; d. Dresden, Dec. 23, 1745. He received his general education in Prague; in 1710 he joined the court orch. in Dresden, playing the double-bass; then studied with Fux in Vienna and with Lotti in Italy (1716). In 1719 he returned to Dresden, where he became assistant to Heinichen, succeeding him in 1729; he was named court Kapellmeister in 1733. He was a prolific composer; wrote much church music, including 21 Masses, 3 Requiems, and many motets; 3 Italian oratorios, etc.; and a melodrama De Sancto Venceslao; also an interesting overture entitled Hypocondria. —Cf. M. Fürstenau, Zur Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters am Hofe zu Dresden, vol. II (Dresden, 1862); O. Schmid, Musik am sächsischen Hofe, Part VI (contains musical examples); K. M. Komma, Johann Zach und die tschechischen Musiker im deutschen Umbruch des 18. Jahrhunderts (dissertation; Kassel, 1938).

Zelenski (zhā-lēn'skē), Wladislaw, Polish composer and pedagogue; b. Grodowice, near Cracow, July 6, 1837; d. Cracow, Jan. 23, 1921. He studied with Mirecki in Cracow, Krejčí in Prague, and Reber in Paris. He returned to Poland in 1871; was theory teacher at the Warsaw Cons. (1872-81). In 1887 he organized the Cracow Cons., and remained its director until his death; he also taught piano and theory there. As a pedagogue, he enjoyed a very high reputation; among his pupils were Stojowski, Opienski, and Szopski. He publ. 2 music manuals. — Works: operas: Konrad Wallenrod (Lwów, Feb. 26, 1885), Coplana (Cracow, July 23, 1896), Janek (Lwów, Oct. 4, 1900), Stara baśń (Lwów, March 14, 1907); 2 symphonies; 2 overtures; piano concerto; 7 cantatas; 2 Masses; motets for men's voices; 2 violin sonatas; a piano trio; 2 string quartets; a string sextet; a piano quartet; 3 piano sonatas; about 80 songs to Polish words; a number of piano pieces (Valse-caprice, Humoreske und Gavotte, Grand scherzo de concert, Grosse Polonaise, Moments d'un carnaval, etc.); 25 preludes for organ. —Cf. F. Szopski, W. Zeleniski (Warsaw, 1928); Z. Jachimecki, Wladislaw Zeleniski; życie i twórczość, 1837-1921 (Cracow, 1952).

Zelinka, Jan Evangelista, Czech composer; b. Prague, Jan. 13, 1893. He studied music with his father, an organist, and later with J. B. Foerster, Suk, and Novák; wrote a number of works for the stage, including 4 operas: Dceruška hostinského (The Tavern-keeper's Little Daughter; Prague, Feb. 24, 1925), Devátá louka (The Ninth Field; Prague, Sept. 19, 1931), Palicafy švec (The Stubborn Cobbler; Prague, March 28, 1944), Melusina (Pilsen, April 15, 1950); ballets and incidental music; 3 cantatas; chamber music; songs.

Zelle, Friedrich, German musicologist; b. Berlin, Jan. 24, 1845; d. there, Sept. 10, 1927. He studied piano with Kullak, composition with Geyer and Bellermann; taught at the Humboldt Akademie in Berlin (1875-92) and later was director of the Berlin Realschule (1893-1915). He edited Hassler's Lustgarten (1887), J. W. Franck's Choral-kantate (1890), and Keiser's opera Jodelet (1892); also Passions by Sebastiani and Theile for the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vol. 17). —Writings: Beiträge zur Geschichte der ältesten deutschen Oper: I, J. W. Franck (1889), II, Joh. Theile und N. A. Strungk (1891), III, J. Ph. Förtsch (1893); Die Singweisen der ältesten evangelischen Lieder (1899, 1900); Theorie der Musik (1880); Das erste evangelische Choralbuch [Osiander, 1586] (1913); Das älteste lutherische Hausgesangbuch [the so-called Färbefass-Enchiridion of 1524] (1903); Balletstücke aus Keiserschen Opern (1890).

Zeller (tsel'-ler), Carl, Austrian composer of operettas; b. St. Peter-in-der-Au, July 19, 1842; d. Baden, near Vienna, Aug. 17, 1898. He was an official in the Austrian Ministry of Education. Although following music only as an avocation, he became one of the most popular operetta composers of the day, winning extraordinary success with his Der Vogelhändler (Vienna, Jan. 10, 1891) and Der Obersteiger (Vienna, Jan. 5, 1894). Other successful operettas (all produced in Vienna) were Joconde (March 18, 1876), Die Carbonari (Nov. 27, 1880), Der Vagabund (Oct. 30, 1886), and Der Kellermeister (Dec. 21, 1901). —Cf. C. W. Zeller, Mein Vater Karl Zeller (St. Plöten, 1942).

Zellner (tsel'-ner), Julius, Austrian pianist and composer; b. Vienna, May 18, 1832; d. Mürrzuschlag, July 28, 1900. He was first engaged in a mercantile career, but abandoned it for music; became successful in Vienna as teacher and composer. — Works: 2 symphonies; Melusine, symph. suite; piano concerto; piano quartet; 3 piano trios; 2 cello sonatas; 2 violin sonatas; a number of piano pieces (Adagio und Allegro appassionato; Zwei kleine Suiten; Zwei Sonatinen; etc.); piano pieces 4 hands (Drei deutsche Tänze, etc.); also a puppet play, Wasserkaspar.

Zellner, Leopold Alexander, Austrian organist and music editor; b. Agram, Sept. 23, 1823; d. Vienna, Nov. 24, 1894. He studied with his father, organist of the Agram Cathedral; at 15 became a church organist; taught music in Vienna; founded and edited the 'Blätter für Theater, Musik und bildende Kunst' (1855-68). In 1868 he became prof. of harmony at the Vienna Cons.; wrote a method for the harmonium, and made improvements in its mechanism; publ. instructive pieces; also composed choruses and chamber music; ed. violin sonatas by Nardini and Vivaldi with additional piano parts. His lectures were publ. as Vorträge über Akustik (2 vols.; 1892) and Vorträge über Orgelbau (1893).

Zelter (tsel'-ter), Carl Friedrich, eminent German composer and teacher; b. Berlin, Dec. 11, 1758; d. there, May 15, 1832. The son of a mason, he was brought up in the same trade, but his musical inclinations soon asserted themselves; he studied organ, and at the age of 18 had a cantata of his composition performed in a church; then he became a pupil of K. F. C. Fasch and Kirnberger; was engaged as music director in Rellstab's 'Liebhaber-Konzerte'; in 1786 he brought out a funeral cantata on the death of Frederick the Great; in 1791 he joined the 'Singverein' (later 'Singakademie') conducted by Fasch, often acting as his deputy, and succeeding him in 1800. He was elected associate ('Assessor') of the 'Akademie' in 1806; prof. in 1809. In 1807 he organized a 'Ripienschule' for orchestral practice; and in 1809 he founded in Berlin the 'Liedertafel,' a pioneer men's choral society which became famous; similar organizations were subsequently formed throughout Germany, and later in America. Zelter composed about 100 men's choruses for the 'Liedertafel.' In 1822 he founded the Royal Institute for Church Music, of which he was director until his death (the Institute was later reorganized as the Akademie für Kirchen- und Schulmusik). Goethe greatly admired Zelter's musical settings of his poems, preferring them to Schubert's and Beethoven's; this predilection led to their friendship, which was reflected in a voluminous correspondence, Briefwechsel zwischen Goethe und Zelter (ed. in 6 vols. by F. W. Riemer, Berlin, 1833-34; ed. in 3 vols. by L. Geiger, Leipzig, 1906; ed. in 4 vols. by M. Hecker, Leipzig, 1913; English transl. by A. D. Coleridge, London, 1887). He publ. a biography of Fasch (Berlin, 1801). Zelter's autobiography was first publ. under the title, C. F. Zelter. Eine Lebensbeschreibung nach autobiographischen Manuscripten, edited by W. Rintel; then as C. F. Zelter. Darstellungen seines Lebens (Weimar, 1931). His songs are historically important, since they form a link between old ballad types and the new art of the lied, which found its flowering in Schubert and Schumann. Zelter's settings of Goethe's König von Thule and of Es ist ein Schuss gefallen became extremely popular. Other songs were publ. in collections of 12 each (1796 and 1801), followed by other albums: Sämtliche Lieder, Balladen, Romanzen (1810 et seq.), Neue Sammlung (1821), and 6 deutsche Lieder (1827). New editions were brought out by Jöde (1930), Landshoff (1932), etc.; the cantatas Johanna Sebus and Die Gunst des Augenblicks were publ. by Müller-Blattau. —Cf. W. Bornemann, Die Zeltersche Liedertafel in Berlin (Berlin, 1851); L. Sieber, C. F. Zelter und der deutsche Männergesang (Basel, 1862); H. Kuhlo, Geschichte der Zelterschen Liedertafel von 1809-1909 (Berlin, 1909); G. R. Kruse, Zelter (Leipzig, 1915); J. W. Schottländer, Zelters Beziehungen zu den Komponisten seiner Zeit, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. XV); II. J. Moser, Goethes Dichtung in der neueren Musik, in the 'Goethe-Jahrbuch' (1931); J. Müller-Blattau, Goethe und die Kantate, in the 'Jahrbuch Peters' (1931); G. Schünemann, C. F. Zelter, der Begründer der preussischen Musikpflege (Berlin, 1932); G. Wittmann, Das klavierbegleitete Sololied C. F. Zelters (dissertation, Gießen, 1936); G. Schünemann, C. F. Zelter: der Mensch und sein Werk (Berlin, 1937); S. Holtzmann, ed., C. F. Zelter im Spiegel seines Briefwechsel mit Goethe (Weimar, 1957); W. Reich, ed., C. F. Zelter, Selbstdarstellung, a collection of documents (Zürich, 1958).

Zemlinsky, Alexander von, Austrian composer, conductor, and teacher; b. Vienna (of Polish parentage), Oct. 4, 1872; d. Larchmont, N. Y., March 16, 1942. He studied at the Vienna Cons. with Door (piano), Krenn, Robert Fuchs and J. N. Fuchs (composition); was encouraged by Brahms, who expressed a favorable opinion of his early chamber music. In 1900 he obtained the post of conductor of the Karlsruhtheater in Vienna; in 1906 became conductor of the Vienna Volksoper; 1908, at the Vienna Opera. In 1909 he was engaged as conductor at the Mannheim Opera; from 1911 to 1927, conducted at the German Opera in Prague; also taught composition and conducting at the Prague College of Music. From 1927 to 1932 he was conductor of the Berlin State Opera; in 1933 returned to Vienna; also made guest appearances in Spain, Russia, etc. In 1938, he emigrated to the U. S. He was the teacher of Arnold Schoenberg, who married his sister. —Works: operas: Sarema (Munich, Oct. 10, 1897); Es war einmal (his most successful work; Vienna, Jan. 22, 1900, Mahler conducting); Kleider machen Leute (Vienna, Dec. 2, 1910); Eine florentinische Tragödie (Stuttgart, Jan. 30, 1917); Der Zwerg (Cologne, May 28, 1922); Der Kreidekreis (Zürich, Oct. 14, 1933). He also wrote several symphonies, of which the 1st won the Beethoven Prize of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde (Vienna, 1897); choruses, chamber music, piano pieces, and songs. —Cf. special issue of 'Der Auftakt' (Prague; vol. 1; 1921).

Zenatello, Giovanni, Italian tenor; b. Verona, Feb. 22, 1876; d. New York, Feb. 11, 1949. He studied in Verona, and for 2 years sang as a baritone in minor opera companies; then took lessons from Moretti in Milan, making his début as a tenor at the San Carlo Theater in Naples as Canio in I Pagliacci (May, 1901); from 1903 till 1907 was on the roster of La Scala, Milan, where he created the role of Pinkerton in Puccini's Madama Butterfly (Feb. 17, 1904); from 1905 he sang at Covent Garden, London, in several successive seasons; made his American début at Hammerstein's Manhattan Opera House, on Nov. 4, 1907, as Enzo Grimaldo in Ponchielli's La Gioconda. From 1909 till 1914 he was the leading tenor of the Boston Opera Co., except for the season of 1912-13, when he sang with the Chicago Opera Co.; also appeared with various opera companies in South America, Spain, and Russia. He retired from the stage in 1930; then settled in N. Y. as a singing teacher, maintaining a studio with his wife, the contralto Maria Gay (q. v.), whom he married in 1913. They trained many well-known singers, among them Lily Pons and Nino Martini.

Zenck, Hermann, German musicologist; b. Karlsruhe, March 19, 1898; d. Freiburg-im-Breisgau, Dec. 2, 1950. He studied with Ordenstein at the Karlsruhe Cons.; later in Heidelberg (with Kroyer), in Munich and Leipzig (Dr. phil., 1924); then became assistant at the Institute for Musicology in Leipzig, where he also taught at the Cons. In 1932 he joined the faculty of the Univ. of Göttingen; in 1943, went to Freiburg-im-Breisgau as prof. at the Univ. there. He edited the periodical 'Musik und Volk'; was editor of works by Willaert (2 vols. publ. in 1937; vol. 3 in 1950); and Sixtus Dietrich (1942); also edited the Megalynodia of Praetorius (1934); Johann Schultz's Musikalischer Lustgarten (1937); Handel's Italian cantatas, etc. —Publications: Marienklage und Osterspiel des Wolfenbüttler Codex (Hamburg, 1927); Sixtus Dietrich (Leipzig, 1928); Zarlino's Institutioni harmoniche . . ., in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1930); many valuable articles. —Cf. W. Gerstenberg, Hermann Zenck, in 'Musikforschung' (vol. 4; 1951).

Zenger (tsen'-ger), Max, German composer and conductor; b. Munich, Feb. 2, 1837; d. there, Nov. 18, 1911. He studied in Munich and Leipzig; in 1860 became theater conductor in Regensburg; in 1869, musical director of the Munich Court Opera; then was court conductor at Karlsruhe (1872-78); conductor of the Munich Oratorio Society (1878-85) and other choral societies there. —Works: operas: Die Foscari (Munich, 1863), Ruy Blas (Mannheim, 1868), Wieland der Schmied (Munich, 1880; revised, 1894); Eros und Psyche (Munich, 1901); oratorio Kain, after Byron (Munich, 1867; often performed elsewhere in Germany); secular cantata Die Heintzelmännchen; 2 ballets for King Ludwig II of Bavaria, Venus und Adonis and Les Plaisirs de l'île enchantée (1881); 2 Gretchen scenes from Faust for soprano and small orch.; Zwei Konzertstücke for mixed chorus and string orch.; Altgriechisches Liederspiel for soprano solo, chorus, and orch.; Die Kraniche des Ibis, melodrama with orch.; Die deutsche Flotte for men's chorus and orch.; a symph.; Tragische Ouvertüre; Adagio concertante for cello and orch.; a piano trio; a cello sonata; choruses; piano pieces; songs. He wrote the valuable Entstehung und Entwicklung der Instrumentalmusik (Langensalza, 1906) and Geschichte der Münchener Oper (posthumous; ed. by Th. Kroyer, 1923).

Zeno (tsä'-no), Apostolo, famous Italian opera librettist; b. Venice, Dec. 11, 1668; d. there, Nov. 11, 1750. In 1710 he founded the 'Giornale dei Letterati d'Italia'; in 1718 was appointed court poet at Vienna; returned to Venice in 1729. The total number of librettos written by him (some in collaboration with Pietro Pariati) is 71; they were collected and edited by Gasparo Gozzi as Poesie drammatiche di Apostolo Zeno (10 vols., Venice, 1744; reprinted in 11 vols. at Orléans, 1785-86). A man of great knowledge and culture, he was also an ardent numismatist; his large collection of coins was exhibited at Vienna in 1955. —Cf. A. Wotquenne, Libretti d'opéras et d'oratorios italiens du XVII<sup>me</sup> siècle (Brussels, 1901);

A. Wotquenne, Table alphabétique des morceaux mesurés contenus dans les oeuvres dramatiques de Zeno, Metastasio et Goldoni (Leipzig, 1905; also in German); M. Fehr, Apostolo Zeno und seine Reform des Operntextes (dissertation, Zürich, 1912); O. G. Sonneck, Catalogue of Opera Librettos Printed before 1800 (2 vols.; Washington, 1914); R. Giazotto, Apostolo Zeno, Pietro Metastasio e la critica del settecento, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1946).

Zepler (tsep'-ler), Bogumil, German composer; b. Breslau, May 6, 1858; d. Krummhübel im Riesengebirge, Aug. 17, 1918. He studied architecture in Berlin, then medicine at the Univ. of Breslau (M.D., 1884); later began the study of music with H. Urban in Berlin; attracted attention in 1891 with Cavalleria Berolina, a parody on Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana; wrote stage music for Ernst von Wolzogen's artistic cabaret, 'Überbrett!' (1901-02); also wrote a parody on Strauss' Salome. He further composed the comic operas Der Brautmarkt zu Hira (Berlin, 1892), Der Vicomte von Letorières (Hamburg, 1899), Die Bäder von Lucca (Berlin, 1905), Monsieur Bonaparte (Leipzig, 1911); several operettas (Diogenes, Pick und Pocket, Die Liebesfestung, etc.); a serious 1-act opera, Nacht (Bern, 1901); 2 pantomimes, Die Galgenfrist and Die Geisterbraut; songs (Rokokolieder, etc.). He was editor in Berlin of 'Musik für Alle' (from 1904).

Zerrahn, Carl, German-American conductor; b. Malchow, Mecklenburg, July 28, 1826; d. Milton, Mass., Dec. 29, 1909. He was a pupil of Fr. Weber at Rostock; studied further in Hanover and Berlin. After the German revolution of 1848, he emigrated to the U. S., settling in Boston; played the flute in the Germania Orch.; then became active as conductor. For 42 years (1854-96) he was conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society; also conducted the concerts of the Boston Philharmonic (1855-63) and of the Harvard Mus. Association (1865-82). From 1866 to 1897 he conducted the Worcester, Mass., Music Festivals. He was choral director for the famous Peace Jubilee Concerts in Boston in 1869 and 1872, and conducted the huge choruses assembled on these occasions. He taught harmony and singing at the New England Cons. (until 1898). —Cf. 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Zeuner, Charles (real name Heinrich Christoph), German-American organist; b.

Eisleben, Saxony, Sept. 20, 1795; d. (suicide) Philadelphia, Nov. 7, 1857. He studied in Erfurt. About 1830 he settled in Boston, where he became organist at Park Street Church; also organist of the Handel and Haydn Society (1830-37), and briefly its president (1838-39). He then went to Philadelphia, where he served as church organist. He composed one of the earliest American oratorios, The Feast of Tabernacles (Boston, May 3, 1837); publ. Church Music, Consisting of New and Original Anthems, Motets and Chants (1831); The American Harp (1832); The Ancient Lyre, a book of hymn tunes (1834 and several later eds.); Organ Voluntaries (1840); contributed to Lowell Mason's Lyra Sacra (1832); some of his compositions are also included in The Psalter, ed. by Mason and Webb (1845). For an account of his suicide, see the 'New York Mus. Review and Gazette' for Nov. 14, 1857. —Cf. F. J. Metcalf, American Writers and Compilers of Sacred Music (1925). See also 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Zeuner (tsoi'-ner), Karl Traugott, German pianist and composer; b. Dresden, April 28, 1775; d. Paris, Jan. 24, 1841. He studied with Türk in Halle and Clementi in Russia; gave concerts and taught in Paris, Vienna, St. Petersburg, and Dresden. He composed 2 piano concertos; 3 string quartets; variations on a Russian theme for piano, violin, and cello; polonaises, fantasias, etc., for piano; these pieces were much in vogue in his time.

Zganec (zhgäh'-nets), Vinko, Croatian musicologist and folksong collector; b. Vratishinci, Jan. 22, 1890. He studied at the Univ. of Zagreb; traveled in the countryside gathering native melodies, and published 5 albums of arrangements of these songs (1924 and 1950-51). In his analysis of the structure of Croatian songs, he applies modern methods of ethnomusicology.

Zhelobinsky, Valery Victorovitch, Russian composer; b. Tambov, Jan. 27, 1913; d. Leningrad, Aug. 13, 1946. He studied at the Tambov Music School; then entered the Leningrad Cons. as a student of Vladimir Shtcherbatchev (1928-32); in 1942 was appointed prof. at the Tambov Music School; then returned to Leningrad. —Works: operas: Kamarinsky Muzhik (Leningrad, Sept. 15, 1933), Her Saint's Day (Leningrad, Feb. 22, 1935), Mother, after Maxim Gorky (Leningrad, Dec. 30, 1938); operetta The Last Ball (Leningrad, March 30, 1939); 6 symphonies: I (1930); II, To the Memory of Revolutionary Victims (1932); III, Dramatic Symphony (Moscow, Dec. 17, 1939); IV (Moscow, May 30, 1943); V (1944); VI (1946); 3 piano concertos (1933, 1934, 1939); violin concerto (1934); Romantic Poem for violin and orch. (1939); 24 preludes for piano; 2 children's albums for piano; film music.

Zhiganov, Nazib, Russian composer; b. Uralsk, Jan. 15, 1911; was brought up in an orphan asylum; educated in a music school in Kazan; then studied with Litinsky in Moscow. In 1945 he was appointed director of the Kazan Cons.; was awarded the Order of Lenin in 1950. He composed several operas to librettos in the Tatar language: Katchkyn (Kazan, June 17, 1939); Irek (Liberty; Kazan, Feb. 24, 1940); Altynchetch (The Golden-Haired; Kazan, July 12, 1941); Ildar (Kazan, Nov. 7, 1942); Tulyak (Kazan, July 27, 1945); Namus (Honor; Kazan, June 25, 1950); the ballet Zugra (Kazan, May 17, 1946); a symph.; a suite on Tatar folk themes; overtures; marches; piano pieces; film music.

Zhitomirsky, Alexander Matveyevitch, Russian composer; b. Kherson, May 23, 1881; d. Leningrad, Dec. 16, 1937. He studied violin and theory in Vienna; then at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Rimsky-Korsakov, Liadov, and Glazunov. In 1914 joined the staff of the Cons., as instructor of composition. —Works: Heroic Poem, for orch. (1933); violin concerto (1937); string quartet (1927); Elegy for cello and piano; several songs to Russian, Jewish, and French words.

Zhivotov, Alexey Semionovitch, Russian composer; b. Kazan, Nov. 14, 1904. He studied at the Leningrad Cons. with Tchernov and Vladimir Shtcherbatchev, graduating in 1930. During the siege of Leningrad (1941-42), he remained in the city and was awarded a medal for defense. In his earlier works he experimented with jazz in symph. music. His compositions include a number of patriotic overtures; incidental music to plays by Shakespeare, Sheridan, Lope de Vega, etc.; many songs and choruses.

Zhukovsky, Herman Leontievitch, Ukrainian composer; b. Radzivilovo, Volynya, Nov. 13, 1913; studied piano and composition at the Kiev Cons. (graduated in 1941). His opera From the Bottom of My Heart (Moscow, Jan. 16, 1951) was severely criticized by the Central Committee of the Communist Party for ideological and musical faults; he revised it radically, and the new version was approved. Other works include the operas Marina (Kiev, March 12, 1939) and Honor (1943); piano concerto (1938); violin concerto (1953); film music; mass songs.

Ziani (tsyah'-nē), Marco Antonio, Italian composer, nephew of Pietro Andrea Ziani; b. Venice, c. 1653; d. Vienna, Jan. 22, 1715. In 1700 he became vice Kapellmeister at the Vienna court; in 1712, Kapellmeister. He composed 45 operas and serenades, of which the following were produced in Vienna: Il Giordano pio (July 26, 1700); Gli Ossequi della notte (July 22, 1701); Temistocle (June 9, 1701); La Fuga dell'invidia (Nov. 15, 1701); Il Romolo (June 9, 1702); Cajo Popilio (June 9, 1704); L' Ercole vincitore dell'invidia (March 19, 1706); Meleagro (Aug. 16, 1706); Chilonida (April 21, 1709); Il Campidoglio ricuperato (July 26, 1709); L'Atenaide (with Negri and Caldara; Nov. 19, 1714). He also composed church music.

Ziani, Pietro Andrea, Italian organist and composer, uncle of Marco Antonio Ziani; b. Venice, c. 1620; d. Naples, Feb. 12, 1684. In 1669 he succeeded Cavalli as 2nd organist at San Marco, Venice; went to Naples in 1676; in 1677 he entered the service of Empress Eleonora at Vienna; pensioned in 1684. He wrote 23 operas, including Le Fortune di Rodope, e di Damira (Venice, Carnival of 1657), L'Antigona delusa da Alceste (Venice, Jan. 15, 1660), La Congiura del vizio contra la virtù (Vienna, Nov. 15, 1663), and La Circe (Vienna, June 9, 1665); oratorio, Le Lagrime della Vergine (Venice, 1662); Sacras laudes a 5 (1659); sonatas for 3, 4, 5, or 6 instruments (1691); church music; etc.— Cf. H. Kretzschmar, Weitere Beiträge zur Geschichte der venezianischen Oper, in the 'Jahrbuch der Bibliothek Peters' (1910).

Zich, Jaroslav, Czech musicologist and composer; son of Otakar Zich; b. Prague, Jan. 17, 1912. He studied with his father as a youth; then with J. B. Foerster (1928-31); went to Charles Univ. in Prague (Ph. D., 1936); from 1937, on the staff of the Czechoslovak broadcasting organization. —Works: ballet, U muziky (At the Dance; 1940); Letný host (Flying Guest; 1931), set of songs with orch. or piano; Romance helgolandská (1931), recitation with orch.; a quintet for wind instruments; a string quartet; duo for violin and cello; Variations and Fugues for piano; songs.

Zich, Otakar, Czech composer and musicologist; father of Jaroslav Zich; b. Králové Městec, March 25, 1879; d. Ouběnice, near Benešov, July 9, 1934. He was educated at Charles Univ. in Prague (1897-1901; Ph.D., 1902); appointed lecturer there in 1911; in 1920, prof. of esthetics at Masaryk Univ. in Brno; in 1924 he again became a member of the staff of Charles Univ., where he remained until his death. —Works: opera: Marlířský nápad (Painter's Whim; Prague, March 11, 1910); Vina (Guilt, Prague, March 14, 1922); Preciézky, after Molière's Les Précieuses ridicules (Prague, May 11, 1926); also cantatas, song cycles, part-songs, etc. Compiled Vojenský spěvník československý (unaccompanied melodies; Prague, 1922). Author of books on musical esthetics and Bohemian folk music. —Cf. J. Hutter, Otakar Zich a jeho 'Vina' (Prague, 1922).

Zichy (zit'-chē), Géza, Count Vasony-Keö, Hungarian left-hand pianist and composer; b. Sztára Castle, July 22, 1849; d. Budapest, Jan. 14, 1924. He studied with R. Volkmann and Liszt. At the age of 14 he lost his right arm in a hunting accident, and, refusing to give up music, developed his left-hand technique to the point of virtuosity; also made arrangements for left hand. On several occasions he played in public with Liszt an arrangement of the Rákóczy March for 3 hands. From 1875 to 1918 he was president of the National Cons. in Budapest; was also intendant of the National Theater and Opera there (1890-94). He composed 3 operas, produced at Budapest: A vár története (Castle Story; May 16, 1888), Alár (April 11, 1896), Roland mester (Jan. 10, 1899), and a dramatic trilogy on the life of Rákóczi: Nemo (March 30, 1905), Rákóczi Ferenz (Jan. 30, 1909), and Rodostó (March 20, 1912); a ballet, Gemma (Prague, 1903); a cantata, Dolorés (1889); a piano concerto (1902); a piano sonata; studies and piano pieces for the left hand alone; songs; etc. He publ. an autobiography, Aus meinem Leben (German ed., 3 vols., 1911-20).

Ziegler, Edward, American music critic and administrator; b. Baltimore, March 25, 1870; d. New York, Oct. 25, 1947. He was music critic of the N.Y. 'American' in 1902, of the N.Y. 'World' from 1903 to 1908, and of the N.Y. 'Herald' from 1908 to 1917; was administrative secretary of the Metropolitan Opera House (1917-20), and assistant general manager (from 1920).

Ziehn (tsēn), Bernhard, noted German-American music theorist and teacher; b. Erfurt, Jan. 20, 1845; d. Chicago, Sept. 8, 1912. He studied at the teacher's seminary in Erfurt; was for 3 years a school teacher in Mühlhausen, Thuringia; in 1868, emigrated to the U.S.; taught German, mathematics, and music theory at the German Lutheran School in Chicago (1868-71); subsequently became a private music teacher and established himself as a theorist; his 'enharmonic law,' built on the principle of functional equality of chords, is an original contribution to the theory of harmony. He was also an important teacher; John Alden Carpenter, among others, was his pupil. —Writings: System der Übungen für Clavierspieler (1881); Ein Lehrgang für den ersten Clavierunterricht (1881); Harmonie- und Modulationslehre (1887; 2nd ed., 1909; completely recast and publ. in English as Manual of Harmony: Theoretical and Practical, 1907; valuable for the choice and range of the examples); Five- and Six-Part Harmonies (1911; contains some 800 musical examples); Canonical Studies; a New Technic in Composition (1912; in both English and German); wrote a number of theoretical and polemical articles in German musical journals (particularly against Riemann); a collection of his articles (in German), ed. by J. Goebel, was publ. by the German-American Historical Society of Illinois, as Gesammelte Aufsätze zur Geschichte und Theorie der Musik (Chicago, 1927). —Cf. W. Sargant, Bernhard Ziehn, Precursor, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1933); H. J. Moser, Bernhard Ziehn: der deutsch-amerikanische Musiktheoretiker (Bayreuth, 1950). See also 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Ziehrer (tsē'-rēr), Karl Michael, Austrian bandleader and composer of operettas; b. Vienna, May 2, 1843; d. there, Nov. 14, 1922. Entirely self-taught in music, he organized in 1863 a dance orch., with which he made tours of Austria and Germany, introducing his own pieces; with an enlarged orch. (50 players) he established a regular series of popular concerts in Vienna, which met with great success; in 1907 he was appointed music director of the court balls. His fortunes declined with the fall of the Habsburg monarchy, and he died in want. He publ. nearly 600 marches and dances for orch. (some very popular: Meeresleuchten, Evatöchter, Donauwalzer, Alt-Wien, Ziehrereien, etc.) and produced in Vienna a number of operettas: Wiener Kinder (Feb. 19, 1881); Mahomeds Paradies (Feb. 26, 1866); König Jérôme (Nov. 28, 1878); Ein Deutschmeister (Nov. 30, 1888); Der schöne Rigo (May 24, 1898); Die Landstreicher, his best work (July 29, 1899); Die drei Wünsche (March 9, 1901); Der Fremdenführer (Oct. 11, 1902); Der Schätzmeister (Dec. 10, 1904); Fesche Geister (July 7, 1905); Am Lido (Aug. 31, 1907); Ein tolles Mädel (Nov. 8, 1907); Der Liebeswalzer (Oct. 24, 1908); Die Gaukler (Sept. 6, 1909); Herr und Frau Biedermann (Oct. 5, 1910); In 50 Jahren (Jan. 7, 1911); Fürst Casimir (Sept. 13, 1913); Der Husaren-general (Oct. 3, 1913); Das dumme Herz (Feb. 27, 1914); Die verliebte Eskadron (July 11, 1920).

Zielinski, Jaroslaw de, Polish pianist; b. Lubyca Królewska, Galicia, March 31, 1844; d. Santa Barbara, Calif., July 25, 1922. He studied piano with Mikuli in Lwów and Schulhoff in Vienna; in 1863, taking active part in the Polish revolution against Russia, he was severely wounded; came to the U.S. in 1864, enlisted in a Massachusetts regiment, and served to the end of the Civil War; subsequently was active as pianist and teacher in New York, Detroit, and Buffalo; eventually settled in Los Angeles, where he founded the Zielinski Trio Club. He publ. some graceful piano music (Prelude, At the Spring, Gavotte, Minuet, Bourrée, Dreams, mazurkas, etc.); author of The Poles in Music (in vol. 18 of 'The Century Library of Music').

Zika, Richard, Czech violinist and composer; b. Vsetín, Moravia, Jan. 9, 1897; d. Prague, Nov. 10, 1947. He studied with his father, and later took courses at the Prague Cons.; was 1st violinist in the Prague Quartet (1920-32), and then (1932-46) in the Ondříček Quartet; in 1946 became prof. at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts. He composed some quartet music.

Zilcher (tsil'-her), Hermann, German composer; b. Frankfurt, Aug. 18, 1881; d. Würzburg, Jan. 1, 1948. He studied piano with his father, Paul Zilcher, a music teacher; later at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt, with J. Kwast (piano), I. Knorr and B. Scholz (composition). From 1901 to 1905 he was in Berlin as concert pianist and teacher; 1905-08, taught piano at Hoch's Cons., Frankfurt; from 1908 to 1920, was prof. at the Akademie der Tonkunst in Munich; from 1920, director of the Würzburg Cons. and conductor of the symph. concerts there.

He toured as pianist in Europe, and in the U. S. (1905, with Franz von Vecsey). —Works: incidental music for several Shakespearian plays: As You Like It (1917), The Winter's Tale (1919), The Taming of the Shrew (1926), and A Comedy of Errors (1934); the comic opera Doktor Eisenbart (Mannheim, 1922); Liebesmesser, oratorio (Strasbourg, 1913); 5 symphonies (No. 5, 1947; performed posthumously, Hamburg, Feb. 11, 1948); An mein deutsches Land, prelude for chorus and orch.; Tanzphantasie (produced as a ballet, Hamburg, 1933); Rameau Suite, for orch. (1934); double concerto for 2 violins and orch.; violin concerto; piano concerto; Nacht und Morgen for 2 pianos, orch., and kettledrums; chamber music; many piano pieces; about 150 songs; etc. —Cf. W. Altmann, Hermann Zilcher, in vol. II of 'Monographien moderner Musiker' (Leipzig, 1907); H. Oppenheim, Hermann Zilcher (Munich, 1921).

Zillig, Winfried, German conductor and composer; b. Würzburg, April 1, 1905. He studied with Schoenberg in Vienna and Berlin and has largely adopted the 12-tone method of composition; from 1928 to 1943 conducted opera in Oldenburg, Düsseldorf, Essen, etc.; 1947-51, conductor of the Hesse Radio. —Works: the operas Rossknecht (Düsseldorf, Feb. 11, 1933), Das Opfer (Hamburg, Nov. 12, 1937), Die Windsbraut (Leipzig, May 12, 1941), Troilus und Cressida (Düsseldorf, Feb. 3, 1951); Chor-fantasie for chorus and orch. (Frankfurt, May 30, 1952); a cello concerto; several string quartets and other chamber music; songs; piano pieces.

Ziloti, Alexander. See Siloti.

Zimbalist, Efrem, violinist and composer; b. Rostov on the Don, Russia, April 9, 1889. He began to study the violin with his father, an orchestra conductor; from 1901 to 1907 he studied with Leopold Auer at the St. Petersburg Cons., graduating as winner of the gold medal and a scholarship of 1200 rubles. He made his European début in Berlin, on Nov. 7, 1907, and created a sensation; a month later he produced a similar effect in London, and within a year most of the music centers of Europe had heard and admired him. In 1911 he emigrated to the U.S. and made his American début with the Boston Symph. Orch. on Oct. 27, 1911, playing Glazunov's violin concerto (its 1st performance in the U.S.). In 1914 he married the singer Alma Gluck (q. v.); his second wife, whom he married in 1943, was Mrs. Mary Louise Curtis Bok, founder of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Zimbalist toured in the Far East, as well as throughout Europe and the U.S. In 1941 he became director of the Curtis Institute. —Works: the opera Landara (Philadelphia, April 6, 1956); Slavonic Dances, for violin and orch.; American Rhapsody, for orch. (Chicago, March 3, 1936; revised version, Philadelphia, Feb. 5, 1943); Portrait of an Artist, symph. poem (Philadelphia, Dec. 7, 1945); a violin concerto; a string quartet; a violin sonata; Concert Phantasy on Le Coq d'or for violin and piano; Sarasateana, for violin and piano; songs; etc. He publ. One Hour's Daily Exercises for violin.

Zimmer, Friedrich August, German organist and music educator; b. Herrensgerstädt, Thuringia, Feb. 26, 1826; d. Berlin, Feb. 8, 1899. He studied in Weissenfels; then devoted himself to teaching; publ. Elementarmusiklehrs (new ed. by G. Hecht, 1901), a Violin-Schule, and Die Orgel (1897). —His son, Friedrich Zimmer (b. Gardelegen, Sept. 22, 1855; d. Giessen, Dec. 5, 1919), was a student of theology, and prof. at the Univ. of Königsberg (until 1890); publ. numerous collections for schools, and books of Lutheran hymns; also composed choruses and songs for children. —Cf. W. Stölten, Friedrich Zimmer, ein deutscher Volkserzieher (1933).

Zimmerman, Louis, Dutch violinist and composer; b. Groningen, July 19, 1873; d. Amsterdam, March 6, 1954. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Hans Sitt and Carl Reinecke; also with Eugène Ysaÿe in Brussels. He was a member of the Concertgebouw Orch. in Amsterdam (1899-1904); taught violin at the Royal College of Music, London (1904-1910); then rejoined the Concertgebouw as its concertmaster, retiring in 1940. He wrote numerous violin pieces; also cadenzas for the violin concertos by Beethoven and Brahms.

Zimmerman, Pierre-Joseph-Guillaume, famous French piano teacher and composer; b. Paris, March 19, 1785; d. there, Oct. 29, 1853. The son of a Paris piano maker, he entered the Paris Cons. in 1798, studying under Boieldieu, Rey, Catel, and Cherubini; won 1st prize for piano in 1800, and for harmony in 1802; became piano prof. at the Cons. in 1816, and was pensioned in 1848. Among his many pupils were Alkan, Marmontel, Lacombe, Ambroise Thomas, and César Franck. —Works: opera L'Enlèvement (Opéra-Comique, Oct. 26, 1830); 2 piano concertos; a piano sonata; 24 études; etc. His chief work is the Encyclopédie du Pianiste, a complete method for piano, Part III of which is a treatise on harmony and counterpoint. —Cf. J. B. Labat, Zimmerman et l'École française de piano (Paris, 1865).

Zimmermann, Agnes, pianist and composer; b. Cologne, July 5, 1847; d. London, Nov. 14, 1925. She studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London with Potter and Ernst Pauer (piano), and Charles Steggall and G. Macfarren (composition); made her début at the Crystal Palace on Dec. 5, 1863; toured England and Germany, and won high repute as an interpreter of classical compositions. She edited the sonatas of Mozart and Beethoven, and the complete piano works of Schumann (for Novello). She was also a composer; wrote a piano trio; 3 violin sonatas; cello sonata; many piano pieces. —Cf. Lady Arbuthnot, In Memoriam Agnes Zimmerman, in the 'Mus. Times' (1926).

Zimmermann, Anton, Austrian composer; b. Pressburg, 1741; d. there, Oct. 8, 1781. Kapellmeister to Prince Batthyány, and organist at Pressburg Cathedral. —He publ. 9 sonatas for piano and violin; a piano concerto; Die Belagerung von Valenciennes for piano and violin; 6 string quartets; 6 violin duos; and the Singspiel Andromeda und Perseus (Vienna, Apr. 23, 1781); other works in MS.

Zimmermann, Bernd Alois, German composer; b. Bliesheim, near Cologne, March 20, 1918. He studied in Cologne with Heinrich Lemacher and Philipp Jarnach; later with Fortner and Leibowitz in Darmstadt; returning to Cologne he became prof. at the Cons. there. His works include Lob der Torheit, for soloists, chorus, and orch. (1948); 4 symphonies (No. 4, composed 1947-53, was performed at the Strasbourg Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 13, 1958); violin concerto (Salzburg Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 26, 1952); oboe concerto (Donaueschingen Festival, Oct., 1952); sonata for unaccompanied viola (Donaueschingen Festival, Oct. 16, 1955); Canto di Speranza, for cello and chamber orch. (Darmstadt, Sept. 12, 1958); also a string trio (1944); a violin sonata (1950); Konfigurationen, 8 pieces for piano (1956); minor compositions of various kinds.

Zinck, Benedikt Friedrich, German composer; b. Husum, Holstein, May 23, 1743; d. Ludwigslust, Mecklenburg, June 23, 1801. He was a church organist; in 1783 became court musician at Ludwigslust. Among his works are several symphonies, harpsichord sonatas, chamber music.

Zinck, Harnak Otto Conrad, German composer, brother of Benedikt Friedrich Zinck; b. Husum, Holstein, July 2, 1746; d. Copenhagen, Feb. 15, 1832. He was organist in Hamburg; then joined his brother at Ludwigslust, but left in 1787 for Copenhagen, where he was church organist and teacher; there he produced an opera to a Danish text. Selim og Mirza (Copenhagen, Feb. 1, 1790); also composed several oratorios, instrumental music, etc.; publ. Die nördliche Harfe (Copenhagen, 1801; on Scandinavian music) and Vorlesungen über Musik und ihre nützlichste Anwendung (Copenhagen, 1813).

Zingarelli (tsin-gah-rel'lē), Nicola Antonio, Italian composer; b. Naples, April 4, 1752; d. Torre del Greco, near Naples, May 5, 1837. He studied at the Cons. di Loreto, Naples, with Fenaroli and Speranza (composition); also studied violin. His first stage work, I quattro pazzi, was performed at the Cons. in 1768. After finishing school in 1769 he earned his living as a violin teacher. He spent much time traveling throughout Italy, supervising the production of his operas. In 1792 he was appointed maestro di cappella at the Cathedral of Milan; in 1794, at the Santa Casa in Loreto; and in 1804, at the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican, Rome. In 1811, for refusing to conduct a Te Deum to celebrate the birthday of Napoleon's son, the 'King of Rome,' he was imprisoned at Civitavecchia, and later transported to Paris by order of Napoleon, who set him at liberty and liberally paid him for a Mass written in Paris. As Fioravanti had meanwhile become maestro at St. Peter's, Zingarelli went to Naples, and in 1813 became director of the royal Collegio di Musica; in 1816 he succeeded Paisiello as maestro at the Naples Cathedral. He was renowned as a teacher; Bellini, Mercadante, Carlo Conti, Lauro Rossi, Morlacchi, and Sir Michael Costa were his students. His operas, interpreted by the finest singers of the time (Catalani, Crescentini, Grassini, Marchesi, and Rubinelli), were highly successful. His facility was such that he was able to write an opera in a week. He wrote 37 operas in all; of these the following were produced at La Scala, Milan: Alsinda (Feb.

22, 1785); Ifigenia in Aulide (Jan. 27, 1787); La Morte di Cesare (Dec. 26, 1790); Pirro, re d'Epiro (Dec. 26, 1791); Il Mercato di Monfregoso (Sept. 22, 1792); La Secchia rapita (Sept. 7, 1793); Artaserse (Dec. 26, 1793); Giulietta e Romeo, after Shakespeare (Jan. 30, 1796; his best known work; staged all over Europe, and also in N. Y., with considerable success, but disappeared from the repertory after Zingarelli's death); Meleagro (Jan., 1798); Il Ritratto (Oct. 12, 1799); Clitennestra (Dec. 26, 1800). Other operas: Antigono (Mantua, April 13, 1786); Alzira (Florence, Sept. 7, 1794); Il Conte di Saldagna (Venice, Dec. 26, 1794); Orazi e Curiazi (Naples, Nov. 4, 1795); La Morte di Mitridate (Venice, May 27, 1797); Il Ratto delle Sabine (Venice, Dec. 26, 1799); Edipo a Colono (Venice, Dec. 26, 1802); La Distruzione di Gerusalemme (Florence, Nov. 27, 1803); L'Oracolo sannita (Naples, Oct. 11, 1806); Il Ritorno di Serse (Modena, July 16, 1808); Baldovino (Rome, Feb. 11, 1811); Berenice, regina d'Armenia (Rome, Nov. 12, 1811). He further wrote a number of oratorios, among them Pimmalione (Naples, 1779), Ero (Milan, 1786), Telemaco (Milan, 1787), Il Trionfo di David (Naples, 1788), Francesca da Rimini (Rome, 1804), Tancredi al sepolcro di Clorinda (Naples, 1805), and La Fuga in Egitto (Naples, 1837); a vast amount of church music; the Cons. di Loreto contains 541 MSS by Zingarelli, in a collection known as 'Annuaire di Zingarelli' (or 'Annuaire di Loreto'), including a series of Masses for every day in the year; a 4-part Miserere 'alla Palestrina' (1827); 73 Magnificats, 28 Stabat Maters, 21 Credos, many Te Deums, motets, hymns, etc.; also solfeggi, arias, organ sonatas, some chamber music. — Cf. R. Liberatore, Necrologia di N. Zingarelli (Naples, 1837); A. Schmid, Joseph Haydn und N. Zingarelli (Vienna, 1847); F. Florimo in vol. II of La Scuola musicale di Napoli (Naples, 1880); S. di Giacomo, Il fiero Zingarelli, in 'Musica d'oggi' (June, 1923); P. Dotto, N. Zingarelli, in 'Musica d'oggi' (July, 1941).

Zingel (tsing'-el), Rudolf Ewald, German organist and composer; b. Liegnitz, Sept. 5, 1876; d. there, Feb. 20, 1944. He studied at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; then was active as church organist and choral conductor in Berlin and in Frankfurt-on-the-Oder. He wrote 2 operas, Margot (Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, 1902) and Persopolis (Rostock, 1909); an operetta, Liebeszauber (Stralsund, 1908); a symph. poem, Freudvoll und lieblich; a secular oratorio,

Der wilde Jäger; several sacred cantatas for men's chorus and string orch.; numerous piano pieces and songs.

Zinkeisen (tsink'-i-zen), Konrad Ludwig Dietrich, German violinist and composer; b. Hanover, June 3, 1779; d. Brunswick, Nov. 28, 1838. He was trained by his father, and by Rode at Wolfenbüttel; played 1st violin under Forkel at the Academic Concerts in Göttingen; in 1819 appointed chamber musician in the Brunswick court orch. He wrote 6 violin concertos, 4 orch. overtures, 3 string quartets; concertos for oboe, for clarinet, for basset horn, for bassoon, and various other pieces for solo instruments with orch.; music for military band; choral works.

Zipoli, Domenico, Italian composer and organist; b. Prato, Oct. 16, 1688; d. Córdoba, Argentina, Jan. 2, 1726. He went to Rome as a young man; was organist at the Jesuit Church there. His oratorios Sant' Antonio di Padova (1712) and Santa Caterina, vergine e martire (1714) were presented in Rome. In 1716 he publ. Sonate d'intavolatura per organo e cimbalo. He joined the Jesuit order at Seville in 1716, and in 1717 went to South America, where he became organist of the Jesuit Church in Córdoba, Argentina. Walsh of London reprinted parts of the Sonate d'intavolatura under the titles Six Suits of Italian Lessons for the Harpsichord and Third Collection of Toccatas, Vollen-tarys and Fugues. Modern reprints of Zipoli's pieces are found in Torchi's 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. III), Farrenc's 'Trésor du pianiste' (vol. XI), Pauer's 'Alte Meister,' 'Raccolta Nazionale delle musiche italiane,' etc. —Cf. G. Pannain, Le Origini e lo sviluppo dell' arte pianistica in Italia dal 1500 al 1730 (Naples, 1919); L. Ayestarán, Domenico Zipoli, el gran compositor y organista romano del 1700 en el Rio de La Plata, in 'Revista histórica' of the Museo Histórico Nacional (Montevideo, 1941; basic study establishing biographical facts); A. Salazar, El Caso de Domenico Zipoli, in 'Nuestra Musica' (Mexico, May, 1946; arguing against the identification of the immigrant organist Zipoli with the composer); V. de Rubertis, Dove e quando nacque e morì Domenico Zipoli, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (April-June, 1951).

Zipp, Friedrich, German choral composer; b. Frankfurt, June 20, 1914; he studied in Berlin and at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt; then again in Berlin, with Armin Knab (composition); from 1938 occupied various teaching posts in Frankfurt. He publ. a number of cantatas, motets, song cycles, and various choral works; also piano pieces.

Zíték, Otakar, Czech writer on music and composer; b. Prague, Nov. 5, 1892. He studied composition with Novák at the Vienna Cons. and musicology with Adler and Graedener at the Univ. there; was music critic for the 'Hudební Revue' and 'Lidové Noviny' in Prague, and in 1920 taught operatic dramaturgy at the Cons. there; from 1921, stage director at the National Theater in Brno, and teacher at the Brno Cons. —Works: the operas Vznesení srdce (The Exalted Heart; 1918) and Pád Petra Králence (The Downfall of Peter Králence; Brno, March 23, 1923); a ballet O růži, after Wilde's Birthday of the Infanta (On the Rose, Pilsen, 1942); Město, symph. poem (1925); songs; etc. He also publ. a book, The New Opera (in Czech).

Zmeskall, Nikolaus, Baron von Domonovecz, Hungarian diplomat and musical amateur; b. 1759; d. Vienna, June 23, 1833. He was secretary of the Hungarian Chancellery in Vienna; was an intimate friend of Beethoven, who dedicated to him the string quartet op. 95. Zmeskall was also a composer in his own right; wrote 14 string quartets and other instrumental music. —Cf. A. Sandberger, Beethovens Freund Zmeskall als Komponist, in his Gesammelte Aufsätze, vol. II (1924); C. Pidoll, Verklungenes Spiel: Erinnerungen des Herrn Nikolaus Zmeskall (Innsbruck, 1949).

Znosko-Borovsky, Alexander Feodorovich, Russian composer; b. Kiev, Feb. 27, 1908. He studied violin and composition in Kiev; was composer for films there (1931-42); then in the army (1942-45); in 1946 he returned to Kiev. —Works: ballet Akpamyk on Turkmenian themes (Ashkhabad, April 14, 1945); cantata, Our Victory (Kiev, May 8, 1946); a symph. poem, Kiev (Kiev, March 9, 1949); violin concerto (Kiev, Dec. 17, 1955); a string quartet on Ukrainian themes (1937); In Turkmenia, for string quartet (1942); sonata for unaccompanied violin (1950); Scherzo for 3 trombones (1938); songs; film music.

Zoeller (tsöl'-ler), Carl, composer; b. Berlin, March 28, 1840; d. London, July 13, 1889. He studied violin with Hubert Rics in Berlin; after traveling in Germany with various opera troupes as violinist, he went to London, settling there in 1873; in 1879, he became bandmaster of the 7th (Queen's Own) Hussars. In England he often performed on the viola d'amore; published The Viole d'Amour, Its Origin and History, and Art of Playing it. He composed an operetta, The Missing Heir, and a serious music drama, Mary Stuart of Fotheringay; a violin concerto; songs.

Zoellner, Joseph, Sr., American violinist; b. Brooklyn, Feb. 2, 1862; d. Los Angeles, Jan. 24, 1950. During his parents' residence at Aschaffenburg he studied piano and violin there; returning to N. Y., he continued his violin studies; in 1882 he established a music school in Brooklyn (until 1903); then was in Stockton, Calif. (1903-06) and in Brussels (1907-12). During his stay in Belgium he organized, with 2 sons and a daughter, the Zoellner Quartet, giving performances in Belgium, and also traveling to Berlin and Paris. From 1912 till 1922, the family lived in N. Y.; in 1922 Zoellner founded with his children the Zoellner Cons. of Music in Los Angeles.

Zoilo, Annibale, Italian composer; b. Rome, c. 1537; d. Loreto, 1592. He was maestro di cappella at San Luigi dei Francesi from 1561 to 1566; at San Giovanni in Laterano from Jan., 1568, to June, 1570. In 1570 he became a singer in the Papal Choir, Rome (until 1581); then was at the Cathedral of Todi; returning to Rome, he entered the service of Cardinal Sirleto (until 1584); subsequently became maestro at the Santa Casa in Loreto (till June 30, 1592). In 1577 he and Palestrina were entrusted with the revision of the Roman Gradual (Editio Medicea). He publ. Madrigali a 4 e 5 voci (Rome, 1563); a Salve Regina for 12 voices is in Constantini's 'Selectae Cantiones excellentissimorum auctorum' (Rome, 1614), and various compositions in other collections, publ. between 1567 and 1616. Masses and a 16-part Tenebrae are in MS (in the archives of the Papal Chapel); 4 madrigals for 5 voices are in Torchi's 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. I). —Cf. R. Casimiri, Annibale Zoilo e la sua famiglia: nuovi documenti biografici, in 'Note d'Archivio' (Jan.-April, 1940).

Zöllner, Heinrich, German composer, son of Karl Friedrich Zöllner; b. July 4, 1854; d. Freiburg-im-Breisgau, May 4, 1941. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. under Reinecke, Jadassohn, Richter, and Wenzel. After serving a few years as music director at the Univ. of Dorpat, Russia, he settled in Cologne as choral conductor; in 1890 he was engaged as conductor of the Deutscher Liederkrantz in N. Y.; in 1898 returned to Germany, and was choral director and prof. of composition at the Leipzig Cons. (1902-07); then was conductor at the Flemish Opera in Antwerp (1907-14); subsequently settled in Freiburg. —Works: the operas Frithjof (Cologne, 1884), Die lustigen Chinesinnen (Cologne, 1886), Faust (Munich, Oct. 19, 1887), Matteo Falcone (N. Y., 1894), Der Überfall (Dresden, Sept. 7, 1895), Die versunkene Glocke (Berlin, July 8, 1899; his best opera), Der Schützenkönig (Leipzig, 1903), Zigeuner (Stuttgart, 1912); the musical comedy Das hölzerne Schwert (Kassel, 1897); choral works with orch.: Die Hunnenschlacht; Morgengesang im Kriege; Das Fest der Rebenblüte; Wanderers Sturmlied; Zum Lutherfeste; Kolumbus; Lied fahrender Schüler; Hymnus der Liebe; König Sigurd Ring's Brautfahrt; Indianischer Liebesgesang, from 'Hiawatha'; Die Meerfahrer; Heldenrequiem; Königsode; Zwei Sprüche; Heerschau; Bonifacius; Der deutsche Michel; Aventiure; Robespierre; Fahnenschwur; Totentanz; Talismane; Angelus; Die Leipziger Schlacht; Aus den Freiheitskriegen 1813-1814; Deutschland und seine Kinder; Die neue Welt; etc.; for orch.: 3 symphonies; Sommerfahrt, for string orch.; Elegie, for violin and orch.; Unter dem Sternbanner, overture; Serenade for flute and string orch.; chamber music; songs. He also publ. a poem, Beethoven in Bonn. Ein Sang vom Rhein (1898). —Cf. E. Sognitz, Heinrich Zöllner, in vol. II of 'Monographien moderner Musiker' (Leipzig, 1907).

Zöllner, Karl Friedrich, German choral conductor and composer; b. Mittelhausen, Thuringia, March 17, 1800; d. Leipzig, Sept. 25, 1860. He studied at the Thomasschule, Leipzig; became a vocal instructor and began writing male choruses; in 1833 he founded in Leipzig a 'Liedertafel' known as the 'Zöllner-Verein,' a male choral society modeled after Zelter's Berlin organization; after Zöllner's death, several choral societies were united to form the 'Zöllner-Bund.' Zöllner was one of the most successful German composers of part-songs for male choruses; he also wrote for mixed chorus, and songs with piano accompaniment. —Cf. R. Hänsch, Der Liedmeister Karl Friedrich Zöllner (Dresden, 1927).

Zöllner, Karl Heinrich, German composer; b. Ols, Silesia, May 5, 1792; d. Wandsbeck, near Hamburg, July 2, 1836. He toured Germany as an organist; for a while lived in Vienna; in 1833 settled in Hamburg. He wrote an opera, Kunz von Kauffungen (Vienna, March 27, 1826); a melodrama, Ein Uhr; publ. Masses, motets, psalms, part-songs, organ pieces, a piano sonata, piano pieces, etc.

ZOLOTAREV — ZUCCA

Zolotarev (zöh-löh-täh-ryöf'), Vassily Andreyevitch, Russian composer; b. Taganrog, March 7, 1873. He was a student at the court chapel in St. Petersburg, where he studied violin with Krasnoutsy, and composition with Balakirev and Liadov (graduated in 1892); then entered the St. Petersburg Cons., studying with Rimsky-Korsakov (graduated in 1900); received the Rubinstein Prize for his cantata Paradise and Peri. He then held numerous teaching positions: instructor of violin at the court chapel (1897-1900); teacher of composition at the Rostov Music School (1906-08); at the Moscow Cons. (1908-18), the Ekaterinodar Cons. (1912-24), the Odessa Cons. (1924-26), the Kiev Musico-Dramatic Institute (1926-31), the Sverdlovsk Music School (1931-33), and the Minsk Cons. (1933-41). In 1941 he settled in Moscow. In 1955 he was awarded the Order of Lenin. —Works: the operas The Decembrists (Moscow, Dec. 27, 1925) and Ak-Gul, on Uzbek themes (1942); ballet, Lake Prince (Minsk, Jan. 15, 1949); 6 symphonies: I (1902), II (1905; revised 1955), III (1935), IV (1936), V (1942), VI (1943); overture, Fête villageoise; Rhapsodie hébraïque, for orch.; symph. suites: Moldavian Suite (1926), Uzbek Suite (1931), Tadzhik Suite (1932), White-Russian Suite (1936); cello concerto (1943); 6 string quartets (1899, 1902, 1907, 1912, 1916, 1945); piano quintet (1904); string quintet (1904); piano trio (1905); violin sonata (1922); 2 piano sonatas (1903; 1919); many songs. He publ. a manual on the fugue (Moscow, 1932).

Zopff, Hermann, German music critic and composer; b. Glogau, June 1, 1826; d. Leipzig, July 12, 1883. He studied agriculture, then music (at the Stern Cons. in Berlin); founded an 'Opernakademie' and an 'Orchesterverein' in Berlin; in 1864, settled in Leipzig as co-editor of the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik,' becoming editor-in-chief in 1868. He publ. Ratschläge für angehende Dirigenten (1861; 3rd ed., 1922) and Grundzüge einer Theorie der Oper (Leipzig, 1868). His compositions include a symph. poem, Wilhelm Tell; Drei Idyllen for small orch.; Gesangsstück for cello and orch.; Asträa, oder Das Evangelium der Tat for solo voices, chorus, and orch.; piano pieces; male choruses; songs. His 2 operas, Makkabäus and Mohammed, were publ., but not produced.

Zoras, Leonidas, Greek conductor and composer; b. Sparta, March 8, 1905. He studied in Athens and Berlin; in 1940 was appointed conductor of the National Lyric Theater in Athens. Among his compositions are a symphony (1947); incidental music and ballet for The Legend of Violanto (1931); Kleftic Dance, for orch. (1934); Legend, for orch. (1936); suite for orch. (1947); concertino for violin and woodwind (1950); violin sonata (1950); piano pieces; songs.

Zschocher (tchö-h-her), Johann, noted German piano pedagogue; b. Leipzig, May 16, 1821; d. there, Jan. 6, 1897. He was a pupil of Iwan Knorr, Th. Kullak, Henselt, and Liszt. In 1846 he founded the 'Zschocher'sches Musik-Institut' in Leipzig, which became a flourishing music school, still active in the 20th century.

Zsolt, Nándor, Hungarian violinist and composer; b. Esztergom, May 12, 1887; d. Budapest, June 25, 1936. He studied violin with Hubay in Budapest; in 1908 went to London, where he participated in chamber music concerts; returning to Budapest, he became a violin teacher. His piano quintet (1914) was awarded a prize. He also wrote a symph.; many violin pieces (Valse Caprice, Berceuse, Enchaînée, Satyr et Dryade, etc.). —Cf. Cyril Scott, Nándor Zsolt, in 'Monthly Mus. Record' (1915).

Zubiaurre (y Urionabarrenechea), Valentí, Spanish composer; b. Villa de Garay, Feb. 13, 1837; d. Madrid, Jan. 13, 1914. He was a chorister at Bilbao; at the age of 16 he undertook a voyage to South America; returning to Spain in 1866, he began to study music seriously with Hilarión Eslava. He wrote a considerable number of sacred works; then turned to opera; received 1st national prize with his opera Fernando el Emplazado (Madrid, May 12, 1871); in 1873, went to Rome on a government stipend; in 1875 was named 2nd maestro at the Royal Chapel in Madrid, and in 1878, succeeded Eslava as 1st maestro; in the same year he was appointed prof. at the Madrid Cons. His 2nd opera, Ledia, was produced with considerable success in Madrid, on April 22, 1877. He also composed several zarzuelas, a symph., a potpourri of Basque folksongs, choruses, etc.

Zucca, Mana. See Mana-Zucca.

Zuccalmaglio (tsook-kahl-mahl'-yō), Anton Wilhelm Florentin von, German collector of folksongs and writer on music; b. Waldbröl, April 12, 1803; d. Nachrodt, near Gröna, Westphalia, March 23, 1869. The son of a physician, who was a musical amateur, he learned music at home; contributed to the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik' during Schumann's editorship, under the pseudonyms Wilhelm von Waldbrühl and Dorf-küster Wedel; publ. 2 collections of folksongs, in 1829 and 1836 (with E. Baumstark); then brought out (with A. Kretzschmer) the important compilation, Deutsche Volkslieder mit ihren Originalweisen (2 vols.; 1838; 1840). However, these songs are only partly authentic; a few melodies were composed by Zuccalmaglio himself; others were combined from various sources; the texts were frequently rearranged. Brahms made use of the collection for his arrangements of German folksongs. —Cf. M. Friedlaender, Zuccalmaglio und das Volkslied, in the 'Jahrbuch der Bibliothek Peters' (1918; also separately); W. Wiora, Die Herkunft der Melodien in Kretzschmers und Zuccalmaglios Sammlung, in the 'Beiheft' of the 'Jahrbuch für Volksliedforschung' (1941), revised and publ. as Die rheinisch-bergischen Melodien bei Zuccalmaglio und Brahms (Bad Godesberg, 1953).

Zuelli (tsoo-ehl'-lē), Guglielmo, Italian composer; b. Reggio Emilia, Oct. 20, 1859; d. Milan, Oct. 8, 1941. He studied with A. Busi and L. Mancinelli in Bologna; after teaching and conducting in various provincial towns, he became director of the Cons. in Palermo (1894-1911), of the Parma Cons. (1911-29), and of the Liceo Musicale of Alessandria, Piedmont (1929-33); then retired. —Works: the opera La Fata del Nord (Milan, May 4, 1884; Sonzogno prize); opera-ballet Il Profeta di Korassan; Inno alla Notte for solo voices, chorus, and orch.; 2 symphonies; Un Saluto al mare, symph. suite (its 3rd movement, Festa delle sirene, became extremely popular as a separate piece); Il Canto del Coaro Romagnuolo for orch.; a string quartet and minor pieces for strings; fugues for organ; songs; etc. Author of Gioacchino Rossini: Pagine segrete (Bologna, 1922). —Cf. G. Tebaldini, Guglielmo Zuelli, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1942).

Zulauf (tsoo'-lowf), Ernst, German conductor; b. Kassel, Feb. 15, 1876. He studied with Reinecke at the Leipzig Cons., and with Kretzschmar at the Univ. there (Dr. phil., 1902); held various positions as opera coach and conductor at the Staatstheater in Wiesbaden; from 1946, lived on a pension in Wiesbaden. He wrote incidental music for various plays.

Zulauf, Max, Swiss musicologist; b. Bern, May 19, 1898. He studied with Ernst Kurth at the Univ. of Bern; Ph. D. with the dissertation Die Harmonik J. S. Bachs (Bern, 1927); taught at the Univ. of Bern (1933-48). He publ. Der Musikunterricht in der Geschichte des bernischen Schulwesens von 1528-1798 (Bern, 1934).

Zumpe (tsoom'-pēh), Hermann, German conductor and composer; b. Taubenheim, April 9, 1850; d. Munich, Sept. 4, 1903. He studied in Bautzen and Leipzig. In 1873 he joined Wagner at Bayreuth, aiding in the preparation of the performances of Der Ring des Nibelungen; then conducted opera in Salzburg, Würzburg, Magdeburg, Frankfurt, and Hamburg. After some years spent in teaching and composing, he was appointed court conductor in Stuttgart in 1891; in 1895 was called to Munich in a similar capacity; then was court conductor in Schwerin (1897-1900); returned to Munich in 1900 as 'Generalmusikdirektor.' —Works: the opera Anahna (Berlin, 1881); the operettas Farinelli (Hamburg, 1886), Karin (Hamburg, 1888), and Polnische Wirtschaft (Hamburg, 1889); overtures; songs. 2 operas were performed posthumously: Sawitri (completed by Rosseler; Schwerin, Sept. 8, 1907) and Das Gespenst von Horodin (Hamburg, 1910). —See the compendium, H. Zumpe. Persönliche Erinnerungen nebst Mitteilungen aus seinen Tagebuchblättern und Briefen, with an introduction by E. von Possart and a list of works (Munich, 1905).

Zumsteeg (tsoom'-shtäg), Johann Rudolf, German composer; b. Sachsenflur, Odenwald, Jan. 10, 1760; d. Stuttgart, Jan. 27, 1802. As a pupil of the Carlsschule (near Stuttgart), he was intimate with Schiller, who attended the same school. He studied cello and theory with the Kapellmeister Poli, whom he succeeded in 1792 as director of the Stuttgart Opera. He produced 8 operas at Stuttgart, of which the best was Die Geisterinsel, after Shakespeare's The Tempest (Nov. 7, 1798); among other operas were Elbondokani, Zalaor, and Das Pfauenfest; also wrote choruses to Schiller's Die Räuber; 21 church cantatas; a cello concerto; duos for cellos, and other instrumental music. But it is chiefly as a composer of ballades, the precursor of Loewe and Schubert, that he is historically important; he wrote 20 ballades for solo voice with piano accompaniment, including settings for Schiller's Maria Stuart, Bürger's Lenore, Goethe's Colma, etc. —Cf. T. F. K. Arnold, J. R. Zumsteeg. Seine kurze Biographie (Erfurt, 1810; with a list of works); L. Landschoff, J. R. Zumsteeg: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Liedes und der Ballade (dissertation; Berlin, 1902); A. Sandberger, Zumsteeg und Schubert, in the 'Münchner Allgemeine Zeitung' (July 15, 1906); H. von Hase, J. R. Zumsteeg, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 2; 1920); F. Szymichowski, J. R. Zumsteeg als Komponist von Balladen und Monodien (dissertation; Stuttgart, 1932). For an analysis of Die Geisterinsel, see T. F. K. Arnold, Gallerie der berühmtesten Tonkünstler . . . (part I, pp. 44-96).

Zur Mühlen, Raimund von, tenor singer; b. Livonia, Nov. 10, 1854; d. Steyning, Sussex, Dec. 9, 1931. He studied singing with Stockhausen in Frankfurt and with Bussine in Paris; then took a special course with Clara Schumann, who instructed him in the interpretation of songs by Schumann and Schubert; this gave him the foundation of his career. He had his greatest success in England, where he lived from 1905 until his death. It was he who introduced into London the 'song recital' (Liederabend; programs devoted exclusively to songs). He was also a fine teacher. —Cf. G. Newberry, Raimund von Zur Mühlen, in 'Music & Letters' (1932).

Zur Nieden, Albrecht, German composer; b. Emmerich, March 6, 1819; d. Duisburg, April 14, 1873. He studied theology in Bonn, and music with Fr. Schneider at Dessau. In 1850 he settled in Duisburg as choral conductor. He publ. the 'lyrico-dramatic song' Die Sage von der Martinswand for solo voices, chorus, and orch., and two more works of a similar nature, Der blinde König and Das Grab im Busento; also a Deutscher Marsch for piano 4 hands; songs.

Zuschnied (tsoo'-shnit), Karl, German choral conductor; b. Oberglogau, Silesia, May 29, 1854; d. Weimar, Aug. 1, 1926. He studied piano and composition at the Stuttgart Cons.; then occupied various posts as choral conductor and teacher in Göttingen (1879-89), Minden (1889-97), and Erfurt (1897-1907); then was director of the Hochschule für Musik in Mannheim; retired in 1917. —Works: for chorus and orch.: Hermann der Befreier; Lenzfahrt; Sängergebet; Deutschlands Erwachen; Die Zollern und das Reich; Unter den Sternen; men's choruses; Konzertstück for violin and orch.; piano pieces; songs. He publ. Theoretisch-praktische Klavierschule and Methodischer Leitfaden für den Klavierunterricht.

Zuth (tsoot), Josef, Austrian guitarist and musicologist; b. Fischern, near Karlsbad, Nov. 24, 1879; d. Vienna, Aug. 30, 1932. He was in the civil service (1902-25), and began to study music late in life; learned to play the guitar; studied with R. Batka; attended classes in musicology under Adler and Kocirz at the Univ. of Vienna; Dr. phil., 1919, with the dissertation Simon Molitor und die wiener Gitaristik (publ. 1920). He taught the guitar at the Volksschule Urania in Vienna (from 1919) and edited (from 1921) the 'Zeitschrift für die Gitarre' (in 1927 the title was changed to 'Musik im Haus'); edited many works for the guitar. —Publications: R. Batkas Vorschule des Gitarren- und Lautenspiels (1919); Das künstlerische Gitarrenspiel (1920); Die Gitarre, Spezialstudien auf theoretischer Grundlage (6 parts; 1920); F. Carullis Gitarrenschule (10 parts; 1921); Volkstümliche Gitarrenschule (1922); Handbuch der Laute und Gitarre (1926-28).

Zvonař (zvoh'-nahrzh), Joseph Leopold, Czech organist and theorist; b. Kublov, near Prague, Jan. 22, 1824; d. Prague, Nov. 23, 1865. He studied at the Prague School for Organists, and taught there from 1844; also served as church organist. He publ. the first treatise on harmony in the Czech language; contributed articles on Czech music to various publications; publ. a valuable collection of choral arrangements of national songs, Hudební památky české (4 vols.; 1862-64); composed Der Ritt zum Elfenstein for solo voices, chorus, and orch.; a Requiem; piano pieces (Impromptu, Loreley, etc.); men's choruses; songs. His opera Záboj remained unperformed.

Zweers (zwärs), Bernard, Dutch composer; b. Amsterdam, May 18, 1854; d. there, Dec. 9, 1924. He studied at the Amsterdam Cons., and later in Leipzig with Jadassohn; returning to Holland, he became prof. of theory at the Amsterdam Cons. (from 1895). He wrote 3 symphonies; a Kroningscantate for soprano, tenor, chorus, and orch.; St. Nicolaasfeest, children's cantata; Kosmos (Psalm 104) for chorus and orch.; Ons Hollandsch for men's chorus and orch.; church music; songs. —Cf. H. Rutters, Bernard Zweers, in 'Mens en Melodie' (Dec., 1949).

ZWEIG — ZWYSSIG

Zweig, Fritz, conductor; b. Olomouc, Moravia, Sept. 8, 1893. He studied with Schoenberg in Vienna; then devoted himself to opera conducting; was on the staff of the Mannheim Opera (1912-14 and 1919-21); music director at Barmen-Elberfeld (1921-23); then conducted opera in Berlin (1923-33); at the German Opera in Prague (1934-38); then appeared in Paris and London; in 1940 emigrated to America; in 1942 settled in Hollywood as a teacher.

Zwintscher (tsvin'-cher), Bruno, German pianist; b. Ziegenhain, May 15, 1838; d. Oberlössnitz, near Dresden, March 4, 1905. He studied piano with Julius Otto in Dresden and with Moscheles in Leipzig; taught at the Leipzig Cons. from 1875 till 1896; then settled in Dresden as a successful piano teacher. He publ. Technische Studien (a continuation of Plaidy's manual; English transl. by C. H. Porter) and Schule der Ornamentik (also available in English).

Zwyssig (tsvis'-sig), Alberich, Swiss composer; b. Bauen, Nov. 17, 1808; d. in the Cistercian monastery at Mehrerau, Nov. 18, 1854. He entered the Order of the Cistercians in 1826 (giving up his real name, Joseph, for the monastic name Albreich); was Kapellmeister in the monasteries of Wettingen, Zug, Wurmbach, and (shortly before his death) Mehrerau. His Schweizer Psalm for men's chorus a cappella (1841) attained the popularity of a national hymn; he also wrote sacred and secular choruses a cappella and some church music with organ. —Cf. B. Widmann, Alberich Zwyssig als Komponist (Bregenz, 1905); H. Meng, Alberich Zwyssig, 1808-1854; Gedenkschrift (Wettingen, 1954).

